ALEPPO, THE GARDEN CITY OF SYRIA

Aleppo suggests leisure, luxury and beauty to the toil-worn merchant and the travel-weary pilgrim who wend their way northward from the scorching deserts in the southern part of Syria. The word "Aleppo" signifies "milk," and truly the place is with "milk and honey blest," and is indeed "as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land," a veritable oasis in the desert. It comes as a delightful surprise to the traveler from the south who approaches it for the first time. When within a mile of the city he suddenly sees, from the crest of a low, gravelly hill, the entire northern portion of Aleppo looming up, silent and solemn, from the bottom of a shallow, barren valley, or basin. The Aleppo River borders it on the north and irrigates a large area of luxuriant gardens, studded with clusters of stately shade and fruit trees, seemingly the only vegetation visible within a day's journey of Aleppo. Surrounded by a most desolate-looking country, this "garden city" presents to the stranger a majestic picture, with its many thousand buildings of every description; its hundreds of minarets and mosques, glittering in the scorching rays of the sun, and acres of richly cultivated gardens in the foreground.

A huge castle, or citadel, on the crest of a steep, inaccessible height, rises abruptly and phantom-like out of the very heart of Aleppo, towering high above the base of the city, and presents a peculiarly grand and imposing aspect.

This commanding stronghold covers about two acres of ground, is octagonal in shape, and overlooks not only every part of the city, but the entire shallow valley or basin in which Aleppo is situated. A great ditch, about fifty feet deep and at least one hundred feet wide, encircles the hill on which the citadel stands. The outer side of this ditch is a perpendicular wall of solid masonry; the inner side of the moat is formed by the lofty walls of the citadel, which extend two hundred feet above the base of the rocky mound upon which this fortress is built. Access to the latter can be gained only by means of a drawbridge placed on the south side of the fortress. A magnificent arch of Saracenic workmanship, richly ornamented with arabesques, rises high over the gateway of the citadel. Its ponderous iron gate is seldom closed, despite its formidable appearance, as the fortress has not been used in many years as a place of defence, being freely opened to the traveler. Turkish sentinels guard the entrances, but more as a matter of formality and tradition than as a precaution against invasion. The parapets and embattlements have crumbled to pieces in many places, and only a few guns, quite rusty from disuse, and of ancient pattern, mounted on old-fashioned wooden gun-carriages, are seen on the walls. Such has been the appearance of Aleppo to travelers in recent years.

In past times the citadel of Aleppo sustained many a siege and repulsed many an assault. It was considered impregnable, having an almost impassable moat, with walls twelve feet in thickness, surrounding a series of inner walls, like the compartments in a battleship.

During the crusades, Aleppo was a formidable stronghold of the Saracens, having probably had its inception at the beginning of the Mohammedan era. It is better built, and has better paved and wider thoroughfares than the average streets of Syrian, Mesopotamian, Arabian, and Persian towns. Nearly all of the buildings are purely Moslem in style; only a few in the Frankish, or European, quarter have a mingling of Oriental architecture and modern conveniences, such as glass windows, shutters, awnings and balconies.

The population of Aleppo at present is over two hundred thousand, but it bears evidence of having formerly contained a much larger number of inhabitants. As late as 1822, a terrible earthquake destroyed not only the greater part of the famous city, but fully two-thirds of the inhabitants. Heaps of ruins are to be seen in nearly every quarter in and around the city, mute witnesses of that terrible catastrophe. Cholera swept away another large portion of the remaining population during the year 1832, and the cruelly oppressive rule of the Egyptian tyrant, Mehemet Ali, who wrested the whole of Syria from the Turks immediately after the deadly epidemic, held it with an iron grasp till 1840, and continued the misfortunes of the doomed city. In 1865, the ravages of cholera destroyed eighteen thousand lives. Thus, within the short period of forty-three years, Aleppo met with misfortunes that might well have obliterated it from the map, were it not that its wonderful situation in the fertile oasis on the Syrian plain restored it again and again to life and hope.

Some of the most notable revivals of the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, have been at Aleppo, and the ritual in use is a translation from the original Arabic, found preserved in the archives of the Order at Aleppo, Syria.

HISTORY
ALEPPO TEMPLE
ANCIENT ARABIC ORDER, NOBLES OF THE MYSTIC SHRINE

Aleppo Temple was duly organized on June 6, 1883, its charter bearing the following names:

JOSEPH R. GROSE
HENRY E. HOSLEY
FRANK LOCKE
CHARLES E. PIERCE
ALBERT EDGCOMB
BENJAMIN W. DEAN
FREDERICK G. WALBRIDGE

Noble Henry E. Hosley had previously received the Order at the hands of the Imperial Potentate, Walter M. Fleming, in New York, and, having been appointed Deputy for the State of Massachusetts, by his authority, the seven above-named gentlemen were created Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, and constituted into a Temple to be known as Aleppo, with its location in Boston, Mass. On this mission to New York, Noble Hosley was accompanied by Albert Edgcomb and Frank Locke. Owing to a law passed by the Grand Lodge, A. F. & A. M. of Massachusetts, relating to Orders composed of Masons whom they would recognize, and the Order of the Mystic Shrine not being one of them, no formal meetings other than informal gatherings of the Temple were held until October 28, 1885, when in pursuance of a call from Noble Henry E. Hosley, Illustrious Deputy of the State of Massachusetts for the Imperial Council, the above-mentioned Nobles assembled at Odd Fellows Building in the city of Boston and held the first business session of Aleppo Temple. The meeting was called to order by Noble Henry E. Hosley, with Noble Ezra G. Robinson as Recorder. A committee of three, consisting of Nobles Henry E. Hosley, Ezra G. Robinson and Joseph L. White were instructed to prepare a code of By-Laws and report in print at the next session. On motion, the fee for the Order was fixed at $20, and on motion of Noble Erastus H. Doolittle it was voted that the "members of Aleppo Temple are authorized to submit five names each, as candidates for the Order at the next session." A committee was appointed to ascertain the price of costumes and paraphernalia necessary for the rendering of the degree, and report at the next session. It was also voted that a committee of three be appointed to select suitable apartments for the use of the Temple, and report on the same at the next session. At 10:30 o'clock in the evening the meeting adjourned to meet again upon the call of the Potentate.

BOSTON, November 6, 1885: The adjourned session of Aleppo Temple was held in Odd Fellows Building at 7:50 o'clock in the evening, with the following officers present: Potentate Henry E. Hosley and Recorder Ezra G. Robinson. There were also present Nobles Erastus H. Doolittle, Thomas Waterman, Leonard W. Averell, George S. Carpenter, Alfred F. Chapman, Manson Seavey, Joseph R. Grose, Frank Locke, Albert Edgcomb, Frederick G. Walbridge, William A. Bunton, Frank W. Bird, Charles E. Pierce, Justus P. Weston, and Seranus Bowen, who was a member of Mecca Temple. After the reading of the records of the last meeting the Committee on By-Laws reported in print, each Noble having been furnished a printed copy, and the several articles and chapters were freely discussed in regular order, and were adopted, with the date of the sessions fixed as the third Thursday in each month. The following officers were then nominated and elected: Grand Potentate, Noble Henry E. Hosley; Chief Rabban, Noble Thomas Waterman; Assistant Rabban, left vacant; High Priest and Prophet, Noble Leonard M. Averell; Oriental Guide, Noble Erastus H. Doolittle; Treasurer, Noble Albert Edgcomb; Recorder, Noble Ezra G. Robinson; and the following Nobles were elected as trustees: John L. Stevenson, William A. Bunton, George S. Carpenter. Noble Hosley, in behalf of the Committee on Costumes and Paraphernalia, reported progress and submitted some cuts of costumes and estimates for the same, and the committee were given full power to procure everything in the way of paraphernalia that was needed. The report of the Committee on Apartments was laid over until the next session. At 10:20 o'clock P. M. the Temple adjourned, subject to the call of the Potentate.

BOSTON, November 19, 1885: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was held in Encampment Hall, Odd Fellows Building, opening at 7:45 o'clock in the evening, with the following organization: Grand Potentate, Henry E. Hosley; Chief Rabban, Thomas Waterman; Oriental Guide, Erastus H. Doolittle; Treasurer, Albert Edgcomb; High Priest and Prophet, Leonard M. Averell; Recorder, Ezra G. Robinson, and with the following Nobles present: John L. Stevenson, Charles E. Pierce, George S. Carpenter, Alfred E. Chapman, Frank Locke,

Frank W. Bird, William A. Bunton, Frederick G. Walbridge and Joseph R. Grose. After the reading of the records of the last session, Noble Frank Locke, in behalf of the Committee on Apartments, reported a consultation with the chairman of the Board of Trustees of Odd Fellows Building, and that the hall could be secured, with the use of the banquet hall on the same floor, and suitable storage rooms for the costumes, at an expense of $360 per annum, and on motion, the Trustees were authorized to sign the contract. On motion of Noble Charles E. Pierce it was voted that 150 be the maximum number of candidates upon whom the Order be conferred at one time, and that the subject be brought before the Temple at a later hour in the evening. The Recorder then read the following list of candidates who had received and signed applications and who, under the By-Laws, had paid the required fee: Samuel H. Wise, Horace W. Stickney, Eugene H. Richards, H. P. Stearns, E. E. Wells, E. B. Palmer, I. H. Allard, J. W. Blaney, Seneca Sanford, Arthur Fuller, John M. Vennard, Lyman R. Mace, Samuel F. Hubbard, Alexander H. Wood, M. S. P. Pollard, H. W. Huguley, Frank E. Howe, A. B. Babcock, E. B. Wadsworth, Charles H. Porter, G. W. Ellis, E. C. Judd, George H. Allen, Joseph S. Stearns, Frank L. Pratt, George W. Bunton, C. F. Atwood, William Tyner, George J. Lothrop, John D. Gale, Edward Goggins, Albert C. Smith, Benjamin W. Rowell, W. C. Pfaff, Elbridge Blaney, Oscar A. Jones, C. L. Ireson, J. W. Work, F. O. Vegelahn, Otis Eddy, D. L. Hodges, Henry G. Jordan, R. W. Cook, Otis S. Neals, J. M. Gleason, W. H. Lothrop, J. Q. A. Holbrook, George S. Worcester, B. F. Nourse, R. H. Carleton, C. A. Siegemund, Edgar C. Dewey, Job C. Weeks, A. S. Green, E. A. Holton, C. B. Lichtenstein, John Russell, H. J. Seiler, S. A. Bolster, T. F. Temple, Ezra J. Trull, Baylies Wood, and the various petitioners were, upon ballot, duly declared elected. The Recorder and Noble Pierce then repaired to an ante-room and ushered into the Temple the petitioners who were present and entitled to receive the Order, being the sixty-two postulants above named, and the Order was conferred upon them in short form. Having signed the By-Laws they were enrolled as members of Aleppo Temple. The following-named brethren had been elected to receive the Order, but were not present at this session: John P. Hilton, George F. Hewitt, George A. Gillette, R. H. Jenness, J. M. Plummer, Sidney M. Hedges, and J. R. Newman. Upon motion of Noble Erastus H. Doolittle the following resolve was unanimously adopted: "That all notices of whatsoever nature, issued to the Nobles of Aleppo Temple shall be enclosed in an addressed envelope, sealed, and marked 'Personal.'" Noble Frank W. Bird presented a handsome Bible to the Temple and received the thanks of the members for the gift. The meeting was closed at 10:30 o'clock, to meet again upon call of the Potentate.

Boston, December 17, 1885. A regular session of Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., held in Encampment Hall, Odd Fellows Building, opened at 7:50 o'clock with the following organization present: Potentate, Henry E. Hosley; Chief Rabban, Thomas Waterman; Acting Oriental Guide, Charles E. Pierce; High Priest and Prophet, Leonard M. Averell; Recorder, Ezra G. Robinson, and the following Nobles: F. Locke, J. R. Grose, Manson Seavey, F. W. Bird, Geo. S. Carpenter, A. W. Chapman, F. W. Knowles, B. W. Rowell, J. W. Work, W. H. Lothrop, E. O. Dewey, E. A. Holton, M. S. P. Pollard, F. O. Vegelahn, F. S. Pratt, Geo. J. Lothrop, E. Smith Palmer, Samuel H. Wise, H. J. Seiler, S. F. Hubbard, John D. Gale, W. C. Pfaff, J. M. Vennard, S. A. Bolster, E. B. Wadsworth and H. G. Jordan. After the reading and approval of the records, on motion of Noble A. F. Chapman that names of the candidates accepted be included and made a part of the records, the same was agreed upon, and the following list of candidates, who had been accepted under the By-Laws and paid the required fee, was then read by the Recorder: Frank Marshall, Seth Rich, Erastus Colby, F. W. Wise, C. E. Stevens, W. R. H. Stark, George A. Gray, W. B. Wilbur, Geo. O. Townsend, R. H. Jenness, J. M. Plummer, Ambrose Lawrence, George E. Cilley, H. G. Collins, J. B. Rollins, Geo. W. Parker, R. E. Hilliard, F. E. Merriam, Wallace Goodrich, E. A. Wadleigh, C. H. Haines, Fred Alford, J. E. Farrar, J. T. Waterhouse, G. A. Gillette, T. R. Newman, John Post, Jr., Thomas S. Spurr, H. L. Sawyer, E. R. Jenness, George H. Towle, E. T. Nichols, H. C. Wilson, R. A. Warren, W. H. Puffer, E. T. Sumner, Frank Crockett, A. C. Hall, E. C. Smith, L. B. Nichols, H. N. Shepard, H. S. Bunton, T. M. Carter; and upon ballot they were declared elected. The Recorder and Ceremonial Master then repaired to an ante-room and introduced into the Temple the thirty-one postulants there found in waiting and the Order was conferred upon them in short form. A dispensation from the Grand Orient of New York, duly signed and sealed, was read by the Recorder, granting that the election of officers held in November stood good in place of the regular election in December. The Potentate then announced the following list of appointed officers for the ensuing year: First Ceremonial Master, Noble Geo. A. Gillette; Standard Bearer, Noble W. H. Lothrop; Marshal, Noble George S. Carpenter; Director, Noble Frank Locke; Alchemist, Noble Francis W. Bird; Architect, Noble George O. Townsend; Captain of the Guard, Noble William Tyner; Outer Guard, Noble J. Q. A. Holbrook. The officers elected and appointed were duly installed by Noble Joseph R. Grose acting as Installing Officer, assisted by Noble Charles E. Pierce acting as Marshal. The subject of an amendment to the By-Laws was, after some protracted discussion, ordered referred to a committee of three appointed by the Potentate to report at the next session, and Nobles Solomon A. Bolster, Thomas Waterman and John L. Stevenson were appointed on that committee. It was also voted on motion of Noble Samuel H. Wise that the residence of each candidate for the Order be printed upon the published list. A demit was granted to Noble James M. Gleason, and it was voted that the money paid for his dues be refunded to him. There being no further business, the session closed at 10:50, to meet again on January 30, 1886.

FIRST OASIS OF ALEPPO TEMPLE, A. A. O., N. M. S.
Odd Fellows' Building, Boston

BOSTON, January 30, 1886: A regular session was held in Odd Fellows Hall, the following roster of officers present: Grand Potentate, Henry E. Hosley; Chief Rabban, Thomas Waterman; Assistant Rabban, James A. Fox; High Priest, Leonard M. Averell; Oriental Guide, Joseph W. Works; Treasurer, Albert Edgcomb; Recorder, Ezra G. Robinson; First Ceremonial Master, George A. Gillette; Standard Bearer, W. H. Lothrop; Marshal, George S. Carpenter; Director, Frank Locke; Alchemist, F. W. Bird; Architect, George O. Townsend; Captain of the Guard, William Tyner; Outer Guard, J. Q. A. Holbrook; Organist, J. P. Weston. Eighty Nobles were recorded as being present. The Committee on Alterations of By-Laws requested more time, which was granted. The following list of names of those brethren who had been published under the By-Laws, and whose names had not been objected to, was then read by the Recorder: Daniel A. Sutherland, Lynn, Mass.; Charles H. Prentiss, Arlington, Mass.; Joseph H. Foster; Pawtucket, R. I.; Walter Russell, Arlington, Mass.; George Gosling, Pawtucket, R. I.; Ralph W. Shattuck, Arlington, Mass.; John R. Belfield, Pawtucket, R. I.; J. Gilman Waite, Medford, Mass.; Alvin F. Jenks, Pawtucket, R. I.; Benjamin A. Hersey, Medford, Mass.; Stephen W. Jenks, Pawtucket, R. Emerson, E. B. Washburn, F. P. Morris, Clark Rhundhart, E. N. Chapin, R. E. Holmes, H. W. Pope, Orlando Grealen, R. Gray, Jr. J. H. Stewart, W. R. Jernee, Jas. Walker, Dr. H. Bishop, P. M. Whitman, James Wood, J. T. Page, I. W. Cunningham; and C. D. Mills of Pyramid Temple, Bridgeport, Conn. There were then introduced into the Temple eleven candidates, as follows: Joseph H. Foster, George Gosling, J. T. Belfield, Alvin F. Jenks, Stephen W. Jenks, Albert A. Jenks, John J. Cilley, J. F. Bliss, Walter Russell, Ralph W. Shattuck and C. W. Hodgdon, who were duly inducted into the mysteries of the Mystic Shrine and created Nobles of Aleppo Temple, and, having signed the By-Laws, all were enrolled as members of that Temple. The work on this occasion was rendered with suitable robes and complete paraphernalia, superb music, both vocal and instrumental, and every equipment to make complete this most interesting, impressive and beautiful service. At the conclusion of the ceremony, members and visitors repaired to the banquet hall and enjoyed a bountiful collation supplied by Noble H. J. Seiler. This, the first Red Letter Night of Aleppo Temple, was brought to a close at 2:30 o'clock A. M.

BOSTON, February 18, 1886: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was held in Odd Fellows Hall, the Temple being opened at 7:30 P. M., with the full corps of officers in attendance. The Committee on the Alteration of the By-Laws reported as follows:

"The Committee appointed to consider the proposed amendments to the By-Laws of Aleppo Temple have attended to that duty and submit the following report. Strike out the following words near the close of Chapter 1., 'All balloting on petitions for the Order or affiliations shall be unanimous.' Also strike out Articles 2, 3, and 4 of Chapter 5 and substitute in place thereof the following:

"Art. 1.—All applications for the order of affiliation, with the fee accompanying the same, shall be filed with the Recorder who shall, at least fourteen days before a stated session, send by mail, in a sealed envelope marked 'personal,' the name, occupation and residence of each applicant to each member of the Temple.

"Art. 2.—There shall be elected by ballot at the first stated session after the adoption of these amendments by the Temple and approved by the Imperial Council, and at every stated annual session thereafter, a committee of seven members, four of whom shall constitute a quorum, who shall constitute the Committee on Applications. The Recorder shall send to each member of this Committee, the name, occupation and residence of each applicant for the orders or affiliations as soon as such application is filed with him. The Committee shall make a thorough and careful inquiry into the character and qualification of the applicant. On the evening of the stated session following the expiration of the fourteen days' notice mentioned in Article 1 of this Chapter, the Committee shall meet and take a secret ballot on the name of each applicant, and the names of all those who receive a unanimous ballot shall be immediately reported to the Temple as qualified to be initiated into the Order, and each applicant shall receive the orders without further ballot. The names of each applicant against whom one ballot or more was cast, rejecting him, shall be reported to the Temple as rejected, and no further proceedings shall be taken on his application. Any applicant who shall have been accepted as aforesaid and who does not present himself for initiation within six months thereafter, shall not be eligible to receive the orders without making a new application and receiving a unanimous ballot as aforesaid.

"Art. 3.—Any member of the Order may communicate his objection to any member of said Committee, and the disclosure of the name of the party objecting by the Committee, or any member thereof, shall be deemed a gross violation of the rules of the Order, and subject him or them to expulsion from the Order. If such objections or reasons therefor are in writing, the Committee shall burn said writing immediately after the ballot has been declared in the committee room, and each member of the Committee present shall see that it is so done.

JOHN L. STEVENSON,
THOMAS WATERMAN,
Committee."

On motion, a vote was taken and action on same delayed until the next session. An announcement was made that a deputation from Palestine Temple, of Newport, R. I., was in the ante-room, to pay a fraternal visit, and the Grand Potentate appointed as a Committee to receive the guests,

Nobles Joseph R. Grose, Erastus H. Doolittle and Edgar O. Dewey, who retired and introduced into the Temple thirty-six members of Palestine Temple, headed by Noble Clarence B. Mason, Grand Potentate of Palestine Temple. They were received by Potentate Hosley, and cordially welcomed; Noble Mason responded gracefully, after which they were invited to seats in the East. The following were elected to receive the Order: R. L. Somes, Theodore L. Southack, Theodore L. Babcock, C. F. Stoddard, William B. Whitcomb, Ed. P. Rowe, H. O. Fairbanks, Frank H. Mudge, W. H. Bockelmann of South Boston; Dr. Harris, Dr. F. Brick and J. A. Lorren all of Worcester; G. B. Buckington, John A. Lowe, Thomas Piper, E. E. Longley, J. S. Lovejoy, A. M. Powell, H. H. Marshall, S. E. Hildreth, T. D. Gard, Enoch Earl, Chas. B. Pratt, C. B. Whiting, George Tower, Charles Chapin, O. L. Taft, A. F. Prentiss, M. M. Allard, and James Pursey, all of Worcester. The Order was then conferred informally upon the following-named brethren: C. F. Stoddard, W. B. Whitcomb, W. H. LaPointe, R. T. Bicknell, Geo. W. Frye, Frank S. Harris, A. T. Jenness, Leavitt Bates, Wm. Humphrey, T. H. Humphrey, Geo. W. Fay, Z. L. Bicknell and H. H. Marshall. There were then introduced Theodore L. Southack, W. C. Babcock, Frank H. Mudge, Harry D. Reed, Isaac W. Giles, Ed. A. Jones, Perry H. Dow, Thomas D. Gard, and James Pursey, when the Order was conferred upon them in full form and with complete ceremonial. At the conclusion of the work all present repaired to the banquet hall where an hour was pleasantly passed in listening to short speeches and enjoying the creature comforts that had been abundantly provided.

Boston, March 18, 1886: A regular session was held in Odd Fellows Hall, the Temple being opened at 7:10 in the evening, all the officers being present. Upon motion of Noble B. W. Rowell, the amendments to the By-Laws, submitted by the Committee at the last session, were, after discussion, adopted by vote, thirty-seven for the amendment and nine against it. Noble B. W. Rowell offered the following amendments to the By-Laws:

"Art. 2, Chap. 5.—Repeal the words, 'And the member receiving such list may, if he have objections to any person or persons, erase the name of such person or persons, and forward the same to the Recorder. If such objection be not received by the Recorder within ten days of said list, the person or persons will be entitled to receive a petition for the Order.'

"Repeal all of Art. 3, Chapter 5.

"Art. 4, Chap. 5. Repeal the words, 'No person shall be furnished with a petition for this Order until the action required by Article 2, Chapter 5, shall have been had,' and"—

These were read and ordered to be printed. Among the pleasing incidents of the evening was the announcement that Noble Sam Briggs of Cleveland, Ohio, the Imperial Potentate of the Imperial Council for North America, was in the anteroom. Noble John L. Stevenson was appointed as a Committee to retire and escort him into the Temple, where he was received and most cordially welcomed and invited to a seat in the Orient. The Recorder then read the list of candidates who had been elected under the By-Laws as follows: J. B. Holden, Lynn; Willis M. Ranney, South Framingham; B. F. Reed, Waltham; Joseph B. The following candidates were then introduced and the Order conferred upon them in short form; Joshua B. Holden, Benj. F. Reed, Edward Kakas, Chas. P. Lauriat, Simon Alghieri, I. N. Marshall, S. W. Huntley, J. L. Chapman, Benj. A. Hersey, H. N. Shepard, S. M. Hedges, J. P. Hilton, C. W. Geer, G. W. Bowker; after which the Ceremonial Master and Oriental Guide introduced Willis M. Ranney, W. S. Whiting, F. G. King, H. F. Ingersoll, Geo. E. Clifford, Frank I. Nichols, H. O. Fairbanks, A. H. Evans, J. H. Bowker and Frank B. Foster. The Order was conferred upon them in full and complete form and in accordance with the Ancient Arabic custom, and having signed the By-Laws, they were enrolled as members of Aleppo Temple, after which the Temple adjourned to the banquet hall and enjoyed a bountiful collation, interspersed with short speeches. Selections by the quartette added to the pleasure of a delightful evening.

Boston, April 15, 1886: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was held in Odd Fellows Hall. The Temple was declared open for business at 7:15 o'clock P. M., with all the officers present. A communication from the Imperial Recorder was read by the Recorder declaring that the amendments creating an Elective Committee of Seven on Applications were unconstitutional, and it was "voted, that this communication be placed on file by the Recorder." The following list of candidates, who had been accepted under the By-Laws, was read by the Recorder: Fred B. Pierce, Boston; Samuel H. Walker, and B. F. Kingsbury of Taunton; Chas. T. Witt, Boston; A. L. Bliss, Taunton; James Hatch, Boston; Charles E. Burrill, Lynn; Hayes Lougee, Chelsea; Frank D. Thayer, East Weymouth; S. A. Bowstwick, Chelsea; T. J. Evans, E. Weymouth; Thos. W. Hough, Malden; Wm. H. Burroughs, Malden; Granville M. Thomas, Stoneham; Dr. H. F. Copeland, South Abington; Frank P. Watson, South Framingham; L. S. Kidder, Lowell; Fred Baylies Howard, Brockton; Geo. S. Hale, Worcester; Walter Bradford, Brockton; Amos Atkinson, Worcester, and Zaccheus Sherman of Taunton. Upon ballot, they were declared elected. Amendments to the By-Laws, 1, 2, 3 and 4, borne upon the notice as published, were then accepted by a vote of 42 to 3, and amendment 5 was declared rejected. The amendments offered by Noble B. W. Rowell at the last session were then read by the Recorder and adopted. On motion of Noble Erastus H. Doolittle, it was voted that a committee of three be appointed to consider the expediency of changing the time of sessions to bi-monthly. The Order was then conferred, in abbreviated form, upon James Hatch, H. A. Hatch, Charles F. Burrill and A. L. Bliss, after which the Order was conferred in full form, with complete ceremony by the Grand Potentate, upon Fred B. Pierce, Granville M. Thomas, Frank P. Watson, F. B. Howard, Walter Bradford, F. D. Thayer and Thomas J. Evans, assisted by the two Rabbans and High Priest, after which, all present repaired to the banquet hall. The session was closed at 11:30 o'clock.

Boston, April 30, 1886. A Special Session of Aleppo Temple was held in Odd Fellows Building, being declared open for business at 8:00 o'clock, P. M. The petition of Henry E. Dixey for admission into the Order was read by the Recorder, and ballot being taken, he was unanimously elected. Brother Dixey was then introduced, and in the briefest possible manner the Order was conferred upon him. Having signed the By-Laws he was then enrolled as a member of Aleppo Temple. Dispensation for this Special Session had been granted by the Imperial Potentate. On motion it was "voted that the sessions of this Temple he held hereafter in the months of September, Novemer, December, January, March and May of each year." It was also "voted, that the notices of sessions sent out by the Recorder shall bear the names of all candidates and that the compensation for the Recorder shall be such a sum as the Finance Committee may determine." It was also "voted, that Article 1 of Chapter 5 be amended to read that 'all applications shall be referred to a committee of three to be appointed by the Grand Potentate; said committee shall report in person or in writing to a Recorder'." Article 3 of Chapter 5 was amended so as to read, "Any person elected to receive the Order and not presenting himself for three stated sessions shall not be eligible to apply again until after six months have elapsed." On motion it was "voted, that the Representatives to the Imperial Council be instructed to request that the Grand Constitution, Statutes and Regulations of the Imperial Council be changed so that it will require more than one black-ball to reject." The Grand Potentate announced the demise of Noble 'Ezja J. Trull, who passed to the Unseen Temple, April 29, 1886, at 4:00 A. M.,—and, after some eulogistic remarks upon his life and character as a man, a Mason and a Noble, it was, on motion of the Chief Rabban, "voted, that a committee of three be appointed to draft a set of resolutions of respect to his memory to report at the next session, that a copy of same be sent to the family, and that a suitable floral design be procured and sent on the day of the funeral." The session adjourned at 10:45 o'clock, P. M.

Boston, May 20, 1886: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was held in Odd Fellows Building, being opened at 7:30 P. M., with all the officers present. The first business of importance was the reading of a notification from the Grand Orient declaring the full Code of By-Laws, as revised at the Special Session, duly approved. The Recorder then read the following list of aspirants for the Order, and all were, upon ballot, declared elected. The Order was then conferred in brief and condensed form upon Henry S. Cole, E. S. PAST POTENTATES OF AGEPHO TEMPLE

BOSTON, May 30, 1894: The session was held in Music Hall. Owing to the death of Noble Frank Locke, Representative to the Imperial Council, dispensation was received from the Imperial Potentate authorizing the Temple to hold an election to fill the vacancy, which resulted in the election of Noble Caleb Saunders. Upon motion of Noble Caleb Saunders the following committee was appointed: Benjamin W. Rowell, Fred N. Spring, Charles H. Porter and Andrew Bunton, having power to arrange either for a session of Aleppo Temple in some city or town other than Boston, or an excursion. During the evening Noble Benjamin W. Rowell, on behalf of Noble John H. Collamore, presented Noble Freeman C. Hersey with a beautiful gold watch in token of the care and attention paid to Noble Frank Locke during his sickness. An amendment was offered to the By-Laws, making the fee fifty dollars for membership, instead of twenty-five, and the yearly dues five dollars instead of two dollars, which, under the law, was laid over until the next session. There were eighty-four initiates. The traditional banquet followed the session.

BOSTON, November 5, 1894: The session was held in Music Hall. Upon motion, the amendments proposed at the last session were indefinitely postponed. At this session it was ordered that "a committee of five be appointed to whom shall be referred all motions or resolutions appropriating money for charitable purposes, and no action shall be taken upon such motion or resolution, except upon report of such committee." An invitation was received from the officers of Kora Temple, at Lewiston, Maine, to be present at a special session of Kora Temple for work, at City Hall, Portland, Maine, Tuesday, November 25th, and it was voted to accept the invitation. There were ninety-five initiates.

BOSTON, December 27, 1894: The Annual Session was held in Horticultural Hall, Tremont Street, Boston. Twenty-one candidates were initiated. The election of officers resulted as follows: Potentate, Caleb Saunders; Chief Rabban, Frederick H. Spring; Assistant Rabban, James W. Hinckley; High Priest and Prophet, James A. Fox; Oriental Guide, James A. Davis; Treasurer, Joseph W. Work; Recorder, Benjamin W. Rowell; Trustees, Joseph L. White, A. Frank Welch, E. F. Lewis; and Representatives to the Imperial Council, Benjamin W. Rowell, Thomas Waterman, James A. Fox and Charles H. Porter. The officers were installed by Past Potentate James A. Fox, and at the close of the session the Nobles were treated to an enjoyable entertainment in charge of the Director, assisted by Noble Frank Stone. The session closed with a banquet.

BOSTON, February 20, 1895: The session was held in Music Hall, and there were sixty-one initiates. On motion, a committee consisting of the Potentate, the Rabbans, and "such others as the Potentate might appoint," was selected to have "such entertainment as in their judgment seemed advisable, to raise a fund for the purpose of entertaining the members of the Imperial Council at Nantasket Beach in September, next." At the adjournment of the meeting a banquet was much enjoyed.

BOSTON, May 7, 1895: The session was held in Music Hall. On motion, it was voted, "that the Committee appointed to entertain the Imperial Council at their twenty-first Annual Session at Nantasket Beach in September, 1895, be authorized to draw on the treasury for such sums of money as, in their judgment, shall be necessary to defray the expenses of the same." There were 124 initiates, and 2,000 Nobles in attendance.

BOSTON, September 30, 1895: The Session was held in Music Hall. A communication was received from the Imperial Recorder of the Imperial Council, as follows:

"To the Officers and Members of Aleppo Temple. Illustrious Nobles: The following Preamble and Resolutions were unanimously passed at the Twenty-first Annual Session of the Imperial Council at Nantasket Beach, Mass., September 3, 1895. 'Whereas:—The hospitable and gracious manner in which we have been received and entertained by Aleppo Temple at Boston, merits recognition by the Imperial Council; therefore be it Resolved, that we hereby extend to Aleppo Temple our heartfelt thanks for their kindness and hospitality, and for the beautiful example they have given us of the genuine fraternity of our Order.

Fraternally yours,
B. W. Rowell, Imperial Recorder.
Attest."

There were eighty-three initiates. A delectable collation was served at the close of the session.

BOSTON, December 16, 1895: The Annual Session of Aleppo Temple was held in Masonic Hall, East Boston. The Recorder reported a membership of 2,762, a gain for the year of 259. The Committee on Entertainment of Imperial Council at the twenty-first Annual Session, at Nantasket, reported an expenditure of $3,290.36. The Committee on Charity recommended that the sum of $500 be appropriated and expended under the direction of the officers during the Christmas season. The election of officers resulted in the following: Potentate, Caleb Saunders; Chief Rabban, Frederick H. Spring; Assistant Rabban, James A. Davis; High Priest and Prophet, James A. Fox; Oriental Guide, James S. Blake; Treasurer, Joseph W. Work; Recorder, Benjamin W. Rowell. Representatives to the Imperial Council, Benjamin W. Rowell, James Fox, Thomas Waterman, Charles H. Porter; and Trustees of the Temple, Joseph L. White, Albion F. Welch and Edward H. Wise. The officers were installed by Past Potentate James A. Fox. There were fifty-six initiates. There was a banquet at the close of the Temple.

BOSTON, February 26, 1896: The session was held in Music Hall. The following letter was received from Rev. Edward A. Horton, acknowledging the receipt from the Temple of check for $150 toward the work of the North End Union.

"My Dear Sirs:

"I hereby acknowledge with many thanks the check for $150 toward the work of the North End Union, from Aleppo Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This good redounds to the high credit of your fraternal association, and will go far to help the excellent philanthropic work at the North End Union under the wise guidance of Mr. Samuel F. Hubbard, I let me assure you that the money will be wisely applied.

"This action on your part is very solid proof that your organization means to substantiate its principles by adequate fruits.

"On behalf of the Directors,

Sincerely yours,

Edward A. Horton."

Noble Charles H. Porter tendered his resignation as Representative to the Imperial Council and Noble Caleb Saunders was elected to fill the vacancy. Noble Fred Abraham presented the Temple with a magnificent hubble-bubble, or Turkish pipe, and there was received from Mecca Temple a gift of a group picture of the Divan of that Temple. There were thirty-eight initiates.

BOSTON, May 13, 1896: The session was held in Mechanics Hall, Huntington Avenue. Because of his anticipated absence to Europe during the Annual Session of the Imperial Council, Noble James A. Fox tendered his resignation, and Noble James A. Davis was elected to fill the vacancy. There were sixty-nine initiates. The session closed at four o'clock in the afternoon, and the officers and members of the Temple, together with their ladies and children, gathered in Mechanics Building and enjoyed a delightful succession of festivities, an entertainment of more than usual merit having been provided especially for the children. At 6:30 o'clock, cake and ice cream were provided for the children and ladies. At 7:30 P. M., 353 ladies, consisting of the wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of the Nobles, were initiated into the mysteries of the Order of the Daughters of Isis, under the protection of Aleppo Temple. After the ceremonies of initiation were concluded an entertainment was given in the main hall of the building, which was much enjoyed by the 1,400 who were present.

BOSTON, November 5, 1896: The session was held in Music Hall. Among the distinguished visitors present was Noble Harrison Dingman of Washington, D. C., Imperial Potentate of the Imperial Council for North America, who was received and cordially welcomed into the Temple and accorded the honors due his exalted station. At this session Aleppo Temple was honored by a delegation of twenty-three Nobles from Mecca Temple, who were cordially received and welcomed. The close of the session was followed by the usual banquet.

GRAND CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

Over 8,000 Nobles and ladies attended the services on Sunday, and the spectators and press were profuse in their commendation of the brilliancy and magnitude of the ceremony.

BOSTON, June 24, 1907: The session was held in Mechanics Building, and there were 363 initiates. The session was followed by a grand parade of the Nobles of Aleppo Temple, with delegations from Kora, Mount Sinai, Bektash and Melha Temples, to the number of 7,000. At the finish of the parade a banquet was spread in Mechanics Building, in which all participated, and it was a grand and glorious occasion.

BOSTON, August 31, 1907: The session was held in Huntington Chambers, Huntington Avenue. There were twenty-five initiates. The Temple was then closed, when all present, to the number of 215, went by train to Weirs, N. H., where the annual outing was held.

BOSTON, November 11, 1907: The session was held in Mechanics Hall, Huntington Avenue. On motion of Noble Daniel W. Lawrence, it was ordered that the Treasurer of the Temple be paid $300 per annum for his services. On motion of Noble Lafayette G. Blair it was voted that a committee of five be appointed to procure and present to Noble Charles C. Henry, Potentate, a suitable testimonial in appreciation of his labor and success in that office. The committee appointed consisted of Nobles Lafayette G. Blair, James S. Blake, Everett C. Benton, Charles H. Porter and Samuel Hauser. A committee, consisting of J. Harvey Young, Daniel W. Lawrence, Charles D. Burrage, William H. Preble and James Downs, was appointed to nominate officers for the ensuing year. On motion of the Recorder it was voted that $5,000, in the hands of the Treasurer, be transferred to the Trustees of the Permanent Fund. There were 165 initiates. The session was largely attended, 3,000 members being present and attending the banquet which followed.

BOSTON, December 31, 1907: The session was held in Mechanics Hall, Huntington Avenue, and there were 238 initiates. An amendment to Article 11, Section 8 of the By-Laws was offered, as follows:

> "The annual report of the Treasurer shall contain a detailed statement of receipts and expenditures for the year. Any member in good standing shall, upon request and reasonable notice, be entitled to a statement from the Treasurer of any expenditure or expenditures made since the date of the last annual report."

The Potentate appointed a committee to whom the amendment should be referred for consideration and report, said committee consisting of Past Potentate Caleb Saunders, Nobles Lafayette G. Blair and William H. Preble. Noble Plouff offered a motion that the Nobles vote by ballot upon the question of whether the Rathskeller should be abolished, one ballot bearing the words, "Shall the Rathskeller be abolished? Yes," and the other, "Shall the Rathskeller be abolished? No." Upon the question whether the resolution be considered by the Temple, a ballot was taken, and it was decided, by an overwhelming majority, that the Temple would not allow the ballot to be taken. The Recorder's report showed a membership of 5,693, a gain of 970 for the year. The Treasurer's report showed receipts with a balance on hand of $65,623.05; expenditures of $50,432.82; paid to the Permanent Fund as per vote, $5,000; paid Permanent Fund for Life Members, $2,920, making a total of $58,352.82; cash on hand, $7,270.23. The Trustees reported the assets of the Temple, cash in the hands of the Treasurer, cash in the hands of the Trustees in securities, dues from members, etc., $59,739.12; a gain in the assets of the Temple of $10,439.34. The election of officers resulted in the following: Potentate, Charles C. Henry of Wellesley Hills; Chief Rabban, Charles A. Estey of East Boston; Assistant Rabban, George A. Shackford of Reading; High Priest and Prophet, James S. Blake of Brookline; Oriental Guide, Walter W. Morrison of Winthrop; Treasurer, Joseph W. Work of Newton; Recorder, Benjamin W. Rowell of Lynn; Trustee of the Funds for three years, J. Harvey Young. Representatives to the Imperial Council: Benjamin W. Rowell of Lynn; James S. Blake of Brookline, Charles C. Henry of Wellesley Hills, and George Bleiler, Jr., of Roslindale. The committee appointed for that purpose then presented to Charles C. Henry a testimonial in recognition of his services to the Temple, consisting of a beautiful hall clock, which was most gracefully acknowledged by the recipient. Vaudeville acts and other stunts were then witnessed by nearly 4,000 members, and were followed by the annual banquet.

BOSTON, February 25, 1908: The session was held in Mechanics Hall, Huntington Avenue. On motion of Noble Herbert M. Didge it was ordered, "that the Potentate of Aleppo Temple be authorized to expend such sums of the moneys of the Temple as should be necessary for the purpose of representing the Temple at the 34th Annual Session of the Imperial Council at St. Paul, Minn., in July next." The committee, to whom was referred the amendment to Article 11, Section 8 of the By-Laws, submitted a report that legislation on the subject was inexpedient; the report was accepted and the recommendation therein contained was unanimously adopted. There were thirty-seven initiates. At the close of the Temple, the annual banquet was attended by 2,500 Nobles.

BOSTON, May 21, 1908: The session was held in Mechanics Hall, Huntington Avenue. On motion of Past Potentate Caleb Saunders, it was unanimously voted that a committee of five be appointed to arrange for an outing in August next. On motion of Noble Everett C. Benton it was voted that the sum of $500, payable at the rate of $100 per year, be donated to the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, to be used for the purposes of the Masonic Home. There were ninety initiates. At the close of the session of the Temple the usual banquet was served.

BOSTON, August 8, 1908: The session was held in Huntington Chambers, Huntington Avenue. There were seventy-seven initiates. At the close of the Temple the Nobles, numbering 471, proceeded to the South Station and boarded the train for Providence, where the steamer 'Warwick' was in waiting to convey them to Newport, R. I., returning to Field's Point, on the Providence River, where a Rhode Island clambake had been provided.

BOSTON, November 9, 1908: The session was held in Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue. There were seventeen initiates. At the close of the session a banquet was served.

ELECTIVE OFFICERS 1908–1909

BOSTON, December 15, 1908: The session was held in Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue. The report of the Recorder showed a membership of 6,075, a gain of 382 members for the year. cash in the hands of the Treasurer, cash securities in the hands of the Trustees, due from members, and invested in paraphernalia, $66,169.76, making a net gain of $1,591.70. The choice of officers resulted in the unanimous re-election of the incumbents of the preceding year. The Potentate made the following appointments: First Ceremonial Master, James D. Robertson; Second Ceremonial Master, Joseph A. Bryant; Marshal, George A. Carpenter. Past Potentate Charles C. Henry, then, in the name of the Temple, presented to Noble Charles A. Estey the regulation Past Potentate's jewel, which Noble Estey received in his usual pleasant and appropriate manner. Potentate Estey, also, in behalf of the members of the Arab Patrol, presented to Noble Clarence Knowlton, the Captain of the Patrol, a Shrine emblem in token of the appreciation of the members of the Patrol of his untiring efforts in bringing the members thereof to a condition of perfection in the drills and work of that body. There were sixty-five initiates. The labors of the Temple being completed, it was closed, when a session of merriment was much enjoyed by all. The annual banquet was pronounced "the best ever," and the session, one replete with harmony and good will.

BOSTON, March 25, 1910: The session was held in Mechanics Hall, Huntington Avenue. There were sixty-five initiates. A banquet followed at the close of the session.

BOSTON, May 12, 1910: The session was held in Mechanics Hall, Huntington Avenue. On motion of Past Potentate Charles C. Henry it was voted that the Temple hold an outing of three days, preferably over Labor Day, to comprise Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and that a committee be appointed to have charge of the outing. There were seventy initiates. At the close of the Temple there was a vaudeville entertainment followed by a banquet.

BOSTON, August 19, 1910: The session was held in Huntington Chambers Hall, Huntington Avenue. On motion it was voted, "that the Potentate be authorized to arrange a Shriner's Day for the Boston Floating Hospital, and to have full power as regards the expenditure of the funds necessary for that purpose." Imperial Potentate Fred A. Hines was, upon ballot, elected as the first Honorary Member of Aleppo Temple. There were sixty-four initiates. At the adjournment of the session the annual outing was enjoyed in a sail down the harbor, in the steamer "South Shore," and sports at Bass Point, Nahant.

five aspirants. Seventy-five aspirants were received at this session, and had the Order conferred upon them. The session was attended by 3,500 Nobles, and the manner in which the work of the Temple was conducted was commended by all present. At the close of the work a vaudeville show was enjoyed. During the evening a banquet was served continuously. Following is the interesting report submitted to the Imperial Council by Imperial Potentate Fred A. Hines, describing his delightful visit with Aleppo Temple.

"Promptly at 10 o'clock on the morning of the 29th of May, there arrived at the hotel, B. W. Rowell, Imperial Recorder; Charles A. Estey, Illustrious Potentate; Charles C. Henry, Past Illustrious Potentate; J. S. Blake, Past Illustrious Potentate; George S. Shackford, Chief Rabban, and the following Nobles: Francis H. Appleton, Ezra O. Winsor, C. E. Holman, Roy A. Faye, William Spottiswoode, Jr., Myron Smith, F. W. Palmer and Frank Haley, with three automobiles. We then started on our way for Noble Rowell's bungalow, Crows' Nest, in West Peabody, on the North Shore. Owing to a new law, there were some small disappointments on the way, but upon arriving at the bungalow we found the trees decorated with American flags, Shrine flags, banners bearing the words 'Welcome,' 'Glad-U-Kum,' etc., but when ushered inside—there was the welcome.

"I never had thought Ben was in any sense an 'old woman,' but if there is any better cook in the New England States, I shall immediately declare myself from Missouri. That clam chowder, those steamed clams, and that chicken, etc., etc.—delicious is no name for it, and if any one present had dared to say that he did not enjoy himself, he would never have lived to tell the tale. A delightful spot, good things to eat, splendid company, what more could you ask?

"During the dinner, your Imperial Potentate was presented with a magnificent loving cup, which will go down to posterity as an evidence of the good fellows who met that Sunday at the Crow's Nest.

"It is unnecessary to say that we remained there as long as we could; then an auto drive to the Cliff Club, Marblehead Neck, and from there to the Point Shirley Club, Winthrop Beach, where, it seemed to me, an unnecessary luncheon was served. When, at a late hour, we returned to the Hotel Brunswick, we were quite ready for that period of rest and repose which must be vouchsafed us all."

BOSTON, September 2, 1911: A regular session was held as per notice, in Huntington Chambers, Huntington Avenue, Saturday, September 1, at 10:00 o'clock in the forenoon. The Order was conferred at this session upon fifty aspirants, and at the close of the Temple, 150 Nobles took the train for the Weirs, N. H., where a three days' outing was enjoyed.

BOSTON, November 10, 1911: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was held in Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, all the officers being present in their respective stations at 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Waivers of jurisdiction were granted to Palestine Temple, Providence, R. I., over three aspirants and to Melha Temple of Springfield, Mass., over one. Illustrious Potentate Charles A. Estey then announced the presence of Illustrious Noble John Frank Treat, Imperial Potentate of the Imperial Council, A. A. O., N. M. S., for North America, and appointed as a committee to retire and escort the Imperial Potentate into the Temple, Illustrious Noble Benjamin W. Rowell, Imperial Recorder, Chairman; Illustrious James S. Blake; Illustrious Joseph W. Work, and all the Past Potentates, together with Nobles J. Albert Blake and Lafayette G. Blair, who retired under escort of the Arab Patrol. Noble Rowell duly presented the Imperial Potentate to the Illustrious Potentate who extended to Noble Treat a cordial greeting, inviting him to a seat on his right. The response of Imperial Potentate Treat to the welcome of the Illustrious Potentate was heartily applauded. Forty aspirants were then introduced and conducted across the "hot sands," receiving the Order in due form and with complete ceremonial. The work of the Temple was highly commended by the Imperial Potentate, who addressed the Nobles at length. During the evening a continuous banquet was served.

BOSTON, December 29, 1911: The Annual Session of Aleppo Temple was held in Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, all the officers being present in their respective stations. The reports of the Recorder, Treasurer, Trustees of the Permanent Fund and Auditors were submitted and approved. The membership was reported as 6,454, a gain of eighty-eight for the year. The Committee on Nominations having rendered their report, the following officers were elected: Potentate, George A. Shackford; Chief Rabban, Walter W. Morrison; Assistant Rabban, Francis H. Appleton; High Priest and Prophet, James S. Blake; Oriental Guide, James D. Robertson; Treasurer, Jospeh W. Work; Recorder, Benjamin W. Rowell; Trustee for three years, Charles H. Porter; Auditors, George H. Allen, Augustus C. Jordan and Thomas R. Neath: Representatives to the Imperial Council, James S. Blake, Charles A. Estey, George A. Shackford, Charles C. Henry and Benjamin W. Rowell, Emeritus Member of the Imperial Council. The officers were then installed in their respective offices by Past Potentate Frederick H. Spring, assisted by Past Potentate Charles C. Henry, acting as Marshal. Seventy-six aspirants were then conducted over the "hot sands," and created Nobles of Aleppo Temple. The Temple was then closed, after which the members enjoyed a series of vaudeville acts, followed by the customary banquet.

BOSTON, March 28, 1912: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was held in Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, at 6 o'clock in the afternoon, all the officers being present in their respective stations. Request for waivers of jurisdiction by Palestine Temple, of Providence, R. I., over ten aspirants, was, on motion, refused. A request for waiver of jurisdiction over five aspirants resident at Fall River, Mass., was granted. Noble Charles A. Estey having resigned as representative to the Imperial Council, Noble Henry B. Perkins, upon ballot, was elected to fill the vacancy. Two hundred and forty applications for the Order were received, and, upon ballot, they were elected, two hundred and thirty-one of whom presented themselves and were conducted over the "hot sands" and constituted members of Aleppo Temple. There were also two Nobles elected to membership. Previous to the conferring of the Order a delegation from Oriental Temple of Troy, N. Y., was escorted into the hall, consisting of the Potentate, several Past Potentates and seventy-four members, who were most cordially received and welcomed by the Potentate. A large delegation of Kora Temple, from Lewiston, Me., about a hundred in number, were present and cordially welcomed by the Potentate of the Temple. At the conclusion of the conferring of the Order, a vaudeville entertainment was enjoyed by the Nobles present. The Tellers reported an attendance of nearly 5,500.

BOSTON, June 5, 1912: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was opened in Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, at 6 o'clock in the afternoon, by Potentate George A. Shackford, assisted by the full corps of elective and appointive officers and the Arab Patrol. Waivers of jurisdiction were granted to Palestine Temple of Providence, R. I., over two aspirants, and to Melha Temple of Springfield, Mass., over one aspirant. On motion of Noble Edward H. Wise, it was voted that the Potentate have power to appoint a committee with full authority to make arrangements for the annual outing. Applications were received from 139 aspirants, who were elected at this session, of whom 135 were present, and eight others elected at previous meetings. Thus 143 were led across the "hot sands" and invested with the Order of the Mystic Shrine. At the close of the session the Nobles witnessed a pleasing vaudeville performance

BOSTON, August 12, 1912: A regular session was held in Huntington Chambers Hall, 30 Huntington Avenue. The session was opened by Potentate George A. Shackford, assisted by the full corps of officers, at 9:00 A. M. Waiver of jurisdiction was granted to Palestine Temple, Providence, R. I., over one aspirant, resident at Fall River, Mass. Applications were received from seventy-three aspirants, upon whom the Order was conferred by communication. Three Nobles were elected to membership in Aleppo Temple. The session was closed at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when 653 Nobles repaired to the South Station and, by special train over the New York, New Haven and Hartford route, proceeded to Providence, R. I., where they were met by a band of music and escorted to the steamer "Warwick." Upon boarding the steamer, a bountiful lunch was found in readiness. The trip down the river to Newport, R. I., was one of much pleasure. At Newport the Atlantic fleet of the United States Navy was found assembled, and after saluting the various ships, the Nobles returned to Rocky Point, where a clambake was served. The steamer "Warwick" was then boarded for the return trip at 6:15 o'clock, arriving in Providence at 7:30, where the band was dismissed, when all took the train for Boston, arriving at 9:15 P. M.

BOSTON, November 10, 1912: On this date Noble John F. Treat of Fargo, North Dakota, who was then the Imperial Potentate, made an official visit to Aleppo Temple. On the afternoon of that day he was met at the train by the Reception Committee appointed by the Potentate of Aleppo Temple, consisting of Past Potentate James S. Blake and Joseph W. Work, and escorted to the Hotel Touraine. From there he was taken to the Mechanics Building, to the session, receiving a most hearty welcome from Imperial Recorder Benjamin W. Rowell and Illustrious Potentate Charles A. Estey, who welcomed him with brief speeches, to which Noble Treat gracefully responded. Noble Treat tarried with the committee and some of the members of Aleppo Temple for two days. On the day after the session of the Temple he was taken on an automobile ride to the bungalow of B. W. Rowell, at West Peabody, called "Crow's Nest," where he was entertained with a dinner given by Recorder Rowell, and after dinner, was presented, in the name of the Temple, with a beautiful silver loving cup. The day was happily spent, and at its conclusion Noble Treat was taken on an automobile ride around the North Shore Drive to the Point Shirley Club, where he was tendered a sumptuous banquet.

BOSTON, November 15, 1912: A regular session was opened in Mechanics Hall, Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, at 6:30 o'clock in the afternoon by Potentate George A. Shackford. Waivers of jurisdiction were granted to Palestine Temple, over one aspirant; and to Bektash Temple of Concord, N. H., over one aspirant, resident at Chelsea, Mass. At this session Noble William J. Cunningham, Imperial Potentate, was elected to honorary membership, as also was Noble William G. Williams of Mecca Temple. Upon motion of Past Potentate Charles A. Estey, it was voted, "that a committee of three be appointed to procure and present, at the Annual Session, a Past Potentate's jewel to George A. Shackford, Potentate of the Temple." The Illustrious Potentate announced that he had been informed that there was in waiting Noble William J. Cunningham, Imperial Potentate of the Imperial Council, A. A. O., N. M. S., for North America, who was present to pay an official and fraternal visit to the Temple; and he appointed as a committee, to retire under the escort of the Arab Patrol who presented and introduced this distinguished Noble, all the Past Potentates present, with Noble James S. Blake as Chairman. Noble Blake performed the duty assigned to him in his usual impressive manner, when the Imperial Potentate was duly welcomed and enthusiastically received by all present. Noble Cunningham was accompanied by Noble William G. Williams, Director of Mecca Temple of New York. Later in the evening, Noble J. Putnam Stevens, Imperial Assistant Rabban of the Imperial Council, was also introduced and welcomed by the assembled Nobles. There were sixty-seven aspirants conducted across the "hot sands" and the Order was conferred upon them at this session, after which the Imperial Potentate addressed the assembled Nobles concerning the objects and aims of the Mystic Shrine, and his words were received with hearty applause.

BOSTON, December 31, 1912: The Annual Session was held in Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, Boston, Mass., at 5 o'clock in the afternoon; the meeting was opened by the Illustrious Potentate, George A. Shackford, assisted by all the elective and appointive officers. Waiver of jurisdiction was granted to Palestine Temple, of Providence, R. I., over an aspirant at New Bedford, Mass. Reports of the Recorder, Treasurer and Trustees of the Permanent Fund was submitted, and, upon motion, approved. The Recorder reported the membership to be 6,950, a gain of 496 for the year. At this session the following officers were elected: Potentate, George A. Shackford; Chief Rabban, Walter W. Morrison; Assistant Rabban, Francis H. Appleton; High Priest and Prophet, James S. Blake; Oriental Guide, James D. Robertson; Treasurer, Joseph W. Work; Recorder, Benjamin W. Rowell, and Trustee for three years, Albert L. Richardson. Auditors, Augustus C. Jordan, George H. Allen and Thomas R. Neath. Representatives to the Imperial Council, George A. Shackford, Charles C. Henry, James S. Blake, Charles A. Estey, and Benjamin W. Rowell, Emeritus Member of the Imperial Council. Past Potentate Charles C. Henry offered the following amendment to the Temple By-Laws:

BANQUET TENDERED TO IMPERIAL POTENTATE JOHN FRANK TREAT BY THE IMPERIAL RECORDER BENJAMIN W. ROWELL, AT HIS BUNGALOW AT WEST PEABODY, MASS.

"To the Potentate and Members of Aleppo Temple:

"I hereby recommend the following amendment to the By-Laws of Aleppo Temple: That at the annual meeting of Aleppo Temple there shall be appointed a committee on charity, who shall have authority to present at any meeting a recommendation for the disbursement of charity, which shall be approved by at least two members of the Standing Committee of Aleppo Temple, to provide for indigent members of the Temple or members of their family. This amendment to take effect immediately after it is accepted by Aleppo Temple.

Yours in the faith,
(Signed) Charles C. Henry."

This amendment was ordered to lie over and be borne upon the notice of the next session, when it would come up for action, in accordance with the Constitution of the Temple. Upon motion it was unanimously voted, "to authorize the Potentate of the Temple to expend such sums of money as, in his judgment, may be necessary to maintain the prominence and enhance the influence of Aleppo Temple at the session of the Imperial Council to be held in Dallas, in May, 1913." Noble Walter W. Morrison, then, in the name of the Temple, presented to Potentate George A. Shackford, a Past Potentate's jewel. Noble Shackford expressed his thanks for the jewel and the support of the Nobles during the year. The officers, elect and appointive, were then installed in their respective offices by Past Potentate Frederick H. Spring, assisted by Past Potentate Charles C. Henry, who acted as Marshal. Fifty-two aspirants were conducted across the "hot sands" at this ceremonial, and created Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, among whom was an aspirant from Concord, N. H., over whom Bektash Temple waived jurisdiction. At the close of the Temple the assembled Nobles were entertained by a vaudeville exhibition.

BOSTON, February 25, 1913: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was opened in Mechanics Hall, Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, at 6:30 o'clock in the evening, by the Illustrious Potentate, George A. Shackford, assisted by the elective and appointive officers. The amendment to the By-Laws offered by Past Potentate Charles C. Henry at the last session having been borne upon the notice of the session, was, upon vote, unanimously rejected. Sixty-three aspirants were conducted across the "hot sands" at this session, and created Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. At the close of the session the Nobles were entertained with the usual vaudeville.

BOSTON, June 5, 1913: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was held in Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, at 6:30 o'clock in the afternoon; the meeting was opened by the Potentate, George A. Shackford, assisted by the full corps of elective and appointive officers. Waivers of jurisdiction over seven aspirants, requested by Palestine Temple, of Providence, R. I., were refused. The Potentate read the following letter from the Commander of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company:

"Dear Potentate:

"With your permission, Noble Knight will help out a good cause among the Nobles.

"On Flag Day, June 14, this year, a big observance is scheduled. Everybody should wear a flag. Patriotic sentiment suggests it.

"The Daughters of Veterans have arranged to sell flags in all the big stores, the public spirit of the merchants giving them a free space for three days next week. The money they receive is to be applied to the 'Army Nurses' Memorial' which is to be placed in the Hall of Flags at the State House. It is to cost $15,000, and is the work of Bela Pratt, the sculptor.

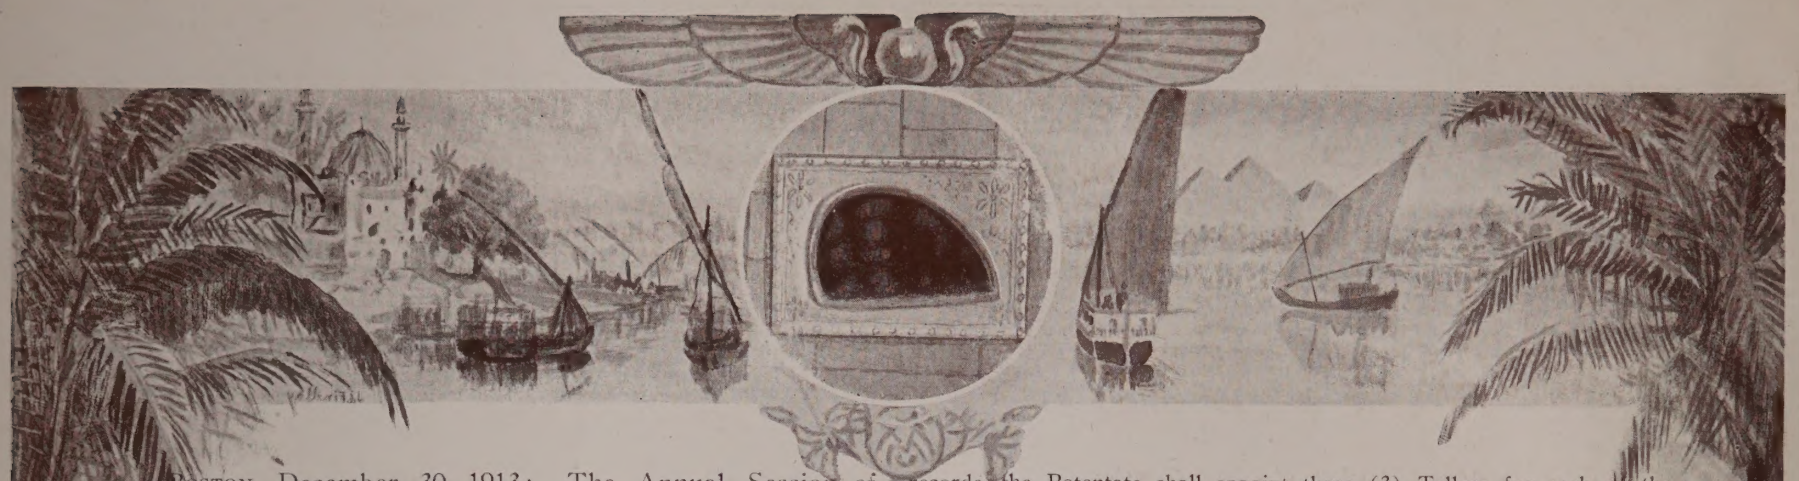
"I think the Shriners will want to wear a flag, and to thus assist the memorial. Will you permit Noble Knight to carry out the plan he has evolved, and announce it with your approval?

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) Fred J. Bolton."

On motion it was voted, "that, besides the sale of flags that might be made to various Nobles, the sum of $100 be appropriated, and donated to the proper parties having the matter in hand." On motion of Noble Walter W. Morrison, it was ordered that a committee of five be appointed to procure and present to Potentate Shackford a testimonial at the conclusion of his second term of office. Applications for the Order were received from 126 Novices, 124 of whom were present, and, crossing the "hot sands," were created Nobles of Aleppo Temple. One aspirant for affiliation was elected. There being no further business, the Temple was closed, when all present enjoyed a vaudeville show.

BOSTON, August 23, 1913: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was opened in the Hall of the South Terminal, Dewey Square, at 9:00 o'clock in the forenoon, by the Illustrious Potentate, George A. Shackford, assisted by the elective and appointive officers. Fifty-nine aspirants were elected at this session, and the Order was conferred upon them by communication. One Noble was reinstated at this session, and two having filed demits, were elected to membership. At 9:40 o'clock, A. M., the Temple was closed, when 404 Nobles boarded the train for Whitfield Point at Fairhaven, Mass., and enjoyed the annual outing.

BOSTON, November 17, 1913: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was opened in Mechanics Hall, Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, at 6:00 o'clock in the evening by the Potentate, George A. Shackford, assisted by the elective and appointive officers. Noble Charles H. Porter, Trustee of the Permanent Fund, having died, Noble Eugene A. Holton was elected a Trustee to fill the vacancy for the ensuing term. Request for a waiver of jurisdiction over an aspirant resident at Fall River, Mass., by Palestine Temple of Providence, R. I., was refused. Waiver of jurisdiction over an aspirant resident at East Walpole, Mass., was granted to Bektash Temple of Rochester, N. Y., over an aspirant resident at Worcester, Mass. Waiver of jurisdiction was also granted to Melha Temple of Springfield, Mass., over an aspirant resident at Milford, Mass. At this session Noble William H. Paaschen of Oriental Temple, Troy, N. Y., was elected an Honorary Member. Nobles J. Harvey Young, Henry D. Perkins and Claredon E. Holman of Aleppo Temple, were also, upon ballot, elected to honorary membership. Thirty-five aspirants were conducted across the "hot sands" at this session, and created Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. The business of the session having been concluded, the Nobles present were entertained with a pleasing vaudeville show.



BOSTON, December 30, 1913: The Annual Session of Aleppo Temple was opened in Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, at 5:10 o'clock in the afternoon, by the Potentate, George A. Shackford, all the elective and appointive officers being in their respective stations. Waiver of jurisdiction was granted to Palestine Temple of Providence, R. I., over an aspirant resident at Seekonk, Mass. Waiver of jurisdiction was also granted to Luxor Temple, St. John, N. B., over an aspirant resident at Brockton, Mass. The Recorder, Treasurer and Trustees of the Permanent Fund submitted their reports, which were accepted and approved. The Recorder reported the membership to be 7,058, a gain of 108 for the year. Upon ballot, the officers, recommended by the committee of nominations, were duly elected, as follows: Potentate, George A. Shackford; Chief Rabban, Walter W. Morrison; Assistant Rabban, Francis H. Appleton; High Priest and Prophet, James S. Blake; Oriental Guide, James D. Robertson; Treasurer, Joseph W. Work; Recorder, Benjamin W. Rowell; Trustee for three years, Henry N. Fisher; Auditors, George H. Allen, Augustus C. Jordan, Thomas R. Neath; Representatives to the Imperial Council, George A. Shackford, Charles C. Henry, James S. Blake, Charles A. Estey, and Benjamin W. Rowell, Emeritus Member of the Imperial Council. The officers elect and appointive were installed in their respective offices by Past Potentate Frederick H. Spring, assisted by Past Potentate Charles C. Henry. Fifty aspirants were conducted across the "hot sands" at this session and created Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. Upon motion that the Temple send the Arab Patrol to the next Imperial Council session at Atlanta, Ga., a vote was taken which resulted as follows: 339 voting in favor; 125 opposed. It was thereby ordered that the Temple send the Arab Patrol to Atlanta, Ga., to the next Imperial Council session. At the conclusion of the session attended by 5,000 Nobles, a vaudeville show, under the auspices of Noble Frank J. Howard, was witnessed.

BOSTON, June 4, 1914: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was held in Mechanics Hall, Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, the meeting being opened at 6:00 o'clock by the Potentate, George A. Shackford, assisted by the full corps of elective and appointive officers. Waiver of jurisdiction was granted to Palestine Temple of Providence, R. I. over one aspirant, resident of Farnumsville, Mass., request having been made for waiver of jurisdiction over four aspirants, the other three being refused. Noble Thomas T. Tracy proposed the following amendment to the By-Laws of Aleppo Temple.

"Upon the evening of the annual election in December, the Recorder shall prepare an election ticket, upon which there shall be printed, under the proper heading, the names of the Officers of the Temple, space for the name to be left blank, the ballot to be so perforated that the names of candidates for each office may easily be separated. An individual ticket bearing but one name may be used for anyone of the various officers; a ticket bearing the names of three members for trustees; a ticket bearing the names of four members for representatives to the Imperial Council may be used, but in no instance shall this comprise a part of any ticket having any name or names thereon for any other office than that named on the individual tickets as above named. The officers and trustees and the representatives of the Temple to the Imperial Council shall be elected by ballot and by a majority vote. Immediately after the reading of the records, the Potentate shall appoint three (3) Tellers for each of the following named Officers to be elected. Illustrious Potentate; Chief Rabban; Assistant Rabban; High Priest and Prophet; Oriental Guide; three Tellers for the Treasurer and Recorder; three Tellers for four Representatives. Twenty-four tellers in all, who shall conduct the election. They shall have their station in front of the presiding officer, and open the polls to receive votes at 7:30 and close same at 10:00 P. M.

"The Potentate shall also appoint to the tellers above mentioned, two Nobles of this Temple, who shall be stationed at the polling place; each Noble shall present his card for the year, which shall be checked by the tellers, and after voting he shall immediately vacate the polling place until the election is announced.

"The foregoing shall be printed upon the regular notices of each Annual Session."

This amendment was ordered to be printed upon the notice of the next session, at which time action would be taken. The Potentate then notified the members of the demise of Albert L. Richardson, Trustee of the Permanent Fund, and an election was ordered to fill the vacancy. Noble Joseph A. Bryant having been put in nomination, was, by unanimous vote, elected to fill the vacancy. One hundred and nine aspirants crossed the "hot sands" at this session, and were created Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. At the close of the session the Nobles were entertained by a vaudeville show.

BOSTON, August 15, 1914: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was opened in Huntington Chambers, 30 Huntington Avenue, at 9:00 o'clock A. M., by Illustrious Potentate George A. Shackford, all the elective and appointive officers being present. The Order was conferred by communication upon forty-nine aspirants at this session. The Temple was then closed, and at 10:00 o'clock all repaired to Rowe's Wharf, where they boarded the steamer "Rose Standish," which had been chartered for the occasion, and after a four hours' sail around Massachusetts Bay, were landed at Nantasket Beach. Preceded by the Band, the Nobles, to the number of 440, proceeded to Paragon Park, where a shore dinner was served. The occasion was much enjoyed.

BOSTON, November 10, 1914; A regular session of Aleppo Temple was opened in Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, at 6:10 o'clock by Illustrious Potentate George A. Shackford. The amendment to the By-Laws proposed by Noble Thomas T. Tracy was read, and upon motion and by unanimous vote, the whole matter was indefinitely postponed. The Potentate announced that he was informed that the Imperial Potentate of the Imperial Council, A. A. O., N. M. S., Frederick R. Smith, was in waiting in an ante-room, whereupon the Potentate instructed Past Potentate James S. Blake to retire and introduce the Imperial Potentate. Noble Blake, under escort of the Band and the Arab Patrol, then proceeded to the ante-room and presently reëntered the hall and presented to the Potentate, Noble Frederick R. Smith, of Rochester, N. Y., the Imperial Potentate of the Imperial Council, Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine for North America, who was most cordially and graciously welcomed by the Potentate. The Imperial Potentate responded to the words of the Potentate in a most graceful and pleasing manner and received the hearty applause of more than 4000 Nobles present. The Imperial Potentate was accompanied by Past Potentate Estene V. Fletcher of Damascus Temple of Rochester, N. Y. There were also in the suite of the Imperial Potentate, Charles A. Estey, Past Potentate, Joseph W. Work, Treasurer, Henry N. Fisher, Josiah T. Dyer and Eugene A. Holton, all of Aleppo Temple affiliation. The ceremonies of welcome having been concluded, Noble Daniel Jones, Potentate of Oriental Temple, Troy, N. Y., accompanied by a large delegation of Nobles, in the name of Oriental Temple, presented to the Imperial Potentate a certificate of honorary membership in Oriental Temple, to which the Imperial Potentate responded most pleasingly. Noble Jones then presented to Past Potentate James S. Blake an honorary membership in Oriental Temple, to which Noble Blake in his usual happy manner made response. Upon motion, and by unanimous vote, the following Nobles were made Honorary Members of Aleppo Temple: Noble Frederick R. Smith, Imperial Potentate, Damascus Temple, Rochester, N. Y.; Noble Estene V. Fletcher, Past Potentate of Damascus Temple, and Noble Daniel Jones, Potentate of Oriental Temple, Troy, N. Y. Forty-seven aspirants for the Order were then introduced, conducted across the "hot sands," and created Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. The Order was also conferred upon Brother Frank Joseph Paul of Forth Worth, Texas, at the request of Moslah Temple of Fort Worth, Texas. Five Nobles were elected to membership by affiliation. At the conclusion of the ceremonial the Nobles enjoyed a vaudeville show of much merit and interest. There were present at this session many prominent members of the Order, Bektash Temple of Concord, N. H. being represented by more than eighty Nobles; Oriental Temple of Troy, by twenty. Other Temples were represented as follows: Luxor Temple of St. John, N. B., by George Ackman, Potentate; Kora Temple of Lewiston, Me., and Salaam Temple, of Newark, N. J., by members, and Almas Temple of Washington, D. C., by Noble Sidney Frank.

Boston, December 30, 1914: The Annual Session of Aleppo Temple was opened in Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, at 6:00 o'clock in the evening by Potentate George A. Shackford, all the elective and appointive officers and the Arab Patrol being in their respective stations. Applications were received from thirty-five aspirants, who were duly elected, and from three Nobles for affiliation. Upon motion, the following members were elected to honorary membership: Charles E. Pierce, Harry E. Harper and John A. Zuver. Waiver of jurisdiction was granted to Palestine Temple of Providence, R. I., over two aspirants, residents of Massachusetts. The Recorder, Treasurer and Trustees of the Permanent Fund and Auditing Committee then rendered their annual reports, which were accepted and approved. The Recorder reported the membership as 7171, a gain of 113 for the year. The following officers were unanimously elected: Potentate, Walter W. Morrison; Chief Rabban, Francis H. Appleton; Assistant Rabban, James D. Robertson; High Priest and Prophet, James S. Blake; Oriental Guide, Samuel C. L. Haskell; Treasurer, Joseph W. Work; Recorder, Benjamin W. Rowell; Trustee for three years, Joseph A. Bryant; Auditors, George H. Allen, Augustus C. Jordan, Thomas R. Neath. Representatives to the Imperial Council, James S. Blake, Charles A. Estey, Walter W. Morrison, Francis H. Appleton, and Benjamin W. Rowell, Emeritus Member of the Imperial Council. The officers, elective and appointive, were then installed by Illustrious Frederick H. Spring, Past Potentate, assisted by Illustrious Noble Charles A. Estey, Past Potentate. Among the pleasing incidents of the installation ceremonies was the presentation by Potentate Morrison to Past Potentate Shackford of a Past Potentate's fez, Past Potentate Shackford returning the compliment by presenting Potentate Morrison with a Potentate's fez. Both of the recipients were very pleasing in their words of acceptance and received the applause of all present. Thirty-eight aspirants were then introduced into the Temple and the Order conferred upon them by communication. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the Nobles witnessed a series of entertainments which had been provided by the officers.

Boston, February 17, 1915: A regular session of Aleppo Temple was opened in Mechanics Building, Huntington Avenue, at 6:30 o'clock in the evening, by the Potentate Walter W. Morrison, assisted by the full corps of elective and appointive officers. Waiver of jurisdiction was granted to Palestine Temple of Providence, R. I., over two aspirants resident at Fall River, Mass. The following amendment to the By-Laws was offered by Noble Henry B. Perkins:

"To amend Section 1, Article VI, Fees and Dues. Strike out the words 'Fifty Dollars,' and insert the words 'Seventy-five Dollars,' so that the section amended will read,—

"Section 1. The fee for conferring the Order including membership in this Temple, shall be Seventy-five Dollars, which shall always accompany the petition."

In compliance with the By-Laws, the proposed amendment was received and ordered printed on the notice of the next session, for action. Petitions for affiliation were received from four Nobles, and they were elected upon ballot. Upon motion it was voted that Noble Albert Edgcomb, one of the Charter Members of Aleppo Temple be elected to honorary membership. The Temple was honored by a visitation from the Deputy Imperial Potentate, J. Putnam Stevens, of Portland, Maine, a member of Kora Temple, who was escorted into the Temple by a committee of Aleppo's Past Potentates. He was cordially received, and briefly addressed the assembled Nobles. The Order was then exemplified with due form and ceremony on seventy-two novitiates, inducting them into the Nobility of Aleppo Temple. There were many other Temples represented at this session, there being delegations from Kora Temple, Palestine Temple, Bektash Temple, Mount Sinai Temple, Sphinx Temple, Mecca Temple, Kismet Temple, Medinah Temple, Boumi Temple, Luxor Temple and Korein Temple. The work of the initiatory ceremonies were complete in all parts and much enjoyed by the 4,500 Nobles present.

In 1885, two years after the granting of a charter to Aleppo Temple, twelve men were appointed by Henry E. Hosley, a Charter Member and the first Potentate, to take charge of the novices and conduct them safely across the "burning sands." Previous to the appointment of this body, the Director, Frank Locke, also a Charter Member, had charge of the initiates. It is interesting to note the steady growth of the infant temple as evident in the addition of twenty-two more "Arabs" to the original twelve until now the Patrol is a well-organized and beautifully conducted body of thirty-three men. At first they had no special regalia, simply evening dress, but now the Patrol adds much to the dignity and effect of the work with their individual robes and jewels. The Arab Patrol is the personal staff of the Potentate, and its purpose is to assist the officers in the floor work and in any other way possible. It is semi-military. Some of the Past Captains have been Major McDonnough, E. J. Dyer, S. H. Mitchell, Thomas Higgins, Major Damon and Clarence Knowlton; and the officers and members for 1915 are: Captain Augustus H. Hall, First Lieutenant George E. Tufts, Second Lieutenant Robert E. Turner, First Sergeant A. F. O. Cederstrom, Second Sergeant, E. P. Brock; W. H. Buswell, Elmer Butler, E. P. Blake, F. P. Beckler, W. H. Berry, F. O. Clark, H. C. Chester, J. F. Dunbar, G. T. Everett, L. P. Gowing, L. L. Gillette, F. P. Hatch, W. R. Hill, M. C. Rogers, W. A. Thibodeau, A. W. Pitman, A. E. Yont, Cyrus S. ALEPPO TEMPLE, A.·.A.·.O.·.N.·.M.·.S.·.

BOSTON, MASS.

DATE OF CHARTER, JUNE 6, 1883

PREAMBLE

This Temple shall be governed by, first, the Constitution, Statutes and Regulations of the Imperial Council of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of North America, and second by the following By-Laws.

ARTICLE I.

THE TEMPLE, TITLE, WARRANT AND SESSIONS.

Section 1. This Temple shall be known and distinguished as Aleppo Temple, and is held by virtue of a Charter granted on June 6, 1883, by the Imperial Council of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine for North America, from which it derives all its powers and privileges, and to whose Statutes and Regulations, Rules and Orders, implicit respect and obedience shall ever be paid by its members.

Sect. 2. The stated Sessions shall be called by the Potentate whenever he may deem the same necessary; but no less than four Sessions shall be held annually, of which one shall be held in December.

ANNUAL SESSION.

Sect. 3. The Annual Session of this Temple for the election of Officers and Representatives to the Imperial Council, Trustees and Auditors shall be at the Regular Yearly Session in December of each year. The installation of Officers elected and appointed at such meeting shall take place immediately, or at the first succeeding Session.

ARTICLE II.

THE MEMBERSHIP, MEMBERS AND THEIR DUTIES.

Section 1. The members of this Temple must be those who have been created Knights Templar, or those who may have attained the thirty-second degree of the A.·.A.·.S.·.Rite of Freemasonry, for the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction, and those Supreme Councils that are in amity with and are recognized by said Supreme Council, and who shall have been elected to membership herein, and who shall have subscribed their names to these By-Laws.

No Noble of this or any other Temple of the Order shall be admitted to any session of this Temple unless he can communicate the words and show to the Guards the card for the year.

A Noble cannot vouch for another as being in good standing, the card for the year being the only evidence recognized.

Sect. 2. The duties of the members are to conform to the Statutes and Regulations of the Order, together with these By-Laws and the various duties required by the Ritual.

ARTICLE III.

Section 1. The Officers of this Temple shall be ranked and entitled as follows:

1. Illustrious Potentate
2. Chief Rabban
3. Assistant Rabban
4. High Priest and Prophet
5. Oriental Guide
6. Treasurer
7. Recorder
8. First Ceremonial Master
9. Second Ceremonial Master or Standard Bearer
10. Director
11. Marshal
12. Captain of the Guard
13. Outer Guard

and such others as the working of the Ritual may require, who shall hold office during the pleasure of the Potentate.

Sect. 2. The first seven Officers must be chosen by ballot at the Regular Session in December, and by a majority of votes. The remaining Officers shall be appointed by the Illustrious Potentate.

Sect. 3. There shall also be elected at the Annuai Session in December as many Representatives to the Imperial Council as are required by the Constitution, the candidates having the highest number of votes to be declared elected.

Sect. 4. Three Auditors, who hold no other office in the Temple, shall be elected by ballot at the Annual Meeting.

It shall be their duty to examine the books, accounts, cash on hand, and securities of the Treasurer, Recorder and Board of Trustees as soon as possible after the close of the financial year of the Temple and report thereon at the Annual Meeting in December.

Sect. 5. The duties of the Officers shall be such as are traditionally appropriate to their several stations or may be assigned them by the Temple; and every Officer shall be held personally responsible to the Illustrious Potentate, and through him to the Temple, that his office be filled with dignity and honor.

The Potentate, Chief Rabban and Assistant Rabban cannot resign after having been duly elected and installed; any other Office may resign his office.

Sect. 6. The Illustrious Potentate has it in special charge to see that these By-Laws are duly observed, as well as the Statutes, Edicts and Regulations of the Imperial Council of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine for North America; that accurate records are kept and just accounts rendered; and that regular returns are made to the Imperial Council. He shall have authority to call Special Session at pleasure; he shall at all times require the observance of decorum and propriety, and suppress any exhibitions of levity and unbecoming conduct among the members; and shall use every effort to perfect the happiness and promote the welfare of the Temple and its members.

Sect. 7. In the absence of the Illustrious Potentate the Chief Rabban and Assistant Rabban will severally assume his duties and prerogatives; and in the event of the absence of the three principal officers, Past Potentates according to rank and seniority of service shall be empowered to command.

Sect. 8. The Treasurer shall receive in charge all the revenue of the Temple; pay all orders drawn on the treasury by the Finance Committee, and render a just and faithful account at the Annual Session, and also when required by the Finance Committee or by vote of the Temple. He shall promptly deliver to his successor in office all the property and funds of the Temple he may have in his possession. He shall receive for his services three hundred dollars per annum.

Sect. 9. The Recorder shall record the transactions of the Temple, collect the revenue, pay the same to the Treasurer, and issue notices of all Sessions, have charge of the Seal and all books and documents whatsoever of the Temple appertaining to his office, and perform all other duties belonging to his office. He shall promptly deliver to his successor in office all the property of the Temple in his possession, and for his services shall be allowed and paid such sum as the Finance Committee may determine.

ARTICLE IV.

Section 1. The Illustrious Potentate, Chief Rabban and Assistant Rabban shall constitute a Finance Committee, who shall approve all bills contracted in behalf of this Temple, before payment by the Treasurer. Two members of this committee, one of whom shall be the Illustrious Potentate, shall constitute a quorum.

Board of Trustees.

Sect. 2. The Permanent Fund shall be held in the name of the Trustees of the Permanent Fund of Aleppo Temple, Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of Boston, Mass., and shall be under the direction and control of a Board of Trustees, consisting of the Potentate, Treasurer and three Nobles who hold no other office in the Temple. Each Trustee shall hold his office until his successor is elected.

Trustees—How Elected.

Sect. 3. Of the members to be elected the Temple shall elect one Trustee for the term of one year, and one for the term of two years, and one for the term of three years; and at each Annual Session in December thereafter, the Temple shall elect one member of the Board for the term of three years.

Each Trustee, however, shall hold his office until his successor is elected.

Vacancies.

Sect. 4. Should a vacancy occur in the Board of Trustees from any cause, it shall be filled by an election by ballot at the next stated Session, due notice thereof having been placed upon the notifications.

Sect. 5. The Board of Trustees shall carefully and judiciously invest the Permanent Fund in such manner as in their judgment shall be safest and most productive, and shall select a suitable place for deposit for the securities and vouchers of the Fund, where their absolute safety from fire and theft shall be insured. They shall keep a full and accurate record of the investments of the Permanent Fund, and at each Annual Session shall submit to the Temple a correct statement of the Fund in detail, exhibiting its exact condition, which statement shall be spread upon the records of the Temple. They shall pay to the Treasurer for the use of the Temple the income derived from the Fund, provided the Committee on Finance so requires. Otherwise the said income shall each year be added to and constitute a part of the Permanent Fund.

Life Members.

Sect. 6. Any member of this Temple who is in good standing and whose dues are paid in full may become a life member thereof, by paying to the Temple the sum of forty dollars ($40.00), upon receipt of which the Recorder shall issue to him a certificate of life membership; said life member shall thereby become exempt for life from the payment of annual dues and assessments, but shall retain all the privileges of membership.

Sect. 7. The Treasurer shall pay all sums received for life memberships and $5.00 from the fee of each successful candidate to the Trustees of the Permanent Fund, who shall carefully and judiciously invest the same as Trustees of the Fund of Aleppo Temple of the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of Boston, Mass.

PERMANENT FUND AND WHAT IT SHALL CONSIST OF.

Sect. 8. A Permanent Fund shall be established and styled The Permanent Fund of Aleppo Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of Boston, Mass. The Permanent Fund shall consist of the amount already invested in the hands of the Trustees, of the whole amount received for life membership, of five dollars from each successful candidate, of all donations and bequests to the Temple, and of such additions as shall from time to time be made by vote of the Temple.

It shall not be considered good faith in the Temple to diminish the rate of increase hereby established. The principal of the Fund shall never be expended except by unanimous vote of all the Nobles of Aleppo Temple at a special meeting called for that purpose.

ARTICLE V.

THE ORDER, PETITIONS, ETC.

Section 1. The application of every candidate for the Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine in this Temple shall be made in writing and signed by the applicant, and be in the form prescribed by the Imperial Council.

Sect. 2. A person elected to receive the Order and not presenting himself for three (3) stated Sessions shall not be eligible to receive the Order until his application has again been acted on in accordance with these By-Laws, unless satisfactory excuse be given to the Illustrious Potentate.

Sect. 3. An application to become a member of this Temple, from a Noble regularly dimitted from the membership of this or any other Temple, shall be accompanied with the certificate of his dimit.

Sect. 4. An application to withdraw from the membership of this Temple shall be made in writing, and a dimit shall be granted if square upon the books of the Temple and under no charges.

ARTICLE VI.

Section 1. The fee for conferring the Order, including membership in this Temple, shall be fifty dollars ($50.00), which shall always accompany the petition.

Sect. 2. The fee for affiliation shall be ten dollars (10.00), which must accompany the petition.

Sect. 3. The annual dues of this Temple shall be three dollars ($3.00), in advance, to be paid to the Recorder on or before the Annual Session in each year. Initiates receiving the Order previous to October in each year shall pay the full three dollars ($3.00); those initated after October in each year shall not be charged dues for that year, and in case any member shall neglect to pay his dues as aforesaid, he may be discharged by vote of the Temple from all the rights and privileges of the Order until all arrearages shall have been paid, unless satisfactory explanations be given to the Potentate.

This amendment to go into force and be operative on and after January 1, 1908.

Sect. 4. The funds shall be appropriated to defray the necessary expenses of the Temple and to such acts of charity as may be authorized by vote of the Temple.

ARTICLE VII.

Section 1. All questions before this Temple, except such as are herein provided for, shall be determined by a majority of votes; and it is the duty of every member present, when a question is submitted to the Temple, to vote thereon.

Sect. 2. Should there be a tie, the presiding officer may give the casting vote.

Sect. 3. No appeal from the decision of the Illustrious Potentate shall lie to the Temple.

Sect. 4. No member of the Temple shall be discharged from membership therein (except as herein provided for non-payment of dues), nor expelled from the Order, unless on charges duly specifying his offence, presented by a Noble in good standing, a copy of which charges shall be furnished the accused, and full opportunity afforded him for his defence.

Sect. 5. A Noble suspended for non-payment of dues in either Commandery or Consistory forfeits his membership in his Temple until he regains his membership in either or both of the prerequisite bodies.

Sect. 6. No visitor or member of this Temple shall be admitted except he present the certificate prescribed by the Imperial Council, signed by the Recorder of his own Temple, and bearing the seal thereof that such Noble is in good and regular standing.

Sect. 7. Any Noble who has been discharged for non-payment of dues may be restored to membership upon payment of all arrearages to the time of his reinstatement, and upon making application.

Sect. 8. If upon the balloting for a candidate subsequent to a favorable report, three blackballs shall appear, another ballot shall immediately be had, but no more; upon the appearance of three blackballs a second time the candidate shall be declared rejected and disqualified from making a second application for thirteen weeks.

Sect. 9. No part of these By-Laws shall be altered or repealed, nor any addition be made thereto, unless the proposed amendment be offered in writing, at a stated Session, and be borne upon the notices, and receive the sanction of two-thirds of the members present at the next stated Session.

CHARLES C. HENRY,
ALBERT L. RICHARDSON,
BENJAMIN W. ROWELL,
Committee on Revision of By-Laws.

Adopted by more than three-fourths vote, February 17, 1907.

Approved by the Imperial Council, May 7. 1907.
Attest: B. W. ROWELL,
Imperial Recorder.

HENRY E. HOSLEY.

Illustrious Noble Hosley entered the Unseen Temple, June 10, 1893. Upon him, in his younger days, fell the brunt of the labor connected with the organization of Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., he having previously received the Order in New York City, at the hands of Imperial Potentate Walter M. Fleming, by whom he was appointed as Deputy for the State of Massachusetts. Illustrious Noble Hosley's name thus leads those of his six coadjutors upon the Charter of Aleppo Temple, which body was instituted June 6, 1883, and for six years, 1883-1889, he held therein the high office of Illustrious Potentate. On August 19, 1899, as Illustrious Deputy Imperial Potentate, Noble Hosley accomplished the task of removing Palestine Temple from Newport, R. I., to Providence, R. I., in a manner satisfactory to all of the Nobles of Palestine Temple. His Masonic affiliations included bodies in the York and Scottish Rites, as follows: Gate of the Temple Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and St. Matthew's Chapter, R. A. M., both of South Boston; Boston Council, R. & S. M., and St. Omer Commandery No. 21, K. T. of Dorchester; Boston Lafayette Lodge of Perfection, Giles Fonda Yates Council of Princes of Jerusalem, Mt. Olivet Chapter of Rose Croix, and Massachusetts Consistory, 32°, S.·.P.·.R.·.S.·. He was also a member of Bethesda Lodge, I. O. O. F., and Mt. Washington Encampment, both of South Boston. Illustrious Noble Hosley was born in South Boston, and was educated in the city schools, graduating from the English High School. He married Miss Short of South Boston, and they had three children. His father came from good New England stock, and was engaged in the flagstone business in Boston, with location on Federal Street, the site being now occupied by the South Station. Illustrious Noble Hosley was of generous disposition, pleasing personality, well read, a devoted husband and father, and very kind to the poor and needy. His home was in South Boston.

FRANK LOCKE.

Noble Frank Locke was one of those who journeyed to New York with Henry Hosley when he procured the requisites that brought about the forming of Aleppo Temple, and Noble Locke's name is one of the seven appearing on its charter, granted June 6, 1883. He had Masonic affiliations with the following York Rite bodies: Gate of the Temple Lodge, A. F. & A. M. of South Boston, St. Matthew's Chapter, R. A. M., St. Omer Commandery K. T.; and in the Scottish Rite he was affiliated with Lafayette Lodge of Perfection, and Massachusetts Consistory, 32°, S.·.P.·.R.·.S.·. He was a member of Gettysburg Post, 191, G. A. R., and the Order of Red Men. On March 10, 1848, Noble Locke was born in Loudon, N. H. He attended the Loudon Academy, and when but fifteen years of age he enlisted in the Civil War, pretending that he was eighteen. At the close of the War, serving with the 2nd N. H. Heavy Artillery, he received an honorable discharge. In Chelsea, on June 23, 1877, he married Miss Emma Hatch of Bristol, Me. They had two sons: E. Frank, born March 13, 1878, and Marshall E., born January 2, 1882. Noble Locke entered the Unseen Temple, April 5, 1894.

JOSEPH RANDALL GROSE.

Noble Grose, whose name appears upon the charter of Aleppo Temple of the Ancient Arabic Order, passed away at his home in South Boston, on August 18, 1892. He was a Past Master of Gate of the Temple Lodge, A. F. & A. M. of South Boston, and in 1881 held the rank of Worshipful Master therein; and was a member of St. Matthew's Royal Arch Chapter, St. Omer Commandery No. 21, K. T., Boston Lafayette Lodge of Perfection, and Massachusetts Consistory, S.·.P.·.R.·.S.·. In the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, Northern Masonic Jurisdiction, he was a member of the several bodies, and had attained the 32°. Many years ago, Noble Grose befriended, in his characteristic way, a member of Hibernia (Masonic) Lodge, of St. John, N. B., who passed away in Boston. The Lodge recognized the kindness by creating Noble Grose an Honorary Member, further expressing its fraternal regard by a touching testimonial on parchment, beautifully framed and fittingly inscribed. Noble Grose later presented the Lodge with a pair of ebony and silver gavels. He was a member of Bethesda Lodge, I. O. O. F. of South Boston; Damon Lodge, K. P., and the South Boston Citizens' Association; one of the Board of Directors of the East Masonic Mutual Relief Association; a trustee of the South Boston Savings Bank; a member of the Twelve Mandarins, and of the Hand-in-Hand Club. From 1873 to 1883, inclusive, and from 1889 to the date of his demise, he served the city of Boston as First Assistant Assessor. Before the advent of the steam fire-engine, he was an active member of the old Barnicoat fire-engine company, and was president of the Barnicoat Firemen's Association, being also interested in the Veteran Firemen's Association, and Treasurer of the New England States Veteran Firemen's League. He was long engaged in business as a paper box manufacturer, in Boston, with location at the corner of Purchase and Congress Streets. Noble Grose was born in Boston, on September 4, 1835. In that city, also, on September 2, 1858, he married Miss Nancy Jane Palmer, and they had six children: Joseph R., Jr., Walter H., Adelaide J., William K., Charles K., and Jennie P. A true Mason in the highest sense of the word, Noble Grose was a devoted husband, father and friend, loved and honored by all with whom he was associated.

ALBERT EDGCOMB.

Noble Albert Edgcomb is one of the two surviving Charter Members, and he is also an Honorary Member of Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S. In 1873, he was raised in St. Paul's Lodge, A. F. & A. M., exalted in St. Matthew's Royal Arch Chapter and created a Knight in St. Omer Commandery of Knights Templar, all located in South Boston. He is a member of Gettysburg Post 191, G. A. R., having entered the army August 10, 1862, and served throughout the Civil War. His notable achievements during the conflict are recorded in the History of the First Maine Cavalry. Born in Exeter, Maine, June 11, 1843, he attended the public schools of his native town. On October 5, 1873, he married Miss Ellen M. Dean of Norton, Mass. They have two daughters, and reside in Braintree. Noble Edgcomb's business address is No. 280 Devonshire Street, Boston.

BENJAMIN W. DEAN.

Noble Dean passed to the Great Beyond on July 22, 1892. He was a Charter Member of Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., which was organized June 6, 1883. His Masonic affiliations, in the York Rite, were with Adelphi Lodge, A. F. & A. M., St. Matthew's Chapter, R. A. M., both of South Boston, and St. Omer Commandery No. 21, K. T. of Dorchester; and in the Scottish Rite he was connected with Boston Lafayette Lodge of Perfection, Giles Fonda Yates Council of Princes of Jerusalem, Mt. Olivet Chapter of Rose Croix, and Massachusetts Consistory, 32°, S.·.P.·.R.·.S.·. He was, for four years, Captain of the Boston Lancers, and was a member of the Boston Yacht Club. Noble Dean was in business as a contractor in Boston, having been located on Federal Street, and also held the position of superintendent of the street railway in Topeka, Kansas. He was born at Lowell, on April 27, 1852, and was educated in the Boston public schools and at St. Mark's School, Southboro. On February 3, 1876, in Boston, he married Annie I. Page, and their home was in South Boston.

CHARLES E. PIERCE.

Noble Pierce has ever taken an active interest in the Masonic fraternity, and is a member of Rural Lodge, A. F. & A. M. of Quincy; St. Matthew's Chapter, R. A. M. of South Boston; Boston Council, R. & S. M., and St. Omer Commandery of Knights Templar of South Boston, of which latter he was Sword Bearer in 1875 and 1876; Senior Warden, 1877 to 1880; Captain General, 1881 and 1882; Generalissimo, 1883 and 1884, and Eminent Comander, 1885 and 1886. Noble Pierce is, too, an Honorary Member of Palestine Commandery No. 18, New York City; the Encampment of St. John, Noble and Military Order of the Temple, St. John, N. B.; Oriental Commandery No. 12, Cleveland, Ohio; Burlington Commandery No. 2, Burlington, Vt.; Dunlap Commandery No. 5, Bath, Me.; Detroit Commandery No. 1, Detroit, Mich.; South Shore Commandery, East Weymouth, Mass., and Quincy Commandery, Quincy, Mass. He is also Grand Representative of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templars of North Dakota, having been originally appointed in 1891 by Grand Commander, Right Eminent Sir Henry T. Perkins of North Dakota, a frater whom he knighted in St. Omer Commandery. In the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, he is a Life Member of Boston Lafayette Lodge of Perfection; a member of Giles Fonda Yates Council of Princes of Jerusalem; Mount Olivet Chapter of Rose Croix; Massachusetts Consistory, 32°, S.·.P.·.R.·.S.·.; and of the Massachusetts Council of Deliberation, of which he was Second Lieutenant Commander in 1891. Noble Pierce is one of the two surviving Charter Members of Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., in which he is also an Honorary Member. He holds membership in the Royal Order of Scotland; is a member of Edward W. Kinsley Post No. 113, G. A. R.; the Tenth Massachusetts (Sleeper's) Battery Association, of which he was Secretary for thirteen years, and President for two years. In 1912 Noble Pierce was commander of the Minute Men of '61, and he is also a member of the Grand Army Club of Massachusetts; the Commandery of the State of Massachusetts Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, and the Society of the Army of the Potomac. Born in Quincy, September 17, 1841, Noble Pierce began business at the early age of fifteen. In 1882 he was appointed a Justice of the Peace by Governor John D. Long, and Notary Public by Governor William E. Russell in 1892, both of which offices he continues to hold.

FREDERICK G. WALBRIDGE.

Illustrious Noble Walbridge, 33°, entered the Unseen Temple, on April 28, 1898, at Malden. He was born in Wolcott, Vt., February 14, 1828, and was educated in the public schools of that town. At the age of fifteen he removed to Boston, and, entering the United States Navy, served during the Mexican War. In 1848, he entered the employ of W. P. B. Brooks, dealer in furniture and carpets on Hanover Street, Boston, and was later admitted to partnership in the business. Severing his connection with this firm, in 1881, that of the Walbridge Brothers, consisting of his elder brother and himself, was established, with location at No. 23 Washington Street, Boston, which continued until 1890, when he entered the neighboring firm of Hollis R. Gray, at No. 38 Washington Street. In the latter, he retained his connection until his demise. Notwithstanding his close application to business, Noble Walbridge found time to take an active part in the political affairs of Boston, serving as a member of the Common Council, and on the Board of Aldermen. Noble Walbridge first saw Masonic Light in St. Paul's Lodge of South Boston, being initiated on April 5, 1859, crafted, May 10, 1859, and raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason, June 14, 1859. He was installed as Inside Sentinel of St. Paul's Lodge in 1860, and filled the offices in succession. In 1870 and 1871, Noble Walbridge was Worshipful Master, and served as Treasurer from 1877 to 1880, and again from 1882 to 1884, inclusive. In St. Paul's Royal Arch Chapter he was exalted on March 19, 1861, and became a Charter Member of St. Matthew's Royal Arch Chapter, March 29, 1864. After filling many offices in the last-named Chapter, he was elected as its High Priest in 1873 and 1874. He became a Permanent Member of the Grand Royal Arch Chapter in 1871, being elected Grand Scribe of that body. He received the Cryptic Degrees in Boston Council of Royal and Select Masters, May 30, 1867; was knighted in De Molay Commandery, K. T., on October 25, 1865, and served as its Eminent Commander in 1880 and 1881. Noble Walbridge received the degrees in the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, from the 4° to the 32° inclusive, in all bodies opened in the Sovereign Grand Consistory appendant to the Supreme Council of the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction. In connection with this rite his time and means were freely given. He was Master of Lafayette Lodge of Perfection in 1879, 1880 and 1881, and served as Senior Warden of Giles Fonda Yates Council of Princes of Jerusalem in 1867, and he was Senior Warden of Gourgas Chapter of Rose Croix in 1869 and 1870. Having assisted in the consolidation of the various bodies of the rite in Boston in 1871, his services from that time on were recognized by the Supreme Council, which conferred upon him the Honorary 33°, at its session in Boston, in September, 1880.

THE GROWING SENSE OF UNIVERSAL BROTHERHOOD

THE subject of universal brotherhood is one of deep and profound interest to all who believe in the Fatherhood of God. On the façade of a beautiful Jewish temple in Brussels, Belgium, are the following words in Hebrew and French: "Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us?" These Scriptural words constitute a strong appeal to the Jew and the Gentile alike, reminding them of their common origin and essential oneness, despite the differences of their beliefs, bitter animosity and deep-set prejudices of centuries that have held them apart. In view of these forceful words of the prophet Malachi, one cannot help thinking of the declaration of One greater than that ancient prophet, namely, "One is your Master * * * and all ye are brethren." These two sayings present to mind the subject of "Universal Brotherhood" and how it has been rapidly growing in the world.

Naturally, the sense of common brotherhood had but a small and a poor beginning, ending in brotherly hatred and bloodshed! But, being a vital one, the idea grew. Anything endowed with life must grow and keep on growing. Beginning with the limited idea of individual family brotherhood, the world has been gradually advancing, until it has now arrived at the unlimited idea of a world-brotherhood. At the outset, it must be said that the practice of brotherhood in any sense, limited or universal, is not always simple. The Jew and the Gentile, the white and the black, the soi-disant aristocrat and the so-called "common herd" have not yet found a common and firm platform on which to stand and deal "one with another" in true fraternal fellowship. But the fact that attempts to find such a platform have been and are being made, is one of the most encouraging signs of the times. And, in spite of the numerous discouraging features and seemingly insurmountable obstacles, the sincere and earnest attempts already made, mark the beginning and the growth of this sense of "Universal Brotherhood."

In the first place, it is noticeable in the growing sense of mutual helpfulness, or rather of interdependence, among the nations. This world of ours does no longer consist of isolated, or "ice-olated" units. The long era of hermit nations has come to an end. Even China, Japan, Korea, Tibet and Turkestan have been obliged, or forced, to come out of their hermetically sealed shells and they now form, to a more or less extent, a part of the brotherhood of nations, and the international fraternal ties are being gradually lengthened and strengthened, voluntarily or involuntarily. When one nation suffers, many other nations, whether living five hundred miles away or five thousand, keenly feel their responsibility to hasten to the aid of that suffering nation. It is true that not all the spirit of mutual jealousy, or selfishness or international intrigue has yet disappeared; but enough of it has vanished to prove that fraternalism has been gradually displacing international indifference. In the mind of the nations the idea of the interdependence of the poor upon the rich, of the weak upon the strong, and vice versa, has been gaining a firm foothold and root-hold. The international thinkers have been convinced that excessive individualism has had its day and that its longer sway would mean a strangle-hold on their intellectual progress as well as on their commercial development and internal peace.

In the second place, this "Growing Sense of Universal Brotherhood" is noticeable in the increasing faith and in the solidarity and oneness of the human race. Race prejudice, national conceit, excessive pride of the so-called blue-blood, "colorphobia," race discrimination, a feeling of intellectual superiority, an assumed overlordship of the world because of the possession of the presumably highest grade of civilization—these feelings are yet in the minds of many people of diverse nations. But such feelings are less rigid, less unreasonable and less insolent than they were fifty years ago, which fact indicates the softening influence of fraternalism. Nowadays the cases are rare when a man will dare to express himself in public as did a certain professor in a Salvation Army meeting. He had been asked to offer a prayer, and this was how he prayed: "O Lord, help me to forget all about my learning. Help me to forget my position in society. Help me to——". But his prayer was cut short by the Salvation Army captain, who shouted, "O Lord, do help this learned fool," and the bass drum beat out a fervent "Amen!"

In the third place, this idea of world-brotherhood is noticeable in the growing sense of international confidence. The old-time, fostered mutual jealousies and misunderstandings of the nations are giving way to mutual understanding of and mutual confidence in one another's good intentions and motives. And this is unquestionably due to the fact that the nations are beginning to acknowledge their common origin, recognizing the same All-Father and Common Creator and the same Supreme Ruler, who is King over all. It is through this conviction alone that one nation, or one individual, can be of any help to any other nation, or to anybody else. A reformed criminal was once asked, "When did your reformation begin?" His answer was: "With my talk with Lord Shaftsbury." "What did he say to you?" "I don't remember much, except that he took my hand in his and said, 'Jack, you'll be a man yet!'" Wonderful is the power of brotherly sympathy and confidence! Mighty is that power for good upon the nations of the world as well as upon the different individuals in a community.

HE WHO DIED AT AZAN

(FROM THE ARABIC)

He who died at Azan sends
Hope to comfort all his friends.

Faithful friends! It lies, I know,
Pale and white and cold as snow;
And ye say, "Abdullah's dead!"
Weeping at the feet and head.
I can see your falling tears,
I can hear your sighs and prayers;
Yet I smile and whisper this—
"I am not the thing you kiss;
Cease your tears, and let it lie;
It was mine, it is not I."

Sweet friends! what the women lave
For the last sleep of the grave,
Is a hut which I am quitting,
Is a garment no more fitting,
Is a cage from which, at last,
Like a bird my soul hath passed.
Love the inmate, not the room—
The wearer, not the garb—the plume
Of the eagle, not the bars
That kept him from those splendid stars.

Loving friends! Be wise, and dry
Straightway every weeping eye—
What ye left upon the bier
Is not worth a single tear.
'Tis an empty sea-shell—one
Out of which the pearl is gone;
The shell is broken, it lies there;
The pearl, the all, the soul, is here.
'Tis an earthen jar, whose lid
Allah sealed, the while it hid
That treasure of His treasury,
A mind that loved Him; let it lie!
Let the shard be earth's once more,
Since the gold is in His store!

Allah glorious! Allah good!
Now Thy world is understood;
Now the long, long wonder ends;
Yet ye weep, my foolish friends,
While the man whom ye call dead,
In unspoken bliss, instead,
Lives and loves you; lost, 'tis true,
For the light that shines for you;
But in the light ye cannot see
Of undisturbed felicity—
In a perfect paradise
And a life that never dies.

Farewell, friends; but not farewell;
Where I am, ye, too, shall dwell,
I am gone before your face,
A moment's worth, a little space,
When ye come where I have stepped,
Ye will wonder why we wept;
Ye will know, by true love taught,
That here is all, and there is naught.
Weep awhile, if ye are fain—
Sunshine still must follow rain.

* * * * *

Be ye certain all seems love,
Viewed from Allah's throne above;
Be ye stout of heart, and come
Bravely onward to your home!

MOURNING CEREMONIES

When a man dies, they who survive him ask,—What property has he left behind him? The Angel, who bends over the dying man, asks,—What good deeds has he sent before him?—The Koran.

THE question has often arisen as to the proper wording of mourning proclamations and of mourning ceremonies. The following mandate and synopsis of memorial ceremonies observed in 1886, issued by Imperial Potentate Walter M. Fleming, may be taken as models, they having been observed in the case of the death of Noble Mahmoud Pasha El Falaki, Grand Shareef, who died in Cairo, where he had long been a devoted, faithful member of the Mystic Shrine, and whose body now rests in the family vault in Iman Chaffrai Cemetery, which was finished just on the eve of his death, at the age of seventy-five years. On the very evening of the death of this noted Shareef he had been conversing with a friend upon the affairs of the Order, recounting the chief points of an historical paper he was about to produce relating to the Shrine of Sinai, in southern Syria, during the stirring and bitter years of its struggle for the perpetuity of its ancient rites against the fanatic Kurds of the twelfth century.

His funeral was attended by hundreds of mourners, many of them being Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, including His Excellency Sidki Pasha, Aid-de-camp to the Khedive, who represented His Highness; His Excellency Alee Pasha Shareef, their Excellencies the Ministers, the heads of government departments, and pupils of the government schools. At the tomb His Excellency Noble Dr. Abbata Pasha delivered an eloquent and touching eulogy.

The death of Noble Mahmoud Pasha was officially reported by Noble John Worthington, United States Consul at Malta, and the representative of the Imperial Council in the near East. His splendid tribute appears in the published Proceedings of the Imperial Council for 1886.

The Imperial Potentate issued, January 4, 1886, the following:

EDICT OF SORROW

Nobility of the Mystic Shrine

Proclamation emanating from the Congress of the Imperial Councils of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, United States of America, to all Illustrious Potentates, Rabbans, and Noble Shareefs throughout the jurisdiction of the Western Hemisphere.

AFFLICTION! — DISTRESS! — SORROW!

Illustrious Noble Ali Mahmoud Pasha El Falaki, Grand Shareef al Muhazzi of Al Kaheerah Temple, Cairo, Egypt, under domain of the Crescent, is dead.

This renowned savant of the Order Bektasheeyeh, of Mystic Shrine, is officially announced departed to the Unseen Temple. Therefore ye, the Official Corps extant, Imperial and Subordinate, are hereby commanded for the full term of the next three crescent moons after this mandate, within the Mystic Sanctuaries of the Shrine, in accordance with the ancient Oriental custom, to drape your altars and tombs with the insignia of mourning; and let the symbolic funeral urn be placed upon the sacred Black Stone, there to exhale incense during all ceremonials, and inscribe upon your temple records notice of the same, in obedience to Supreme Decree.

WALTER M. FLEMING,
Imperial Potentate.

W. S. PATERSON,
Imperial Recorder.

The synopsis prepared by the Most Illustrious Imperial Potentate for the observance of the memorial ceremonies is as below:

"With the sacred names of Allah (99 written), and of triangular fold of fabric, girded with the cord of green, next thy heart and skin, and armed with Faith, thou shall prove invulnerable to infirmity, disease, or misfortune," for "Al Khaleek al Bakey" ("He is the Creator, the Everlasting").

APOTHEOSIS.

"The Inevitable," "The rending asunder," of Al Koran, and the final individualization of the soul. "Sayodjyam," the transformation only possible through death. The recognition of Allah the Most High. The officials, although clad in steel, gold, and glory, shall bow down, in reverence and humility, and proclaim that "Allah is God," the Merciful and Compassionate.

Our most glorious attributes are to be exemplified, acquitting ourselves of all temporal thoughts, and preparing, at any sacrifice, to expiate all sin; elucidating the embodiment and personification of the "great Islam," with Pageants, Zaims, Defenders, Retinue, and wailing Dervishes in sandalled feet, amid the sweet perfumes of Arabia's incense, from the swinging censers and altars of sacrifice, accompanied by fervent music, deep, sad, austere, in weird and mystic melody; and the earnestness and sincerity of the devotion should be so absolute as to render the sanctuary of the Shrine a Temple of Purity, acceptable even for the presence of "Allah," "The Most High."

Thus shall ye teach that Powers Supreme govern our destinies. Admonish your disciples to respect every religion, even if believing none, and give assurance that a noble heart may throb alike in the breast of Arab, Christian, Greek, or Turk. Exemplify the attributes of Toleration, Truth, and Justice. War against fanaticism and superstition, and demonstrate retribution. Welcome to your altars all duly qualified, enlightened men, who believe in God, without regard to nativity or faith, ever remembering our attributes, as ancient as the corner-stone of Mohammed's Temple at Mecca, as secret as the Moslem Oath that binds the Tribes of Africa to "Allah," or their God, which are derived from the deep, mysterious legends of the Koran.

THUS DO WE APPEAL!

Given under Hand and Seal, this first day of the Arabic month Rabih ul Akhir, A. H. 1303 (January 7, A. D. 1886).

WALTER M. FLEMING,
Imperial Potentate.

WILLIAM S. PATERSON,
Imperial Recorder.

It is related in the records that honor to the departed was exemplified in the splendor of the commemoration made by all the temples. In Mecca Temple the altar was draped with a rich pall, behind which stood a symbolic Egyptian tomb. In the East rested a catafalque, on which were laid the purple regalia and scimitar of a Past Potentate of the Order. Vases with emblematical flowers stood in appropriate places. The Grand Potentate was richly arrayed, and the other officers were clad in garments of more or less gorgeousness. The Nobles wore black gowns and fezzes. The rites, which were long and elaborate, consisted chiefly of readings from the Koran and the book called "Pearls of Faith," interspersed with solemn music, the burning of incense, and other symbolical observances peculiar to the Order.

A MEMORY

"Farewell, be it ours to embellish thy pillow
With everything beauteous that grows in the deep:
Each flower of the rock and each gem of the billow
Shall sweeten thy bed and illumine thy sleep.

"Around thee shall glisten the loveliest amber
That ever the sorrowing seabird has wept:
With many a shell in whose hollow-wreathed chamber
The Peris of Ocean by moonlight have slept.

"We'll dive where the gardens of coral lie darkling,
And plant all the rosiest stems at thy head:
We'll seek where the sands of the Caspian are sparkling,
And gather their treasures to strew o'er thy bed.

"Farewell — farewell — until pity's sweet fountain
Is lost in the hearts of the good and the brave,
They'll sigh for MAHOMET who came to the MOUNTAIN,
And treasure the mem'ries his presence there gave."

FUNERAL CUSTOMS OF MOHAMMEDANS

The word "Oriental" in this connection is used as "Oriental Mohammedan," and not as "Oriental Christian." Although there are points of divergence between the Christian mourning ceremonies in the Orient and those observed in the Occident, yet both are distinctively Christian, based on a firm faith in Christ Jesus and His Gospel, and regulated by the tenets of the Christian church. Mohammedan, therefore, is the one prominent word to be remembered in this connection, whether it be the Arabian Mohammedan, or the Turkish Mohammedan. Both being devout followers of Mohammed and firm believers in his Koran, there is, naturally, a close resemblance between their funeral customs, observances, rites and ceremonies. The language used in these ceremonies, both by the Arab and the Turk, is Arabic, the sacred language of the Koran, notwithstanding the fact that neither the Turkish "imam," priest, nor the layman understands Arabic, even though he may read an Arabic writing.

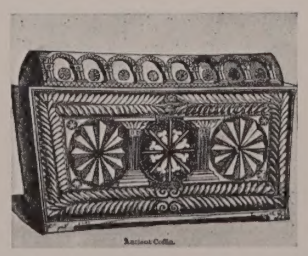
The Mohammedans bury their dead on the day of demise, unless the hour of passing is too near sunset for the necessary burial ceremonies. Should a Mohammedan pass away in the suburb of a town bounded by a river, his body cannot be brought into the town for burial. It must be buried in the suburban cemetery, even though the deceased owned a family lot in the town cemetery. But if dissolution take place in the town, the body can be taken for interment in the cemetery on the opposite side of the river, if so desired. The idea underlying this prohibition is that a corpse brought into the town brings with it misfortune or ill-luck, which must, by all means, be avoided, whereas one could be taken out of the town without any ill-luck for the suburban district. As soon as the soul of a Mohammedan takes its flight to the Unseen Temple, some male relative hastens to the professional "corpse-washer," who is a man for the male dead and an elderly woman for the female dead. The washer thoroughly cleanses the body, which has been laid upon a funeral frame placed in the courtyard of the former dwelling. This is the first step towards securing a place for the deceased in Paradise, "Jannat." The corpse-washer then enshrouds the body in a cloth brought from Mecca by the departed, or some member of his family. If the family be poor and possesses no Mecca shroud, an ordinary winding-sheet answers the purpose.

During the ceremony, the female members of the family remain secluded, as is the custom on all occasions where men's presence is needed. After the preliminary prayers at home, the male relatives, neighbors and friends, headed by the "imam," start for the mosque. The corpse, which is placed in a casket, or on a stretcher, as the case may be, is shouldered by four volunteer mourners. From time to time, the carriers are replaced or relieved by other mourners. In the course of the procession, one of the mourners keeps shouting in a stentorian voice, "Eternal blessings on him who says, 'May Allah have mercy on the soul of the deceased!'" The proclamation is heartily and devoutly responded to by all the Moslems who hear this request.

The mosque reached, the carriers deposit their burden upon the black stone block near the gate, and the whole company, temporarily relieved of the body, enter the main auditorium of the mosque to pray for the repose of the departed soul. In some Mohammedan districts, it is customary to transfer, just before the start for the mosque, to some volunteer "sin-buyer," corresponding to the ancient "scape-goat," the sins of the deceased. The volunteer receives a certain amount of money for taking upon his shoulders all sins of the lamented, leaving the latter light-hearted for his passage across the River of Death separating the earth from Paradise. A bridge, "keener than a sword and thinner than a hair," is supposed to be stretched across the river. He who crosses it unhurt is worthy of the Paradisiac bliss, but a fall seals his doom for all eternity. If the deceased is rich, the muezzin, mounting the minaret, calls the faithful to prayer in a pathetic, sing-song voice. That he is generously paid goes without saying.

Upon the conclusion of the prayers, consisting of the concerted recital of prescribed portions of the Koran and repeated prostrations toward Mecca, the funeral cortége resumes its somber journey to the cemetery, in the same manner as before. At the cemetery the casket, or, if a stretcher has been used, the enshrouded body, is lowered into the grave and a short piece of board, known in Turkish as "tenesheer takhtassee," is placed over against the corpse's head. Then the mourners, facing Mecca, stand around the open grave and repeat in an audible voice the final Arabic prayers, in all of which devotions the "imam" is the leader. Prayers concluded, volunteer hands fill the grave with earth and then comes the homeward trip. The Mohammedans believe, however, that during all these funeral rites—at home, on the way to the mosque and cemetery, and in the course of the final devotions—the deceased is blissfully unconscious of his demise. He thinks that some one else is in his place, and that he is one of the mourners participating in the ceremonies. Consequently, when his supposed fellow-mourners are through with their devotions he, too, like the rest, is ready to go home. Then comes the rude or startling awakening. Up to that moment he has no idea that he is lying in a casket or under the sod. Therefore, when he makes a movement as though he would start, his forehead comes in a sudden, unexpected, forceful and painful contact with the above-mentioned fatal piece of board. Then the fact dawns upon him that no longer is he a living being. Thus, he remains in his recumbent position, resigned to his fate, or "kismet," that he is in the hands of the All-compassionate, Omniscient, Almighty Allah.

These constitute the funeral rites observed by the Mohammedan people, with more or less elaborateness—in keeping with the station in life of the deceased, or according to the exigencies and requirements of the climate, or in conformity with the time-honored local customs which are of secondary importance. In Egypt the funeral cortége is followed by hired female mourners, the apparent intensity of whose lamentations is proportionate to the amount of silver or gold they receive as a remuneration. The larger the amount, the more copious the showers of tear-drops and the louder the wailing.



A Caravan on the Banks of the Nile

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY

A CARAVAN ON THE BANKS OF THE NILE

Of all the historic regions in the world, the Nile Valley is among the most interesting. Considered either geographically, historically, or ethnographically, it is nothing less than wonderful; and the flowing of the famous river through the valley, more especially its annual overflow, with the consequent submergence of the river's banks, have made Egypt what it is—one of the oldest centers of civilization. "The River," the "River of Egypt," and the "River of Ethiopia" are a few of the popular names given to the Nile, which is called "Neel," by the Arabs. These people, however, and, in fact, all Mohammedans living in Turkey and Arabia, in referring to the river always use the adjective "mubarek," (pronounced "mew-bah-rek," with the accent on the second syllable), which, in Arabic, means "blessed"—"Neel-i-mubarek," "Nile the blessed." The ancient Egyptians worshiped it as a god, under various names, and their devotion has been transmitted to the present Arabian population of Egypt. The Arabic songs sung in its praise indicate the deep affection in which the "blessed river" is held.

In a straight line, this famous river is at least 2500 miles long, with an average width of 700 yards. Southern Egypt is practically rainless, even in winter, and only slight infrequent showers visit the territory of lower Egypt. Without its regular inundation, the whole land would be but a desert; consequently, the existence of Egypt may be said to depend upon the Nile.

To the superstitious peoples of ancient times, the inundations were mysterious, even supernatural. It is hardly necessary to add that they are caused by regular rains in the countries around the sources of the Nile. About the middle of June the river begins to rise, and continues to do so for three months. In August it overflows its banks, and reaches its highest point about the twentieth of September. Thus, from the middle of August until toward the end of October, the whole land resembles a vast lake, in which the towns appear as islands connected by dikes. The thick slimy mud which the waters bring and deposit on the soil, causes wonderful fertility. It is like a coat of rich dressing, and the seed, being immediately sown upon it, without digging or plowing, springs up rapidly, grows with luxuriance and ripens into abundance. In seasons when the waters reach the height of twenty-two feet, there is an early and rich harvest.

Machines have been used in Egypt from time immemorial in order to raise the water to higher ground. These are wheels known as "shadoof," (pronounced "shah-doof," with the accent on the last syllable), and resembling a well-sweep, to which buckets are attached. One kind is operated by oxen, another by men. It would be hard to imagine a more monotonous task. An aged man, whose whole life had been spent in this work, was asked by a traveler to tell of some great event that he could remember. After long thought, he answered, "Many years ago the water-wheel broke." This was his life story.

The beginning and progress of the Nile's rise are observed by a special instrument known as a Nilometer, the oldest form of which may be seen on the little island opposite Cairo, being over a thousand years old. During the greater part of the year the Nile water is muddy, yet when purified by settling, it furnishes the softest and sweetest of water for drinking.

The question, "How long before the Christian era was there an advanced civilization in the Nile Valley?" cannot be satisfactorily answered. During excavations in the valley, a piece of glazed pottery was found at such a depth that some Egyptologists thought it must have been deposited there as long ago as 12,000 years B. C., but such estimates are often wide of the mark. The oldest monument in the Nile Valley was probably erected about 2200 B. C.

The cultivated, or cultivable area of Egypt is 5,626 square miles, a little less than the combined area of Rhode Island and Connecticut. About the middle of spring the soil is gray and dusty, and in the autumn the surface of the country is a vast lake of reddish water; but the splendor of the Nile Valley is seen in winter. In this season, Egypt is a succession of beautiful gardens, verdant meadows, fields bedecked with flowers, and waving oceans of grain, all depending upon the annual inundation of the great river. No wonder that Herodotus called Egypt "the gift of the Nile."

The Egyptian sky is an ever pure, unclouded arch. The atmosphere has a glare which the eye can scarcely bear, and the burning sun scorches vast and unprotected plains. The only trees are the date-palms, which afford but a pale and uncertain shade.

The caravan is a characteristic scene of the land of the Pharaohs, as well as of other parts of Africa and Asia. The human element of a caravan consists of pilgrims to sacred shrines, ordinary travelers, or merchants organized and equipped for an extended journey, traveling in a procession. The Asiatic and African regions traversed by these caravans are infested by robbers and hostile tribes, and from time immemorial bloody encounters have taken place on the banks of the Nile and on the vast stretches of the Sahara and Desert of Gobi, to say nothing of the seemingly endless tracts including Mesopotamia, Syria, Palestine, Turkestan and Central Asia.

Camels are the historic and time-honored means of conveyance across these monotonous, parched, robber-infested regions, although horses, mules, and even donkeys, have, in certain districts, replaced the "ships of the desert," the "land-ships," or the "carriers of the desert," as they are popularly called, and "Job's beasts," in the language of the poetic Arab. Job, of the Scriptures, perhaps the first Arabian sheik of note known to sacred writers, was the owner of three thousand of these useful animals. Hence, the Arab, in speaking of the camel—"jamal"—says, "Job's beast is a monument of Allah's mercy." The Arab loves his "jamal" as ardently as he loves his patron saint, Job—"Naby Ayoub."

From the earliest times, camel caravans have been used for transportation. To the ancient peoples of sultry climes, camels were, as they are to their modern successors, the only means of exchanging the products of different lands across the almost pathless deserts. These patient and enduring creatures were made serviceable even in warfare, as they have been in modern times in the Sudan campaigns, by Lord Kitchener, Sirdar of Egypt, who formed them into "camelries." Among the well-known camel-owners of ancient times, in addition to Job, may be mentioned Abraham, ("Khaleel-Ullah," "The Friend of Allah"); the Queen of Sheba, the Ishmaelites, the Midianites and the Cushites. Highly interesting, historically, is the Biblical description of the Ishmaelitish caravan connected with the early life of Joseph, who later became prime minister of Egypt: "And they" (Joseph's brethren) "lifted up their eyes and looked, and, behold, a company of Ishmaelites came from Gilead, with their camels bearing spicery and balm and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt. * * * And * * * they sold Joseph to the Ishmaelites for twenty pieces of silver: and brought Joseph into Egypt." The sight of a caravan of camels is one that can never be forgotten.

So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon; but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

A CARAVAN ON THE BANKS OF THE NILE

Of all the historic regions in the world, the Nile Valley is among the most interesting. Considered either geographically, historically, or ethnographically, it is nothing less than wonderful; and the flowing of the famous river through the valley, more especially its annual overflow, with the consequent submergence of the river's banks, have made Egypt what it is—one of the oldest centers of civilization. "The River," the "River of Egypt," and the "River of Ethiopia" are a few of the popular names given to the Nile, which is called "Neel," by the Arabs. PRIMITIVE RELIGIONS

By REV. GEORGE F. PENTECOST, D. D.
London, England

THERE is a disposition in certain quarters, among a special class of so-called scientists and culturists, to ignore religion as being at best a superstition, and unworthy of serious consideration. This cavalier method of disposing of religion is one which really scientific and serious minds cannot accept. Religion will not down at the bidding of those who, like the fool, say in their hearts, "there is no God." It is true that religion cannot be weighed in a balance or measured by a foot rule. It cannot be discovered by the telescope, discerned with the microscope, analyzed in a retort, nor resolved by the use of solutions. But it does not follow, therefore, that because religion is not a matter for the investigation of material science, it does not exist as part and parcel of human history—the religious instinct being inseparable from the constitution of man.

We might just as well ignore man's consciousness as man's religion, for wherever there is consciousness there is found religion. We might as well ignore civilization as religion, for wherever there is a history of civilization open to our study and investigation, there we find religion. Nor is religion confined to the civilized races of mankind, for it is present as really among barbarous as among cultured peoples; but as the modern culturists deal more exclusively with the civilized nations of the past, we confine our remarks to that section of the human family in this inquiry.

The more deeply we look into this matter, with the abundant materials furnished for our study by the archæologist and the philologist, the more we discover that religion and civilization march together. This also we find to be true, that religion is not so much the outgrowth of civilization as that civilization and all mental culture are the outgrowth of religion. In fact, religion has been, as it still is, the great inspiration and formative motive underlying all civilization. Moreover, we find upon closer study that racial characteristics do not account for the differences in the underlying ideas of the various religious cults of the world. On the other hand, religious ideas most likely account for the characteristic differences in races and civilizations. * * * Attention is invited to the question of religion as it existed and was developed in the families of the three sons of Noah, who practically divided the world between them, after the dispersion following the confusion of tongues at Babel. It is fairly admitted by all scholars that the tenth chapter of Genesis gives us the best clue to the origin of the three great divisions of the human family among whom religion has been most perfectly developed. The families of Shem, Ham, and Japheth were the progenitors of the races with which we have most to do, and whose monuments and histories are coming more and more under our easy inspection. It is true that Genesis does not give us any account of the Chinese, Negroes, or the North and South American Indians. But we are not to suppose that that wonderful chapter was intended to give us a complete scientific account of the whole human family for the purpose of a purely scientific, ethnological, and genealogical study; but that the intention was to treat only of those families in which the main current of history is found, and for the purpose of comparison with reference to the development of the religion of the true God. It does teach us, however, that the whole human race was of one blood and one speech. No doubt the Mongolian, the Negro, the American Indian, and some other peoples, were the collateral offspring of the sons of Noah. But as the chosen people of God did not come in contact with them in the course of their religious development, they are left out of the tables as having no immediate relevancy to the matter in hand; just as the people of the land of Nod are not genealogically traced in the records preserved to us, though it is intimated that they, also, were descendants of Adam who had wandered away to the east of Eden. In the final outworking of the purpose of God, however, these most distant and far-lost tribes of men are included in the covenant promise given to Abraham. Indeed, now that the western sons of Japheth—the Indo-Germanic peoples—have largely returned to the tents of Shem, they are becoming the great instruments in the hands of God for carrying the covenant promise of salvation back to the original and main stock of that family—the Indo-Hindus—as also to those far-dispersed families, the Mongolians, the Negroes, the American Indians, and other scattered races, who are also being gathered in by the same agencies.

Instead of dividing the human race, for the purpose of this study, into two main streams as we are in the habit of doing with respect to the true people of God and the heathen nations, we should bear in mind rather that the race parted into three main streams—the Shemites, the Hamites, and the Japhethites. We, therefore, find three distinct types of religious development set forth to us, not only in the Bible account, but in that furnished by the historical monuments and ancient libraries now being so wonderfully opened up by the indomitable patience and labor of the archæologist and philologist.

In tracing these three families we discover geographical, linguistic, civilizing, moral, and religious tendencies which characterize them severally. It will be of interest and profit to take up each of these branches in turn and note some of their chief characteristics, especially as to their religious and moral developments. It is only by so doing that we can arrive at a clear idea of what is involved in the worship which characterized the people of God in the most primitive times, and thus fairly contrast it with the false religions with which they were surrounded and had to contend. In this way we shall perceive, in some measure, how the same conflict between the true and false in religion, morals, and civilization is still present and progressing in our own day and generation. It requires but little investigation to follow the descendants of Ham into the southern belt of country where they developed the religion and civilization, namely, chiefly in Egypt, on the plains about Babylon and Nineveh, in Canaan, and on the eastern shores of the Mediterranean among the Phœnicians. The descendants of Japheth went northward and thence spread away toward the west over Eastern Europe, downward toward and past the Black Sea, over the Isles of Greece, and thence to Italy and northward over Germany, France and the British Isles, even as far north as Sweden and Norway. In other words, the sons of Japheth constitute the great Indo-Germanic races of the North. The Shemites occupied a middle ground, and were for the most part confined to the peninsula of Arabia, Mesopotamia, and northward until they reached the borders of Japheth. It will be seen from this that for practical purposes we might draw three belts of color across the map of Central and Western Asia, Northern Africa and Europe, and locate the descendants of these three sons of Noah respectively in the Northern, Middle, and Southern zones.

Thus, the family of Ham were the ancient Egyptians, Babylonians, Canaanites, and Phoenicians; the family of Japheth, as we have seen, were the Indo-Germanic people, or the old and Western Aryans; the family of Shem, the Arabs proper, and later that remarkable people called out from them into separation unto Jehovah, the family of Abraham—the Hebrews, or Israelites.

The Hamites were the most advanced in civilization, the most aggressive and dominating of the three families. The Japhethites were the most numerous, migratory and intellectually versatile. The Shemites were fewest in numbers, the most conservative, stationary and least progressive, being, in fact, almost surrounded and inclosed by their more powerful neighbors, particularly by the descendants of Ham, by whom, indeed, they were dominated in everything except religious ideas, and in this respect they only escaped extinction.

We shall take a very brief glance at the religious characteristics of these three families, and note some of their other peculiarities.

As has already been intimated, the chief settlement and seat of the Hamite family and power was in Egypt, whence they evidently recrossed the eastern peninsula of Arabia very early in their history. The vast material remains of that great civilization, especially the more recent discoveries, together with the writings of the ancients so lately brought to light, enable us to get a very fair and clear idea of the Hamite religion, which is easily identified with the other branches of the family, namely, the Assyrian, the Phœnician, and the Canaanite. It is to Egypt, however, that we first go to study their peculiarities. We cannot, of course, in this limited survey go very deeply into detail, but can only sketch an outline of these important matters, so as to enable us to get clearly before us the difference between their religion and that of the chosen people.

That the Egyptians were originally monotheists seems pretty evident. Among other reasons for this conclusion I mention the fact of their god Ammon (which is said etymologically to mean the "concealed god") being their chief deity. The idea of Ammon was that of a recondite, incomprehensible divinity, remote from man, hidden, mysterious, "the proper object of profoundest reverence." Ammon was undoubtedly just the fading shadow of the true God, the tradition of whom was dying out among those apostate people. They could not comprehend him, neither could they dismiss him from their minds. They, therefore, built no temple for him, but associated him with their god Ra (or the Sun-god) calling him Ammon-Ra. From this god Ra (or the sun) the Egyptians developed their polytheistic system, with all its ramification of doctrines and cult. It is not our purpose to follow them through this labyrinth of gods, but simply to trace the principal doctrine of their religion, which is essentially a materialistic nature-worship. All the deities of the Egyptians were simply different manifestations of the great god Ra—that is, each, in his or her place, stood for some principle or attribute of material nature. As, for instance, Osiris represented the light of the lower world or the sun from the time of its sinking in the west until its rising again. The Egyptians conceived that from Ra all visible and invisible powers of nature proceeded or were developed. The essential idea of their doctrine of creation, and hence in all the development of their religious ideas, was based on the generative and conceptive principles of nature. For our purpose we may set aside all the other gods, save only Osiris and Isis, who, under one name or another, were the chief objects of worship among these Hamites. These two reappear among the Babylonians, Phœnicians, and Canaanites as Bel or Baal, and Ashtoreth or Astarte, standing for the male and female principles in nature, from which all things have been produced. The great prominence given to this doctrine accounts for all the abominations connected with the worship of these gods, and against which the prophets of the Lord so bitterly inveighed. It was the introduction of this licentious and degrading worship among the children of Israel, chiefly by Jezebel, the wife of Ahab and the daughter of the high priest of the Zidonian Bel, which brought on the fearful conflict between Elijah and Ahab, and led to the overthrow, captivity, and final dispersion among the nations of the ten tribes, to be gathered no more. At a later period the Greeks borrowed these gods and accepted their doctrines, though at the first their worship was neither gross nor sensual. The worship of the generative and conceptive principle in nature the Indo-Hindus also borrowed from the Hamites. This cult was that which led to the grossest corruptions found in all the false religions, leading ultimately to the downfall of their national life and the destruction of their civilization. It was especially this Isis worship which finally corrupted and brought to the dust the splendid civilization and once beautiful and poetic religion of the Greeks. It is this same sensual worship which has degraded the otherwise comparatively pure religion of the ancient Aryans who settled in India. The trailing mark of this loathsome pair, Osiris and Isis—Baal and Astarte—is now over all the land of India, has invaded every temple and household, and utterly corrupted and debased the entire Hindu cult.

But, leaving this disgusting feature of the religion of the Hamites, let us turn to another phase of the Egyptian conception of God. Both Osiris and Isis were children of Ra; and ultimately Isis became the wife, as well as the sister, of Osiris. No wonder religion falls when such a relation is true of the gods. It was early conceived that all life proceeded from the sun; therefore he was deified. It was also observed that all products came from the soil; therefore the soil was deified. Now, the sun is Osiris, and the soil is Isis, though as the consort of Osiris she is the moon. Osiris is incarnated in the river Nile, which, as the father of all the productiveness of Egypt, of course, was a chief object of worship among the people. Isis or the moon was incarnated in the fertile soil of Egypt and hence was worshipped as the mother of good things. The Nile overflowing the soil of Egypt became the generative principle, and the earth or soil the conceptive principle, from which conjointly all the fruits of the earth sprang forth to sustain and bless the life of man. This principle was carried into everything that had life. Later on the chief god Ra became incarnate in certain animals, especially in the bull—Apis—and then in all living creatures; and so they all became objects of worship. Indeed, all nature, whether animate or inanimate, finally became but an incarnation of god, and the ultimate philosophical cult of the Egyptians was that of gross materialistic pantheism—the father and mother of our present day agnosticism and atheistic materialism. Gradually, from worshiping life in animals (for which the bull and cow stood forth as chief representatives), it became apparent that human life was a higher manifestation of God than a mere animal life. But as it was not possible to descend by a leap to self-worship, and not consistent with the dignity of the higher classes to pay worship to the hordes of poor, downtrodden slaves, nor to their captives in war, the worship of the Egyptians was gradually restricted to the ruling classes, and finally centered in the supreme ruler or the Pharaoh who became, later, to all intents and purposes, the only god the Egyptians had. The same was true in the great Mesopotamian kingdoms, and afterwards became true among the Romans, who gradually adopted the religion of Egypt. The worship of the Cæsars was the last downward step in the apostacy of classic Rome, and immediately preceded its utter downfall. In this king-worship we find the culmination of human apostacy from the true God. * * * What untold misery has come upon the human race from this Hamite principle of caste and the deification of mere earthly rulers; and yet, even in Christian lands, this worship of kings and high-caste men, though gradually dying out, continues with us until this day!

The Egyptians believed that God was the author of evil as well as good, on the same principle that the sun in his rising made the light, and in his setting brought on the darkness. They, therefore, worshipped the rising and the setting sun under different names. And as all things were generated from God, why, then, evil as well as good was a part of God's creation and a part of himself. Hence, a great multitude of evil deities, but all representing God. Again, they sought to account for the chief tragedy of human existence—death. They early observed that the sun, which caused all life to spring out of the earth, also passed over it in the dry season and burnt all vegetation to death. The glorious Nile, the incarnation of the father of gods and of nature, the life-giving god, gradually lost itself in the sea. The Nile died away into the Mediterranean. The fruits died off the earth. Man died, and was no more. Therefore, there must be a god to represent this phase of nature, and that god was Typhon. The corresponding god among the Mesopotamian kingdoms was Adar Malik, or "King Adar," or, again, as in the Scriptures, "Adrammelech." Among the Canaanites this awful god is known and familiar to us under the name Moloch, a variation of Malik. The dreadful and abominable rite which chiefly characterized the worship of this god was the offering up of little children to him by casting them alive into the fiery furnace which burned in the midst of the hideous idol. This god also appears in the Tarsus Hercules, in the Indian "Siva, the destroyer," and in the popular Indian goddess, Kali. But in connection with death in nature there was observed the perpetual coming to life again, as in the fertile soil, the field which burned to death by the sun in the dry season, revived again by the overflowing of the Nile. The Nile that ran out and lost itself in the Mediterranean came to life again by the rising of the vapors from the sea, which, returning in rain and snow, fed the sources of the Nile and in turn brought again its life-giving waters to the thirsty land. The fabled Phœnix which burned itself to death and then revived again out of its own ashes, is a symbol of this principle of death and life in the gods. Strange that the gods of a people should be forever dying and coming to life again!

These, then, are the chief points of the religious cult of the Hamite family. Resolved into more simple language, we should say that it was the worship of material nature. A gross and grotesque pantheism in connection with a monistic polytheism—that is, the worship of one god under many forms and images, each one of the various gods having all the attributes of the others, the sum of all being the essence of the one God whom they could not abstractly grasp and who was too remote and dreamy for them to approach.

The Japhethites, as already noted, are the great Indo-Germanic people, of whom we are the descendants. This family went originally to the far north. We have comparatively few historical records or monuments of their early religion—that is, of the religious ideas developed by them after having been broken off from their brethren at the time of the dispersion from Babel. Yet we are not altogether without traditional knowledge of their cult, as it is preserved to us in the noble Sanskrit records—the Vedas. The Japhethites seem to have been a superior race of people, versatile, idealistic, poetic, and simple-minded. They increased with great rapidity, and according to their genius began early to emigrate and spread themselves abroad over the face of the earth northward and westward. The early tradition of their religion is preserved by that branch of the family which passed down from Northern and Central Asia through the Khyber pass into the Punjaub about the time Abraham was called out from the land of Ur of the Chaldees. They were a fair-faced people originally, and of a roaming and restless disposition. The flower of this race is seen in the settlers of Greece, where a later development of their religious idea is noted. Among the German and Northern peoples are seen the heroic qualities of their family. Of their early religious idea—for, like the Hamites, they seem in their dispersion to have lost the traditional revelation of God as handed down to them by Noah—the Vedas gives us some account. Their chief and supreme god was Varuna or the god of light. They did not associate this supreme being with the sun, or even directly with the sunlight, but he was that original light that streams from behind all things and fills the creation with its glory. The sun may have been thought of in later times as the burning eye of the Light-god, just as the rushing wind, roaring over their mountains, sighing through the trees, or gently fanning the cheek, was his breath. They were essentially a poetic people. All their worship and thought about God was light, airy, imaginative, poetic. Associated with Varuna were a number of minor deities or attendants, which were in effect only names for the attributes and characteristics of the Light-god, Varuna. They were not idolators, and had no temples. They worshiped not the light of the sun, the moon, or the stars, but that primitive light which was before and different from either of these. This conception seems to have been a lingering remembrance of the earliest revelation contained in Genesis.

According to a very natural tendency of the human mind and heart, when it loses touch with the true God, materialistic ideas began to manifest themselves among the old Aryans, and they thought of earthly fire as the most fitting symbol of Varuna—Agni. Yet it was not the material fire that they thought so much of as it was the glow of the fire, the warmth of it, its beneficent powers exerted in cookery, etc. The Aryans were never properly materialistic, but rather always idealistic and poetic. To fire—Agni—they presently added another earthly symbol of the "Intelligent Friend and Benefactor of Man," namely, Soma, a mildly intoxicating drink, distilled from the soma plant. Now, as it was not fire, but Agni, the spirit of fire, that was worshiped, so it was not Soma which exhilarated and made them "happy." The early Aryans, as we have said, were not idolaters; they had, at first, neither priest nor temple. Their worship was domestic and private. Theirs was the poetic habit of dreaming about the mysterious powers of nature as being the sign of the presence of Varuna, who made the universe; who sighed in the winds; who burned in the sun by day and glowed in the planets by night; who caused the rain to fall and the rivers to rush along; whose garments were visible in the shadows as they flitted hither and yonder. They not only thought more of the invisible forces than of visible phenomena, but they soon began, like true poets as they were, to attribute moral characteristics to these forces. Then they began to give them names, and these names, being of both the masculine and the feminine order, began to suggest the characteristics of the masculine and feminine in the gods. With them, however, it was never sex, but the other characteristics such as strength and gentleness. The old Aryans were entirely free from the grossly sensual ideas of the Hamites. It is true that, in later times, after their descent into India, they soon came into contact with the Egyptian and Mesopotamian Hamites, from whom they borrowed their ideas of caste, the grosser ideas of sexuality in the gods, and, indeed, all the debasing features which have entered into the originally pure and beautiful nature-worship of our Japhethic fathers' religion.

There are very distinct traces of high moral teaching among these primitive Aryans. Truth, purity, and hospitality, were virtues inculcated. There are evidences of a deep sense of personal sin and transgression which led them to seek Varuna for mercy. Later, we find various ideas of sacrifice, offered to Varuna through Agni, or the hearth fire, or a fire built out in front of the house. Sometimes it was the fruit of the field, the fruit of the cow; sometimes it was life, as the goat, the buffalo, and finally the horse. Where they got their idea of mediation through sacrifice is not clear, beyond many concealed suggestions that it must have been the remaining memory of a yet more primitive revelation. A close study even of the grossest forms of later Hinduism shows many a trace of the primitive revelation and history, of which we have not space to write more fully. A study of the characteristics of the primitive worship of our Aryan fathers can but leave on our minds a feeling of its original simplicity and beauty, nor can we help believing that there were many worshipers of the true God, though they knew him not—children worshiping in the dark, feeling after God, if haply they might find him; and who shall say that many did not find him, who is ever seeking such to worship him—that is, truly spiritual men?

Passing from the older branch of the Aryan family, or the Japhethites, we see in their Greek descendants all the beautiful and splendid characteristics of the family genius breaking forth into most perfect flower. In Zeus we have the great god of light and the father of all the gods. In their idealism and poetry we see all the characteristics of their fathers. The religion of the Greeks was essentially a worship of the unseen forces of nature—not of its phenomena. Originally there was no grossness in it; much less was there any of the coarse materialism of the Egyptians. To them, God was not in the visible phenomena, but in the mysterious and eternal invisible powers lying behind all of phenomena. We must look for their religion as it is embodied chiefly in the glorious sculptures in which the people recognized their gods—not the material marble, but the form into which it had been sculptured—Beauty, Grace and Strength, and in the beautiful myths in which these characteristics are set forth; in their poetry, tragic and otherwise, in which the ideal and not the material is seen and recognzed. Like their Aryan ancestors, it is always the invisible, and mysterious, and beautiful that they see and worship. Not the water of the rushing torrent, but the force and motion of it. Not the water of the murmuring brook, but the gentleness of its motion, and the music which it makes rippling over its pebbly bed. Not the light of the morning, but the dawn of the day. Not the night, but the mystery of the creeping shadows. Not the wind or the zephyr, but the noise of the wind and the whisper and kiss of the zephyr. Even after the Egyptians and the Phœnicians had made a great impact upon these Aryan Greeks, who borrowed from them their Hamite gods, it was not the grosser conceptions. For instance, in Aphrodite, we scarcely, at the beginning, see anything of Isis, or the sexual idea of womanhood and the conceptive principle of nature, but only the grace and beauty of the female form and the gentleness and charm of the female character.

These same characteristics—I mean the ideal and poetical—may be seen in the sterner conceptions of the German and Norseman. Originally, it was never with them the materialistic and gross, but the idealistic and the poetic. With them the powers of nature rather than nature are worshiped, and all these idealized and set forth in most charming myths, legends, and fairy stories. The nymphs of the woods and waters, of the darkness and the shadows, and all the delightful fairy stories these poetic people gave birth to and incorporated with their religion. It is true that there are some awfully stern and terrible aspects of God in Thor and Woden, but none of the gross and bestial traits of the gods of Egypt and Babylon, of Phœnicia and Canaan.

The Greeks were finally corrupted, first in their religious ideas by contact with Egypt and Phœnicia, and later on in morals and life, and so fell from their high estate into the mire and filth of Hamitism. Even so did Israel fall from her high estate into the arms of Baal and Astarte. The Greek god Zeus is, undoubtedly, of Aryan, or primitive Indo-Germanic origin, but later corruptions, borrowed from the Egyptians, degraded this immortal god to a human or mortal being, subject to birth and death—a mere nature-god. This remark is also true of others of the Greek deities of the first rank.

Considering the whole Greek conception of religion and worship, we find that in primitive times it was not only infinitely purer and higher than the Egyptian, but that it carried with it all the characteristics of the genius of the Aryan family. Idealism, poetry, art, intellectuality of the higher sort, and even spirituality. We may say that the fundamental religious ideas of the Greeks found expression in their art, their poetry, their philosophy, their love of the true, the beautiful, and the good: but their evil communications with the Egyptians and the Phœnicians corrupted their morals as well as their civilization, and ultimately led to their downfall. Considered from their own point of view, we see all the proper characteristics of the Indo-European religion. A most careful student of this matter remarks of the Greek: He "is a most decided idealist, in direct contrast to the blank materialism of more recent times (the final result of Egyptian ideas early communicated through contact with their religious conception of the gods). In mountain, grotto, river, waves, and the like, the material part interests him not at all; in his sight it entirely fades away. What does concern him, what interests and affects him, is the grace, the clearness, and the movement of the fountain, the unchanging might of the river, the shady darkness of the grove, the luxuriant moisture of the meadow, the play of color on the waves of the ocean—in short, it is these, and other similar spiritual qualities, as it were, which react upon his soul. These he does not regard as qualities belonging to the body, but he feels them to be manifestations of life, forms of divine activity; and these divine energies at once become to him divine figures and divine persons. In Helios, the Greek did not worship the sun, but the god who causes the sun to rise and bestows upon men the benefits of light. In Zeus he did not worship the heavens, but the high, ethical, divine personality that gained by lot the heavens in ether and clouds. Among the Greeks, in the bloom of Indo-European mythology, there was preserved, and at the same time developed in a peculiar manner, precisely that ideal and ethical character which we ascribe to the Indo-European genius in general."

It is a pleasure to turn from this review of the religion of the Hamites and Japhethites, in the former of which families all is so gross and bestial, and in the latter all so vague and unreal, though to a certain extent pure and ennobling, to consider the fundamental idea of the Shemites, from whom sprang the Hebrew nation, and to whom, in an especial manner, pertained the covenants and promises of God. The Shemites, as we have seen, were mainly settled in Upper Arabia and Mesopotamia. They were almost entirely dominated by the Hamites, as far as their civilization and material condition were concerned; but there is every reason to believe that they kept and maintained in comparative purity their traditional religious and moral life. At least there is no evidence that they were idolaters or polytheists, except when apostatized to the Hamites. For a record of the religious cult of this family of the human race, we must depend almost exclusively upon the Bible, the most ancient and authentic record of primitive times. The name Shem is significant, as, indeed, are also the names of Ham and Japheth. Ham, meaning "hot," and probably pointing to human passions which so largely characterized the religion of his descendants. Japheth, meaning "enlargement," points to that vast Indo-European population which sprang from him, coupled with the activity of temperament which was so characteristic of his family. Shem signifies "name," and probably points to that "Name" above all names, which from the first was the object of his contemplation.

The Hamites were dwellers in cities and great and mighty builders, and were devoted to the arts and sciences. They were great astronomers and mathematicians. They cultivated the soil and increased its productiveness. The Japhethites, originally nomadic, became travelers, soldiers, artists and poets, philosophers and civilizers, rather as culturists than materialists. We need only to contrast the architecture of the Egyptians with that of the Greeks to see the vast and essential difference between the civilization developed by the one religious idea and that of the other. The one is earthly and heavy; the other is heavenly and light. The one is from beneath, the other from above. The Shemites were never city builders. They were not even agriculturists. They were nomadic—shepherds and herdsmen—perhaps in some cases merchants, traveling from one part of the world to another. They lived in tents, not in houses—in the open fields, and not in towns and cities. Their temple was the open henvens—their god was an invisible NAME, whom they adored and worshiped in spirit, without even an attempt to embody or identify him with any visible phenomena. He was the creator, but never the creature. He was over all, above all, and blessed. The three cults were as follows: Hamites, materialists; Japhethites, idealists; Shemites, spiritualists. Their religious ideas were derived, probably, as follows: Hamites, from observation—material science; Japhethites, from speculation—philosophical culture; Shemites, from inspiration—revelation.

SCENES IN EGYPT

THE GREAT PYRAMID.

The Great Pyramid covers about thirteen acres. Sir William Tite, a learned English architect of the last century, who was a Fellow of the Royal Society and president of the Institute of British Architects, estimated that it contains ninety million cubic feet of stone, and that it could not be built (in his time) for less than thirty million sterling, approximately $150,000,000.

Nicholas Shaw was the first modern traveler who explored the Pyramids, about 1721. Since his day, many learned men have followed in his footsteps, among them Niebuhr, in 1761; a party of French explorers, 1799-1801; Wilkinson 1831; Lepsius, 1842-45; Maspero, about 1880; Petrie, De Morgan and others.

The labor of ascending the Great Pyramid by the gigantic stairway, formed of the courses of stone used in its construction, is amply rewarded by the outlook from the top, where there is a flat space some thirty feet square.

The view from this tremendous height must be actually seen to be duly appreciated. The desert, the Sphinx, the Nile, and the city of Cairo with its famous "Citadel," known as the "Castle of the Nile,"—these are all displayed, like a gigantic multi-colored bas-relief map, before the eyes of the tourist, and especially of the thoughtful, the alert and the learned. In the near-by city of Cairo, a grove of tapering minarets rises like sculptured palm-trees from an undulating mass of foliage and bulbous domes. Beyond these is a delightful belt of verdure, and like a broad band of silver, gleams the historic Nile, which bore, on its motherly breast, the basket cradle of the infant Moses, and later the regal barge of the enchantress Cleopatra.

Still farther westward stretches the tawny desert, the "Garden of Allah" to the Arab, and symbol of perpetual desolation to the rest of humanity. Next are seen the Sphinx and the lesser pyramids. The former will ever prove a source of study and research in spite of the tomes already written concerning its remarkable history. Having a head in human form, and a leonine body, the stone monster, for so it is, typifies or embodies a union of intelligence and strength. It was hewn out of the natural rock on the edge of the desert, and measures sixty-four feet from the crown of its head to the paved platform on which rest the outspread paws. The sand has long since encroached upon the space between the huge limbs, but formerly it was kept free from all incursions of the desert, and there stood an altar dedicated to the rising sun, before which must have knelt thousands of worshipers. The unchanging Sphinx has probably been in existence six thousand years. Two milleniums had passed over its hoary head when Abraham was born. It is probably the oldest relic of human workmanship that the world knows—a silent witness of the greatest fortunes and the biggest calamities of Time.

"O sleepless Sphinx!
Thy sadly patient eyes,
Thus mutely gazing o'er the shifting sands,
Have watched earth's countless dynasties arise,
Stalk forth like spectres waving gory hands,
Then fade away with scarce a lasting trace
To mark the secret of their dwelling-place:
O sleepless Sphinx!

"O changeless Sphinx!
In the fair dawn of time,
So grandly sculptured from the living rock;
Still bears thy face its primal look sublime,
Surviving all the hoary ages' shock;
Still thou art royal in thy proud repose
As when the sun on tuneful Memnon rose:
O changeless Sphinx!

"O voiceless Sphinx!
Thy solemn lips are dumb;
Time's awful secrets holdst thou in thy breast;
Age follows age,—revering pilgrims come
From every clime to urge the same request,—
That thou wilt speak. Poor creatures of a day,
In calm disdain thou seest them die away:
O voiceless Sphinx!

"Majestic Sphinx!
Thou crouchest by a sea
Whose fawn-hued wavelets clasp thy buried feet;
Whose desert surface, petrified like thee,
Gleams white with sails of many an Arab fleet;
Or when wild storms its waves to fury sweep,
High o'er thy form the tawny billows leap:
Majestic Sphinx!

"Eternal Sphinx!
The pyramids are thine;
Their giant summits guard thee night and day;
On thee they look when stars in splendor shine,
Or while around their crests the sunbeams play;
Thine own coevals, who with thee remain
Colossal genii of the boundless plain:
Eternal Sphinx!"

And the "Citadel" as seen from the Great Pyramid is the most conspicuous object in the distance. What stirring memories of the past centuries cluster around the hoary head of the "Citadel." Saladin, the Moslem, and foe of the ardent Crusader, Richard Cœur de Lion, built it, and in the accomplishment of this several small pyramids were sacrificed for building material. Saladin's successors lived in this mammoth and magnificent "Citadel" in Oriental splendor, as did also Mehemet Ali, the founder of the present Egyptian Khediviate, 1769-1849. It was here also, in 1811, that this relentless ruler caused his political enemies, four hundred and seventy mamelukes to be massacred after having feasted them at a sumptuous banquet.

The entrance to the Great Pyramid is on the north side, some fifty feet above the ground. From this an inclined passage-way leads downward for hundreds of feet, to a large subterranean chamber, about forty-six by twenty-seven feet, and eleven feet in height, also a small tomb chamber, their location being about ninety feet below the centre of the Great Pyramid. High up, near the middle of the huge pile, are two smaller chambers, known as the Queen's Chamber and the King's Chamber, the first reached by the first or main passage-way, from which branches the great hall or gallery leading to the King's Chamber. This gallery is a hundred and fifty-five feet in length, and twenty-eight feet in height, and very narrow.

There is a large uncovered granite sarcophagus in the King's Chamber, of whose original tenant—if one there was—no trace now remains. Other passages and chambers, as yet inaccessible, may reward the future explorer with a key to the mysteries of the Pyramids. Should we not pity the man to whom they are but a "big pile of rocks?"

While it has always been the general belief that the Pyramids were intended as tombs for the mighty kings of a mighty people, this view has been sharply attacked by well known astronomers, astrologers, mathematicians and Bible students, each presenting an imposing array of evidence to prove his own theory. The literature on the subject is very extensive, and its details are too technical to be of general interest, but a short description of the Great Pyramid as it appears today may not be amiss, the smaller Pyramids being built on a similar plan.

A road runs directly from Ghizeh to the Pyramids, which are built upon a rocky plateau. The length of each side of the Great Pyramid is approximately seven hundred and fifty feet, and the height about four hundred and fifty feet, several feet having doubtless been worn away from the outside during the countless ages.

Maspero, the noted Egyptologist, says: "The causeway to bring the stone to the Great Pyramid, from the Nile, employed 100,000 men, relieved every three months, for ten years, or, in all 4,000,000 men, and twenty years more were spent, with the labor, in each, of 360,000 men, in building the pyramid itself. Thus, in all, 7,000,000 men toiled in forced labor, to rear this amazing monument."

GATEWAY TO KARNAK AND THE AVENUE OF RAMS.

The Temple of Karnak is the most wonderful of all the remains of Thebes, the oldest ruined city known. With the exception of the Pyramids, the Temple of Karnak is the largest and most imposing ruin, not only in Egypt, but in the world. Its approach was formerly by an avenue nearly two miles long, lined by some two thousand colossal sphinxes, crouching side by side, a few of which are still discernible. This avenue is popularly known as the "Avenue of Rams." It has been facetiously remarked that it is fortunate that many of the sphinxes are beheaded, as they are thus spared the sight of Karnak's degradation. At the extreme end of this avenue, and beyond the trees shown in the illustration, is the often-pictured "Gateway to Karnak," seventy feet in height. Passing through this gigantic outer gate, the ruined temple of Karnak is reached. It is magnificent in conception and execution. The first prominent characteristic of the building is size; the next, strength, and the last and least, beauty. No description can give an adequate idea of the real size of the columns and walls. The Temple measures three hundred and forty feet in length and one hundred and seventy in breadth. The roof, no longer intact, was supported by one hundred and twenty-two pillars, with twelve large central ones. The height of the larger pillars is about sixty-two feet, while the others are about forty-two feet. The strength and solidity of the entire edifice is apparent in the enormous girth of its pillars and the massive thickness of its walls. The first wall was buttressed in the center by the enormous "Gateway to Karnak." On each side of this gateway were colossal figures, presumably of the monarch who erected the temple. These statues were undoubtedly those of Rameses II, one of the most illustrious of the Egyptian monarchs who bore the name of Rameses. During his reign of sixty-seven years (1292-1225 B. C.) he built many temples, the most famous being the magnificent hall of the Karnak Temple; Rameses III and Rameses IV had no small share in adding to and enlarging this temple. Rameses II erased the names of many other Pharaohs from monuments and substituted his own name. Consequently, some monuments, the erection of which is accredited to him, were built by other Pharaohs. The great hall at Karnak is built of sandstone, which in Egypt is the most perishable of all rocks, and as the Nile rises eight feet above the floor of the hall, the oval-based pillars are being wasted to their very core. The architects of the Temple of Karnak, however, can hardly be blamed for carelessness in their use of the perishable sandstone, as in their time the highest level of the Nile was about eleven feet lower than it is now.

THE "DAHABIYEH" AND MUD HUTS.

In Egyptian Arabic the ordinary houseboat is called a "dahabiyeh," meaning a "conveyance." The modern tourist in Egypt must choose between two modes of travel on the river Nile: either by an excursion steamer, involving a tour of several weeks, or a "dahabiyeh." The great majority of tourists take the excursion. These steamers are swift, well-managed and less expensive than a "dahabiyeh." Where time and expense are of no consideration, but privacy, greater freedom and maximum comfort,—with full enjoyment of the things to be seen,—are the main objects of the tour, a "dahabiyeh" is by all means the best conveyance obtainable.

MUD VILLAGE ON THE NILE.

Mud towns are not uncommon in the East. Syria, Palestine, Mesopotamia, Asia Minor and Arabia are full of towns and villages where nearly every house is built of unburned, sun-dried bricks. Such houses are found also in Texas and New Mexico and in South America, while on the banks of the river Nile nearly all the houses of the "fellaheen" are built of "adobe," or sun-dried bricks. In order to render these bricks firm, they are mixed with straw at the time of their moulding. Egypt has had such houses from time immemorial. The writer of the book of Exodus tells us that one of the Pharaohs forced the children of Israel to make such bricks. Rameses II, the most noted Egyptian monarch, is usually considered to be the "Pharaoh of the Oppression." It was an irksome labor, oppressive, thankless, and unrewarded. When the cruel monarch found out that despite his oppressive measures, the children of Israel increased in numbers and prosperity, he ordered his taskmasters and officers not to give them any straw necessary in the manufacture of the bricks. Here is the royal edict in brief: "Go ye, get your straw where ye can find it; yet not aught of your work shall be diminished." And the poor, defenceless Israelites had to submit to all such undeserved oppressive measures. This "corvee," or forced labor, having been abolished, the modern mud-hut towns on the Nile have been built by private voluntary labor. But the "fellaheen," who own and occupy them, are still poor, and eke out only a bare living. The word "fellah" means a farmer, an agriculturist, "fellaheen" being its plural form. A woman of the farming class is known as "fellaha," which is the regular feminine form of "fellah." Although poor, as compared with the city-dwelling population of Egypt, the "fellaheen" have been greatly benefited under the British overlordship. Excessive taxation, forced labor and numerous other abuses, to which they had been systematically and cruelly subjected for centuries by the Caliphs and the Khedives, have all been abolished. Consequently, the "fellaheen" are today much better off than they have been under any other masters.

STREET SCENE IN AN EGYPTIAN TOWN.

During the hottest part of the day the streets of most Egyptian towns are deserted except for a few donkey-boys and curious travelers, but after this brief quiet, a crowd of men and women are heard jabbering, chattering, chaffing, and haggling for an hour or more over bargains that do not amount to more than ten cents, using the vociferously harsh gutturals of the Arabic language to the limit of their several capacities. Such is the animated concourse of people one meets with in the streets of Egyptian towns and cities. The shops, inviting open-air bazaars, portable eating-booths, and coffee-houses, for drinking coffee and smoking the "nargileh" hubble-bubble, all add to the color, noise and endless variety of things purely Oriental. And the donkey-boys with their diminutive, dapper and docile donkeys! As the English-speaking and money-spending people compose the majority of the tourists, these donkey-boys have given their beasts, upon the suggestion of a would-be Mark Twain, such names as "Champagne Charlie," "Abe Lincoln," "Prince Bismarck," "Holy Moses," "Yankee Doodle," and so on to the end of the list. The appearance of an American or an Englishman is a signal for the boys to rush forward, pushing and crowding their poor animals and shouting at the tops of their voices the European names of their asinine companions. These sights and scenes are the same, and yet never the same, year in and year out, and have in them an element of delightful diversity, even to the most blase globe-trotter.

KING SOLOMON AND HIS GLORY

To the Mason as well as the Shriner, indeed to everybody interested in Masonic lore, no name means more than that of the man known throughout the ages as the wisest man of the ancient world. "Shelómo" is the Hebrew form of his name, and the Arabs have simply changed it to "Suleyman." Peaceful or peace is its meaning and is in keeping with his nature. A monarch was his father, and an exceedingly good-looking woman, Bathsheba, his mother, and Solomon was both a handsome and a kingly personage. He succeeded David as the third and last king of the united nation, the northern and southern portions of Palestine, inheriting a kingdom which had been conquered by the military genius of his valiant father.

Solomon, although traditionally portrayed as a man of peace, was not averse to being prepared for war. "My first duty is to maintain peace, my next duty is to prepare for war," seemed to be the motto of his reign. Therefore, he had a large standing army. Besides organizing a cavalry force of 12,000, he equipped them with 1,400 chariots and established royal stables, with 4,000 stalls. Making a rough estimate on the basis of the cavalry, Israel's fighting strength under him was 300,000 men. The national defense was further provided for by the fortification of Jerusalem and other cities.

As a builder on a magnificent scale, Solomon was a true Oriental monarch. His fame in this respect is usually associated with the building of the Temple. This sanctuary, however, was only a part of a pile of royal buildings erected on Mt. Zion. The Temple was located on the northern and highest eminence. Situated on the southern end of the hill was the House of the Forest of Lebanon, which was probably an assembly hall for the elders and nobility of Israel. ("The Huis Ten Bosch," "The House in the Woods," near Amsterdam, Holland, one of the palaces of the Queen of Holland, is the modern counterpart of the ancient House of the Forest of Lebanon). Next to this edifice, on its northern side, stood the Porch of Pillars, which led directly to the Throne Porch, or Hall of Judgment. Beyond the Throne Porch, and nearest to the Temple, stood Solomon's royal residences and the harem. The entire group of structures, the Temple included, was surrounded by a court.

Outside of Jerusalem, Solomon laid out gardens and vineyards, and in all likelihood he provided a system of water works. To carry out such a building program required a large force of workmen and a well-filled treasury. Money was obtained partly by an oppressive system of taxation and partly by the development of commerce. Forced labor, or the levy, furnished the workmen and artisans.

It must be kept in mind that Solomon was a statesman and a diplomat rather than a soldier. At the very beginning of his reign he made a treaty with Pharoah (Pusukamne of the twenty-first century B. C.), for the purpose of fostering close commercial relations between his nation and the Egyptians, and upon him devolved the task of keeping open the caravan route to Mesopotamia. Another confederate of Solomon's was Hiram, King of Tyre, who found it to his interest to secure the King's friendship, as the caravan routes to Arabia and Egypt were through Solomon's territory. Phœnicia, which was ruled by Hiram, furnished both the material and skilled workmen for the many building enterprises of Solomon. The Queen of Sheba, a full-blooded Arabian sovereign, paid him a visit in Jerusalem to satisfy herself as to the wisdom and glory of the Israelitish monarch. She also had in mind commercial and political reasons when she honored King Solomon with ostensibly a social, but in reality a business visit.

To support his pomp and splendor, Solomon levied toll on caravans going from Egypt to the East and passing through his territory. Solomon was also interested with Hiram, King of Tyre, in the Phœnician voyages to Tarshish. Hiram's sailors manned the ships of his fleet, bringing gold and other products from Ophir, situated on the east coast of the Persian Gulf. The ordinary channels of industry, taxes and tribute and his commercial enterprise—all helped to fill his coffers and maintain his gorgeous court.

Not only was Solomon a true Oriental in his building propensity, but also in his love of pomp, glory, splendor and ostentation. Magnificent were his palanquin and his escort. His harem was large. He had sixty queens and eighty concubines at one time; in all, seven hundred wives and three hundred concubines during his entire reign.

Solomon's world-renowned title is the "wise"—Solomon the Wise. In connection with his attainments, "wisdom" signifies a knowledge of the principles and laws according to which God governs nature and the lives of men. A shrewd administration of justice, a deep knowledge of botany and zoology were also a part of his profound wisdom. Attributed to him is an apocryphal "Book of Wisdom," which represents him not only as thoroughly versed in the above-mentioned branches of learning, but also in cosmology, demonology, humanology, anthropology, astrology, and all the "ologies" within the grasp of the human intellect. Indeed his erudition seems to have been encyclopedic.

The story of Solomon's life would be incomplete without a word as to his fervid piety. In the best sense of that expression, Solomon was a pious man. His prayer at the dedication of the Temple is one of the grandest devotional utterances to be found in pre-Christian devotional literature. Unfortunately, his practical religion was not lived upon the lofty plane of his prayer. His practice was not in strict accordance with his precept.

SITE OF KING SOLOMON'S TEMPLE AND GROUNDS.

The Temple of Solomon was situated upon the more easterly of the hills which form the site of the Haram area, or Temple area, known to the Arabs, or the Arabic-speaking people, as "Haram-esh-Sherif." In the center of this sacred area is the "Kubbet-es-Sakhrah," or the Dome of the Rock, improperly called the Mosque of Omar.

Under the dome is the rough rock, upon which, according to Moslems, Abraham was ready to sacrifice his son to the Lord, and from which Mohammed is said to have ascended to heaven. In all probability, right over this rock Hadrian erected a temple to Jupiter, previous to which, Herod's temple had been erected thereon, and before Herod's time Solomon's temple stood on the rock. The persistency of sacred sites in the East makes this most likely.

KING SOLOMON'S CISTERNS.

Beneath the above-mentioned Haram area the ground is perfectly honeycombed with a series of rock-hewn cisterns, in which was stored the water, brought by an aqueduct from Solomon's Pools, near Bethlehem. Some of the cisterns were formed by mining out the soft rock, and leaving a roof of hand-hewn rock which lies above it, while others were made by an open tank-like excavation, arched with masonry. The former are certainly the more ancient, having apparently been made before the arch came into common use for covering large openings. It appears that the cisterns were connected by a system of channels cut out of the rock, and when one was full, the surplus water ran into the next, and so on until the final overflow was carried off by a channel into the brook, Kidron.

The Cisterns of Solomon are three in number. They receive the surface drainage of the ground above them and the water of the fine spring known as the "Sealed Fountain." The cisterns were made by building solid dams of masonry across the valley, arranged, as has already been stated, so that the water from each of the upper ones can be run off into the one immediately below it.

QUARRY UNDER JERUSALEM WHERE STONES FOR SOLOMON'S TEMPLE WERE QUARRIED.

It is well known that a labyrinth of great extent and of complicated intricacy exists under the present Jerusalem. It is unquestionably very ancient. The cavern or quarry which is immediately below the city wall has an immense vaulted roof. It is 750 feet in length and about 3,000 feet in circumference, and is supported by great numbers of rude natural pillars. The place abounds in bats, of which from fifty to a hundred and fifty cling to the ceiling in patches. Numerous crosses, marked on the wall, indicate that the devoted pilgrim or crusader of the Middle Ages has been there, and a few Arabic and Hebrew inscriptions prove that the place was also known to the Jew and Arab. There are many intricate meandering passages leading to immense halls, as white as the driven snow, and supported by colossal pillars of irregular shape. Some of these pillars were placed there by the hand of nature, to support the roof of the various grottoes; others were evidently left by the stone quarriers to prevent the city from caving in. The reverberations in the quarry are remarkable for their volume and distinctness.

INTERIOR VIEW OF WILSON'S ARCH.

Wilson's Arch is immediately in front of the "Double Gate of Chain and of Peace," in the wall about the Haram. Entrance to the vaults of Wilson's Arch is near the "Jew's Wailing Place," through a little garden to the north, at the end of which stands the famous arch. Near it is a little Moslem dwelling, beyond which is a confusing succession of arches of Moslem style, within the Haram wall to the right. The stones in the interior of the vaults are well preserved, very black and glazed, apparently from the smoke of fires. To the north is a small opening, and beyond this the Sanctuary or the Haram wall is again visible. A little entrance down into a pool, spanned by an arch of Roman architecture, may be seen near this spot, and, further on, the famous arch named for Captain Sir Charles Wilson, the discoverer, who was commissioned by the Palestine Exploration Fund. The shape of the stones of the arch indicate that they cannot be of a date earlier than the fifth or sixth century. On the walls of the vaults there are words scratched in modern Hebrew characters. The span of Wilson's Arch is forty-two feet and its width is forty-three feet.

ANCIENT ARTIFICIAL CAVE UNDER TEMPLE, OR HARAM AREA.

On Mt. Moriah there is now a large open space called "Haram-esh-Sherif" in Arabic, or "Haram" for short. Its English equivalent is the "Noble Sanctuary." The phrases "The Sanctuary," "The Temple Area," and "The Haram Area," all allude to the same locality, peculiarly sanctified in the eyes of all true Moslems. Its surface is studded with cypress and olive trees, and its sides are surrounded in part by the finest mural masonry in the world. At the southern end is the mosque of "El-Aksa," and a pile of buildings formerly used by the Knights Templar. Near the center is a raised platform paved with stone, and rising from this is the well-known mosque, "Kubbet-es-Sakhra," with its beautifully proportioned dome. Within its sacred enclosure, or Sanctuary, stood Solomon's Temple. All the traces of it have long since disappeared; not one stone has been left in place to determine the exact position of the Temple, the location of which has been one of the most fiercely contested points in the Holy City topography. To the Mohammedan, with the exception of Mecca and Medina, the sacred rock is the most revered spot on earth.

The cave beneath the sacred rock is similar to other caves in the neighborhood of Jerusalem. It may have been enlarged, but any mark of chiseling on the sides is now concealed by a thick coat of plaster. The circular opening in the roof of the cave looks like the mouth of a cistern, but it has not the usual marks left by the draw-ropes. It is somewhat similar in character to the openings often found in the vestibule of tombs.

JERUSALEM AS IT WAS IN THE TIME OF SOLOMON.

The three most noted works of Solomon in Jerusalem were the building of the Temple, with its east wall and cloister, his own private palace, and the famous wall around Jerusalem. When Solomon succeeded his father there was a wall around the city, built by David, but it was a mere rampart without towers, and only of moderate strength and height. One of the first things that Solomon did when he ascended his father's throne was to make the walls larger and stronger. On the completion of the Temple, he again turned his attention to the walls, increasing their height and constructing very large towers upon them. Not only did he build a magnificent palace for himself, but he built other royal residences for his numerous wives, and splendid stables for his 1,400 chariots and 12,000 horses. Solomon's care of the roads leading to Jerusalem is most highly praised by Josephus. They were paved with black stone, probably the hard basalt from the region of Argob, on the east of Jordan. In his palaces were vessels of pure gold, and spices, precious stones, rare woods and curious animals were gathered in greatest profusion. In these palaces silver was no more valued than the stones of the street, being considered too mean a material even for the commonest of the royal purposes.

MOSQUE OF OMAR.

Two noted Mohammedan mosques are situated within the Haram area. One is the Mosque of "El-Aksa," and the other the Mosque of Omar, or, more correctly, the Dome of the Rock. This rock, over which the mosque and the dome have been raised, is known to the Jews as "Eben-hash-Shethiyah," the "stone of foundation," and is believed to be the foundation of the world, sealing the mouth of the Abyss. Omar, the ruler for whom the mosque was named, was Omar I (Ibn-el-Khattab), the second caliph, who succeeded Abu-Bekir in 634 A. D. Omar conquered Jerusalem after a siege of four months. He was a great champion and organizer of Islam, and by his force of character and influence over his immediate predecessor, he ruled long before he had actually been caliph. It was during his caliphate that Syria, Persia and Egypt were brought under Arabic domination and the government of Islam reached a higher degree of organization. The name of Omar has been further immortalized because he instituted the system of dating from the Hegira.

JERUSALEM AS IT IS.

Only four gates of the walls surrounding Jerusalem are at present in use, the Jaffa (Joppa) Gate on the west side, the Damascus Gate on the north, the Gate of St. Stephen on the east, and the Gate of Zion on the south. The first two gates are named from the places to which the roads starting from them lead. The Gate of St. Stephen is named from the popular belief that the first Christian martyr was put to death in that quarter, and the Gate of Zion from its situation on the hill of that name. The Yafa Gate forms the main entrance into the city, and on that account is kept open half an hour later than the other gates. The present city covers 210 acres. Mt. Moriah, or the site of the Temple, contains thirty-five acres, about one-sixth of the whole area of the city. Jerusalem is intersected from north to south by its principal street, which is three-fifths of a mile long and runs from the Damascus Gate to Zion Gate. The other streets of the city run east and west, at right angles to the main street. Perhaps the best known among them is Via Dolorosa, along the north of the Haram area, in which is situated the Roman archway called Ecce Homo. Jerusalem is divided into quarters, which are inhabited by the different religious sects and nationalities, such as the Jews, Mohammedans, Greeks, and Europeans. The Jews constitute an interesting class. Very many of them are pilgrims who go to Jerusalem to fulfil a vow and then return to the countries where they were born, or they are aged persons who desire to spend their last days in the Holy City, so they may be buried in the valley of Jehoshaphet, which, according to the Talmudic tradition, will be the scene of the last judgment. For the privilege of such a burial they are obliged to pay a large sum. But if any one is too poor to incur this expense, the body is taken to the slope on Mt. Zion where the tomb of David is situated. Among these people are representatives from almost every land, though the Spanish, Polish, Russian, and German Jews compose the greater number. Like their brethren in other parts of Palestine, many of them are wretched'y poor, and live chiefly on alms contributed by their countrymen in Europe and America.

WAILING PLACE OF THE JEWS.

In the year 134 A. D., a Jewish patriot named Barcochba led his countrymen in a rebellion against the Roman authority, which uprising was soon crushed by the Emperor Hadrian, and the last traces of Judaic power disappeared from Jerusalem, which was rebuilt as a pagan Roman town under the name of Aelia Capitolina. By 333 A. D., the Jews had acquired the right of annually visiting and lamenting over the pierced stone on which their altar had been erected. The place of the Jews' annual lamentation over the vanished glory of Israel is a part of the wall surrounding Jerusalem.

INTERIOR OF THE DOME OF THE ROCK.

The Mosque of Omar, so-called, is supposed to have been converted from a church into a mosque by the Moslem conquerors. Such "conversions" are not rare happenings in Turkey, Syria, and Palestine. This is true in all the countries and cities conquered by the Mohammedans, witness the Church of St. Sophia in Constantinople, and the Church of St. John in Damascus. The walls of the Dome of the Rock are octagonal. Here is a circle of columns and piers that divide the two aisles, with the entablatures, discharging arches and cornices. These have remained untouched and unchanged from the time when the sacred edifice was a Christian sanctuary. The pier arches of the dome, the triforium, belt and clearstory are of the unaltered construction of the age of Constantine.

JERUSALEM STREET SCENE.

The streets of the City of David, or "Kuds," the "Holy City," as the Arabs reverently call it, are always full of interesting sights. Its bazars, its many-colored and many-tongued populace, composed of almost all nations on the face of the earth, its peculiar customs and characteristic costumes, its noise and confusion, its minarets, mosques, domes, basilicas, cathedrals, ancient sites and historic ruins—all these are a source of perpetual wonderment, amusement and interesting information to everybody, especially to the tourist and pilgrim from the Occident. Jerusalem once seen is never forgotten, and a visit to the historic sacred spot awakens in the mind of the devout tourist, thoughts, emotions and inspirations, the memory and influence of which can never be effaced or obliterated. Verily, Jerusalem, "the foundation of the Peace of the Jews," is to every Christian, Jew and Moslem a "Beit-el-Mukaddes," or "El-Makdis"—"the Place of the Sanctuary."

CEDARS OF LEBANON.

Upon the northern border of the provinces of Adana and Aleppo is the main range of the Taurus mountains, with their rugged snow-capped peaks, whose altitude is from 7,000 to 10,000 feet. This great backbone of mountains runs east and west. In the ancient times these mountains were covered with magnificent cedar forests, and it was from them that the pillars for many of the Babylonian temples were hewn.

The immense logs had to be carried over a rough hill country, fully a hundred miles, before they could be rolled into the waters of the Mediterranean and floated down to their destination. North and south from the city of Marash runs the Amanus range, whose peaks are from 5,000 to 7,000 feet in height. The eastern or landward slopes of this range are entirely deforested, but on the seaward side, owing to the mists and moisture, the fresh growths have been rapid and many of the forests are very dense. The difficulties of transportation are so great that when the majestic cedars and pines are felled the trunks are often left to rot, while the tops and branches are loaded on mules and carried down the rough trails. Cedrus libani is the technical name given to this graceful tree, which grows more beautifully in the Lebanon range of mountains than anywhere else. From the stumps of certain cedars recently cut down in the Taurus mountains, it is evident that the larger trees are from 300 to 500 years old. The height ranges up to eighty feet and the girth is often over twenty feet. The cedars grow further up the mountain side than any other trees. Near them are the balsams, a balsam and a cedar often growing very close together.

TYRE AS IT IS TO-DAY.

The name of the ancient city of Tyre is derived from "Tsor," which is Hebrew for "rock." Its Assyro-Babylonian equivalent is "zuru," while in Arabic it is "soor," by which name it is known among the Arabic-speaking people. Tyre is the best known and most famous of the ancient cities of Phœnicia and is located on the east coast of the Mediterranean. Originally, the city was on an island, but it is no longer an island. Its mole, built by Alexander the Great, who captured it in the year 332, has been so enlarged by accretions of sand that the original island is at present merely a promontory of the mainland. According to a tradition, it was founded 2,750 B. C. Safety from siege, facility in dealing with shipping, and, probably, monopoly of trade, led to the building of the city on an island. It had manufactories where world-famous goods were produced, such as purple dyes, metal-work and glassware. It established trade with the then known world—not only with the countries of the Mediterranean, but with those of all waters adjacent thereto, including Egypt, the Black Sea region and even Great Britain. It established colonies in North Africa and Spain, and was so powerful that Isaiah aptly designates it as "the crowning city, whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honorable of the earth." The Crusaders captured the city, June 27, 1124, but it was retaken by the Saracens in March, 1291. Since then it has been a Mohammedan city, containing about 4,000 inhabitants, and has none of the maritime importance attached to it in Biblical times.

KING HIRAM'S TOMB.

The origin of "Hiram" is probably from a Hebrew word meaning "exalted brother," which is "ahiram." Hiram's reign constitutes the Golden Age of the history of Phœnicia. He was Solomon's chief royal helper in building the world-renowned Temple in Jerusalem. For his services Solomon offered him twenty cities in Galilee, which reward he declined. It is interesting to note that Hiram, King of Tyre, sent to Solomon an artificer whose name was also Hiram, "Hiram Abif," "Hiram the architect," who assisted in the completion and decoration of the Temple.

EVOLUTION OF WORSHIP

"The history of the development of humanity's religious sense is a record of many diverse beliefs concerning good and evil, with the correlative worship always suiting itself in form to the character and quality of the religion it expressed. Thus, from the lowest forms of fetishism and sorcery, on through tribal and national religions, elaborated myths and allegories, or even the more ethical religions, based on law and having a law-giver, the human mind has rendered homage to its own beliefs in good and evil, which, with pagan superstition, this same mind first formulates and then fears.

"Through the curious array of the world's religions, the ages trace a gradual progress out of materialism toward a more spiritual concept of God. To the Israelites belongs the glory of having perceived the truth of monotheism, and of having kept alive at least the desire to worship the one true God, even though imperfect realization of the oneness and allness of God led them frequently to go astray after the strange gods of materialistic religions surrounding them. The fact, however, that they had discerned the truth of one Spirit, was potent enough to lift the nation morally above the plane of the pagan nations; but their outward worship betrayed how materialistic still was their concept of the eternal Truth which they professed to believe. In other words, the human mind, ignorant of its own unreality, was unable to grasp what spiritual sense alone can understand.

"The vital acknowledgment of God as One nevertheless remained, and increased until the faith of the race was able to perceive Jesus, whose religion passing beyond belief into the understanding of God, was expressed in his perfect worship of Spirit, that is, in his manifestation of the Christ (Truth). He made it clear that neither place nor rite nor doctrine constituted worship of God. 'The true worshipers,' he said, 'shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth.'"

THE THREE DISTINCTIVE MARKS OF A SHRINER

ABD-EL-KADER

AS a rule, men have about them the following distinctive marks: First—racial, facial, and national marks, by means of which a typical Yankee is easily distinguished from a Teuton or a Briton, a full-blooded Indian from a Hindoo or a Chinese, a typical Hebrew from a Gentile, and so on to the end of the list.

Second—linguistic marks. Generally speaking, the matter and manner of a man's speech betray his degree of refinement as they do his territorial origin. The cockney speech, the Yankee twang, the Southern velvety drawl, the Bowery "bhoy's" rough style and the educated man's refined conversation are unmistakable marks of their owners' identity.

Third—social marks. A person of quality, a man of parts, of gentle birth and upbringing, is easily distinguishable from a person of plebeian origin.

Fourth—professional marks. Although not always conclusive, yet by these marks one can tell a professional person from the unskilled day-laborer.

In the case of the Shriner, in addition, at least three special marks of identification, and their absence justifies the suspicion that he has failed to comprehend the deeper significance of the mysteries and doctrines of the Order of the Mystic Shrine.

The first of these distinctive marks expected to be seen in the life of a true Shriner is religion—religion writ large but not "loud." No irreligious person has a right to be a Shriner. Such a one cannot by any means be initiated into the mysteries of the Shrine. No person making light of religion, no matter how stupendous his intellect, or how great his achievements, has a right to participate in the Temple rites. Such a one is imperfect for mystic ceremonies, however perfect he may otherwise be, for the Order of Nobility of the Mystic Shrine is founded on God, and pure and undefiled religion. The religion of the Shriner is not one of mere ceremony or ritual, not merely a matter of veneer or varnish, ostentation or display, but of the heart—of faith, of prayer—and of quiet, conscientious, honorable daily life.

The second of these distinctive marks is charity—not the charity that comes at the last moment, though this is ever forthcoming when necessary, but rather that charity of brotherly love and affection which places a hand at the back of the weak and falling instead of waiting until the weight of sorrow or misfortune has dragged the struggling one to the ground. It is that unseen charity—of love, encouragement, and sympathy, that keeps the members of the Order buoyant and enables them to meet trouble with fearless heart, surmounting difficulties before they become obstacles. To the true Shriner charity is synonymous with love, in its highest and best sense, the fulfilling of the sacred law of God and man. Such a one does not look for flaws, and if he happens to find them, deems it wise to be somewhat blind, and look for virtues behind them. For he knows that

> "The cloudiest night has a tint of light
> Somewhere in shadows hiding.
> It is better by far to hunt for a star
> Than for spots on the sun abiding."

Without charity a Shriner's religion is vain; nay, his religion becomes only a different name for bigotry, blindness, conceit and narrow-mindedness.

Humility is the third of these distinctive marks. Humility is the beautiful, graceful keystone in the arch of the life-building of the truly noble and the nobly true Noble of the Mystic Shrine. This is not, however, to be confused with weakness or jelly-fish softness. True meekness never spelled weakness. With humility is also connected simplicity, which is far from being a simpleton, and humility and simplicity harmoniously combined imply child-likeness, but not childishness. A humble and simple Shriner is one who recognizes God's sovereignty over his life; who acknowledges God's right to rule his will; who submits, with childlike devotion, to God's leadership in all his ways.

And this sort of humility, simplicity and meekness is not incompatible with magnanimity, sublimity and grandeur of character. Indeed, no one can be a humble, simple, and meek Shriner without thereby becoming magnanimous, grand, noble and sublime. He who has attained these virtues has been, or is being slowly and surely freed from all traces of meanness or smallness, whose sad or sickening instances we come across once in a while in our intercourse with men. Once a layman, in defense of the small salary doled out to his pastor, said, "Pastor, you are not working for money, you are working for souls." "True," replied the minister, "I am working for souls, but I don't eat them, and if I could, it would take a dozen the size of yours to make a square meal." It takes a long time and repeated strenuous effort to attain the goal of true humility, but it is worth all the time and labor it takes. Indeed, the achievement by God and man of everything worth while has cost long time and hard labor. Take, for instance, grain, gold, and man:

> "Acres of earth, clouds, with far-brought rain,
> Months of limitless sunshine!
> Adequate outcome—Grain.
> Furnace for ore, tons and tons untold,
> Hills of coal wasted for heat!
> Adequate outcome—Gold.
> Ages of time, earth, sky without span,
> Vast love and labors of God!
> Adequate outcome—Man."

To be a man in the best sense of that word costs "years of toil and years of care, years of patient faithfulness, years of hope and despair, strength and courage measureless, mercy for the weak." It means "being bold where boldness must be shown, brave enough to stand alone, unafraid to act and speak when the cause is just, knowing whom to trust, whom to turn to in the stress unbelieved; finally, when sweet success is achieved after all your foes are faced, knowing how to wear worthily the laurels placed on your brow."

These are not "child's play," but they make man childlike—truly religious, truly charitable, truly humble and simple. When a man has reached that goal of development in his innermost being, he is a Shriner.

Abd-el-Kader, more correctly "Abd-el-Kadir," which means "the slave (or servant) of the Almighty," was an Arab whose life typified all the virtues characteristic of the Shriner. He was a valiant, large-hearted and humane Algerian prince or "emir," the Grand Sheik of Alee Temple, Mecca, Arabia, and Grand Potentate of Temple Saladin, Damascus, Syria. At his death he was deeply mourned, and not alone in the East, for every Temple of the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine for North America, was commanded by the Imperial Potentate to appear in the garb of mourning. Although a devout Moslem, Abd-el-Kader was the devoted deliverer of thousands of Christians of both sexes, who would otherwise have been ruthlessly butchered by the fanatical, infuriated Moslems, in the fearful uprising against the Christians of Syria, in 1860; and he did this noble deed of mercy with sleepless vigilance and at the imminent peril of his own life.

ΑΓΕΡΩΧΟ ΓΕΝΗΣΙΣ ΑΧΑΒ ΡΑΓΚΟΣ

THE BYZANTINE, OR EASTERN CHRISTIAN EMPIRE, PREDECESSOR OF THE OTTOMAN EMPIRE

ONE of the best known lanes of water in the world is the Bosporus or Bosphorus, commonly designated as the Straits of Constantinople. The ancient world knew it as "Bosporus Thracius," and the Turks, its modern masters, have renamed it "Boghaz Ichy," which, in Turkish, signifies "the interior of the straits." It connects the Black Sea with the Sea of Marmora and the Mediterranean. The Bosphorus is twenty miles long and from one to two miles wide. At the entrance are lighthouses, and its elevated and picturesque shores are beautified with wooded cliffs, which are studded with ancient ruins, modern castles and splendid mansions of Oriental style. On its historic Asiatic and European shores are located numerous towns and cities —notably Scutari, Therapia, Pera and Constantinople. The last-mentioned city was anciently known as "Byzantium," and was founded by "an adventurous band of Greeks under the oracular guidance of Apollo." The city was built some twenty-five centuries before our time. From this historic and beautiful Byzantium, as a starting-point—or more strictly speaking, as a metropolis—there grew an empire which existed for more than a thousand years, and which is known in history as the Byzantine Empire. It is also styled the "East Roman," "Eastern," "Greek," or "Later Roman," Empire. On the death of Theodosius, 395 A. D., the ancient Roman Empire was divided between his two sons, Arcadius, to whom was given the eastern half, with his capital at Constantinople or Byzantium, and Honorius, who took the western half, with his capital at Rome. This event is generally considered to be the beginning of the Byzantine Empire. The empire came to an end in 1453 A. D., when Constantinople was captured by the Turks.

Arcadius, who reigned between 395 and 408 A. D., was weak, and wholly under the domination of his successive ministers, Rufinus, Eutropius and Gainas. Arcadius was succeeded by his son, Theodosius II, a boy but seven years old at the time of his accession, who ruled from 408 to 450 A. D. During his whole reign the government was ably carried on by his sister, Pulcheria, who was noted for her rigid virtue. Theodosius II was followed by Leo, Zeno, Anastasius and Justin, who were all men of experience, and who pursued a cautious policy throughout their respective reigns. They recruited native armies, made administrative and financial reforms, and left the treasury full, their armies strong, and the empire intact. They were followed by Emperor Justinian the Great, who reigned from 527 to 565 A. D. But for the indefatigable labors of his predecessors, the illustrious reign of Justinian would have been impossible. By his conquests and able administration he raised the empire to a higher degree of prosperity and power than it was ever again to experience. His entire policy was directed toward unity, and this formed the keynote for the future history of the Byzantine Empire. He sought to bring all under one state, one church, and one law. Under his auspices, the Roman law was compiled and published in the form of a monumental code, universally known as the "Justinian Code."

After his death the empire declined rapidly. His great enterprises had exhausted the treasury, necessitating heavy taxation; his inefficient or unfortunate successors were too weak to oppose the great conquests of the Arabs, and were forced to see one after another of their provinces wrested from their grasp. Two of these emperors, Constans II and his son, Constantine, fought bravely against the Moslems and checked their advance, but in later years the empire became a tributary to Caliph Haroun-er-Rashid. Under Emperor Michael, who reigned from 820 to 829 A. D., the Saracens, or Moslems, conquered the Island of Crete and subjugated Sicily.

Up to the year 1204, incompetent rulers brought the empire to the verge of ruin. The Isle of Cyprus was lost, Bulgaria became independent, and the Seljooks threatened to conquer Constantinople. In 1204, Constantinople was taken by the Franks or Latins, and sacked, and the Latin Empire was reëstablished. The newly-formed kingdom was very weak and lasted only until 1267, when Emperor Michael Paleologus expelled the Latins or Franks and restored the Byzantine Empire. But the resuscitated empire was much smaller than it had been in 1204, and the ruling family, the Paleologi, were unable to make it powerful. Michael Paleologus, who was the eighth Byzantine emperor bearing the name of Michael, attempted to gain a powerful ally by offering to bring the Greek Church under the authority of the Pope of Rome. He was, however, unsuccessful in his attempt. His son, Andronicus II, whose reign covers the period between 1281 and 1328, was utterly incompetent, and the last years of his reign were filled with civil wars. At this time, the Byzantine Empire's command of the sea was lost, the finances were in hopeless disorder, and the affairs of the empire demoralized. The Ottoman Turks were then establishing their power on the ruins of the Seljookian realm in Asia Minor, and one by one they conquered the provinces of the Byzantine Empire. Under John V, whose reign extended from 1341 to 1391, the Turks made their first permanent conquest in Europe by seizing Gallipoli, in 1354. The next two emperors were practically vassals of the Ottoman sultan. Constantine XI, the last of the Byzantine emperors and the last member of the house of Paleologus, struggled bravely, from 1448 to 1453, to retain his capital, which was the only portion of the empire then left, but he failed utterly. Constantinople fell before the invincible army of Mohammed II, the Ottoman ruler, and the seizure of the capital marked the end of the Byzantine Empire.

Until recently it has been the fashion to treat the Byzantine Empire with contempt. Gibbon describes its history as a "tedious and uniform tale of weakness and misery." Montesquieu speaks of it as "merely a succession of revolts, schisms, and treacheries." Taine condemns it as "a gigantic moldiness lasting a thousand years." In 1854 a writer in an English review spoke rejoicingly of the (supposed) moment when the last Byzantine soldier was blown into the air by "our brave allies, the Turks." But within the last half-century all this has been changed, and scholars now recognize the inestimable debt which humanity owes to the Byzantine Empire. They realize that for eight centuries the Roman Empire, which was transplanted to New Rome—that is, Constantinople—persisted in its civilizing task, and that because of this self-imposed task, law, literature, industry and commerce did not cease to flourish. They also realize that Constantinople stemmed the tide of invasion from the East, which otherwise might have engulfed all Europe, and that the most striking feature of Byzantine history is its constant vitality, and marvelous recuperative energy, shown at every crisis in its history. For more than a thousand years dynasties changed, wars and revolutions took place, the fortunes of the empire sank and rose again. Of the one hundred and seven rulers of the Byzantine Empire from 395 to 1453, emperors or associates of emperors, twenty were assassinated, eighteen were blinded or otherwise mutilated, twelve died in monasteries or prisons, twelve abdicated under compulsion or of their own free will, three died of starvation, eight in battle or as the result of "accident"—a total of seventy-three. Although vice, corruption and cruelty were the dominant features of some periods of the empire's history, and although the government was despotic, the people superstitious, effeminate and servile, yet the empire lived on; the administration and organization remained effective, and the traditions and civilization of Old Rome were maintained. Wealth, so great that it was a source of wonder to all visitors, was accumulated, and large armies, the most efficient in the world, were maintained. The Byzantine Empire preserved more of the traditions, civil and military organizations, wealth, art and literature of Old Rome than existed elsewhere.

Constantinople, the New Rome, like Old Rome, had a wonderful capacity for absorbing and assimilating less civilized peoples. The empire included representatives of all the races of Eastern Europe, and to all it offered full participation in its life. Any "barbarian" of ability, if baptized in the Greek Church, was welcomed to its army, administration, and court. This was one of the causes of its strength; another was the position of Constantinople,—the city could not be reduced to starvation, and its walls, until 1204, proved strong enough to defy all invaders. Then, too, while the Western Empire, whose capital was Rome, was being overrun by the barbarian European hordes, the Asiatic provinces of the Byzantine Empire enjoyed an almost continuous peace, and from the wealth of those provinces the empire secured the resources necessary to hold its European possessions and to carry on its wars. Although the empire had some weak and incompetent rulers, still it was fortunate in having a large number of able emperors, most of whom were not brilliant personalities, commanding admiration, but cautious administrators, indefatigable workers, who labored slowly and steadily to strengthen the empire, fill the treasury, and improve the administrative service.

The military organization, law, art and manufactures of the empire were of a progressive character. Thus, after the battle of Adrianople, the Byzantines realized the fact that the old infantry was no longer efficient, and they then formed a new army, mainly of cavalry, and developed armor for protection. They used a smaller and more effective tactical unit than the old legion, and recruited an army of subjects, not mercenaries. They developed the art of fortification and the use of "Greek fire." They built a great navy. The Justinian Code continued for centuries to be the law of the Byzantine Empire. But it was constantly modified and expanded to suit new conditions. In the ninth century, a new code was drawn up in which the influences of Christianity are quite conspicuous. A maritime code, a military code, and a rural code were developed to meet the changed conditions. Byzantine art exercised great influence on Russia, on the Mohammedan caliphates in the East and West, on the south of Italy, on Venice, and some parts of France and Germany. To-day, examples of Byzantine architecture are to be found in every Christian and Mohammedan country. In the manufacture of mosaics, silks and embroidered satins, the Byzantine Empire was preëminent for centuries. Its direct services to Europe were many and varied. Of these, four deserve special emphasis:

It was the bulwark of Europe, from which host after host of invaders was beaten back; for seven centuries, almost unaided, it bore the brunt of every attack, and thus enabled the Western nations to develop and gain strength.

It preserved the Greek and Roman culture and transmitted it to Western Europe, as the people of the younger nations became sufficiently advanced to share in the priceless heritage. During the period of the Crusades the transmission was most marked.

It maintained the world's commerce, which for centuries was centered at Constantinople. This city's pupils in commerce, namely, Venice and Amalfi, in Italy, later became her rivals and wrested the sceptre of the seas from her, in the eleventh century.

It was the civilizer of all Eastern Europe, where the influence of the Greek Church, Greek art and architecture, and Greek administration is now everywhere evident.

CONSTANTINE THE GREAT

Of all the world-famous men who have given their names to noted cities which they have founded, Constantine the Great is the most renowned. His claim to fame rests upon the fact that he was the first Christian emperor of Rome, though not of the world, as the honor of being the first Christian monarch in the world belongs to King Abgar of Armenia.

Constantine was born in 272 A. D., the son of Emperor Constantius Chlorus and his wife Helena. Upon his father's death, July, 306, he was proclaimed emperor by the legions under his command. Both before and after his accession to the throne, he was a favorite of the army, because of his talents, courage and martial services. About the year 307, Constantine married Fausta, a Roman princess. In 312, according to tradition, he was converted to Christianity by a miraculous vision, when he saw in the heavens the sign of a cross, with this inscription, "In hoc signo vinces,"—"By this sign thou shalt conquer."

Being an avowed Christian, he openly espoused that cause and displayed much wisdom in the promotion of order and prosperity among his subjects. For the first time in the history of the world, through his personal influence, Christianity was recognized as the religion of the state, but the pagan religion was still tolerated.

By means of Constantine's martial activities and victorious campaigns, the boundaries of the Roman empire were extended as far as Adrianople and Byzantium. In the year 325, he assembled at Nicœa the first Christian synod, or general council, in which the Arian or Unitarian doctrines were condemned, and the famous Nicean creed was adopted.

About 328 he transferred his court from Rome to Byzantium, which city he enlarged, changing the name to Constantinople,—"City of Constantine." He died at Nicomedia in 337, having divided the empire among his three sons, Constantine, Constantius and Constans. Although Constantine was a professing Christian, at least a Christian in name, he was not baptized until a short time before his death.

It is hard to give a just and accurate estimate of a complex character such as that of Constantine. But the following characterization from the pen of the late George C. Lorimer, D. D., may be accepted as satisfactory. He writes: "Constantine was no saint. Like the feet of the image seen by Daniel, his character was partly iron and partly clay. But, placed by the side of his rivals, his superior worth becomes instantly manifest. Confessedly he was not all that he might have been, and leaves much to be desired. He was cautious, prudent, sagacious, and not over frank; dignified, and yet vain; stern and yet generous; ambitious and yet magnanimous; affectionate and yet jealously suspicious; intelligent and yet superstitious; a man who did not provoke war, and yet did not shrink from it, and one who knew how to command in battle and how to execute, and that, too, with reckless intrepidity. In person he was tall and robust, a magnificent physical specimen of a soldier and chief. He was scrupulous in his attire, almost to foppishness; ostentatious in display, and at times a trifle stilted in his bearing. But no one knew better than he how to discard this finery for the armor of the warrior, and how to disdain the soft luxury of a palace when duty called him to the tented field. There was much of barbaric splendor in his dress when he received ambassadors. Unhappily, especially in the latter years of his reign, he gave way to an occasional outbreak of barbaric ferocity, as witnessed in the death of Crispus, his son, and Fausta, his wife. Of his intellectual ability there can be no doubt. He was more than an ordinary general, more than a commonplace statesman, and by the laws enacted during his reign, by the founding and building of Constantinople, and by his noble bearing in the heated discussions of the Council of Nicœa, he gave proof of remarkable sagacity, foresight, and persuasive power. He was no real Christian, but he was no hypocrite, either. He was thoroughly sincere."

ALEPPO TEMPLE ARAB PATROL

DERIVATION OF TEMPLE NAMES

AAD—The name of one of the oldest Arabic tribes; hence the word "aad" has come to mean "old," "ancient."

AAHMES—"Child of the moon," founder of eighteenth Egyptian dynasty.

ABBA—"Father," in Syriac, Coptic and Ethiopic, its Hebrew and Arabic equivalent being "ab." Abbot and abbess are derived from it. Abraham means "father of mercy"; Absalom, "father of peace."

ABDALLAH—"Abd-Allah," signifies "the slave or servant of Allah." The last sherif, or prince of the Wahabites, was named Abdallah; he was born in 1740; in 1818 was captured by Ibrahim Pasha, son of Mohammed Ali Pasha, and founder of the Egyptian Khediviate, and executed by him.

ABOU BEN ADHEM—More correctly written, in Arabic, "Abou BenAdhem," father of BenAdhem. The name given to the hero of J. H. Leigh Hunt's well known poem by that name.

ABU BEKR—Arabic for "father of the virgin." Abou Bekr was the first of Mohammed's successors. He was born in 571, A. D. His original name was "Abd-el-Kaaba," "slave of Kaaba," which was changed to "Abou Bekr," after the Prophet married his virgin daughter, Ayeshah.

ACCA—From the Hebrew. A fortified Syrian seaport town in Turkey. The Turks call it "Akka." In the Old Testament it is known as "Accho," and in the New, as "Ptolemais." In 1191 it was taken by the Crusaders under Richard Cœur de Lion, and in 1291 by the Saracens. Since 1841, it has been a part of Turkey. In French, it is known as "St. John d'Acre." In 1799, it successfully resisted the attacks of Napoleon.

AHMED—Arabic, meaning "most praised." "Ahmed-Ibn-Hanbal" was born in Bagdad, in the year of the Hegira 164. He was the founder of the Hanbalite sect in Mohammedanism, and died at Bagdad, in 855. The Hanbalites are one of the four well known orthodox sects in Mohammedanism—the Sunnites, Hanifites, Hanbalites, and Shafites. The Shiites are recognized as heretics.

AL AMIN—Arabic, meaning "the safe one." "Mohammed-al-Amin," a son of Haroun-ar-Rashid, whom he succeeded as caliph in 809, A. D.; he was slain in 813, A. D.

AFIFI—An Arabic word signifying "chaste," "abstemious."

AINAD—From two Arabic words referring to the spring or well of water belonging to the ancient tribe of "Aad." "Ain," "eye," "eye of the earth," "spring of water," "aingedi" "spring of water for (gedi) goats"; New Testament spelling "Engedi." "Ainon," a spring of water in the town of On; New Testament spelling "Aenon." Ainad is a trading town in Arabia.

ALBAHR—An Arabic word meaning "the sea." "Al Bahr Sefid," the "White Sea," or the Mediterranean. The river Nile is also known as "Al Bahr," "the sea."

AKBAR—An Arabic word signifying "most able," derived from same word as "kader." "Akbar," means "most great."

ALADDIN—Arabic, meaning "the excellence of religion." "Ala-ed-din" was a son of Osman, the founder of the Ottoman Empire. He was a distinguished statesman of the fourteenth century, and organized the Turkish martial band called "Janizaries," or the "new troops." Aladdin is the name of a well known character in the "Arabian Nights," reputed to have possessed a wonderful lamp and an equally wonderful ring.

ALCAZAR—Arabic for "castles." An eminent Spanish surgeon, who lived in the latter part of the sixteenth century, was named Alcazar. He was professor of surgery in the University of Salamanca, Spain.

ALCHYMIA—Arabic for "chemistry." The original of the English "alchemy," or the ancient system of chemistry, an imaginary art which aimed to transmute the baser metals into gold; to find the panacea, or universal remedy for disease; the elixir of life, and the philosopher's stone. This led the way to modern chemistry. "Alchymia" is derived from a Greek word meaning "juice," for chemistry was originally the art of extracting the juices from plants for medicinal purposes.

ALEE—Arabic, "the exalted." "Alee-Abn-Abou-Talib," surnamed the "Lion of God," was born at Mecca, about 600, A. D., and was cousin-german of the Prophet. He married Fatimah, a daughter of the Prophet. Upon the latter's death, in 632, he became Abou Bekr's rival for the caliphate, and was the founder of the heretical Shiite sect in Mohammedanism. He succeeded to the caliphate in 655, and was assassinated in 660.

ALEPPO—An Arabic word meaning "milk." The famous city of Aleppo is known in the Orient by the name of "Haleb." Like Acca, it is an Arabic-speaking city, although a part of Turkey. It is noted for its excellent milk, butter, olive oil, and cotton and silk goods; is a very rich and fashionable Oriental city, and the metropolis of the Turkish and Arabic-speaking sections of Syria, being the arbiter of their fashions. Aleppo was known to the Crusaders. It is one of the most important and highly civilized cities in the Ottoman Empire.

ALGERIA—Meaning, "the islands," is a corrupted form of the Arabic word "el-jezair." The French-African territory which bears that name is known (in French) as L'Algerie. It is an Arabic-speaking, Moslem country, and Algiers, its capital, is famed for its wide streets, palaces, synagogues, mosques, good shops, bazaars, markets, hotels, libraries, museums and club-houses. It is a fortified city, and has extensive quays and two government dry-docks. It has a regular steamship communication with Marseilles and Toulon, in France, and with most of the ports in Africa. Submarine cables connect the capital of Algeria with Marseilles.

ALHAMBRA—Arabic, meaning "the red," (house being understood). The world-renowned palace of the Moorish kings, at Granada, Spain. Granada is built on three hills and on the highest of them stands the Alhambra, or "Alhamara" palace. (There is no "b" in the Arabic original of this word). The Alhambra is the most celebrated of the city's numerous monuments, palaces and castles of Moorish kings, and is the masterpiece of Arabian architecture between the eleventh and the fifteenth centuries. The Alhambra consists of an irregular mass of houses and towers, surrounded by groves. The portions most worthy of notice are the bastioned walls, arches, the halls of the Abencerrages and ambassadors, the "Court of Lions" and the unfinished palace of Charles V.

AL KADER—Arabic for "the mighty one." Al-Kader-Billah, "mighty by the grace of Allah," was a caliph of the house of Abbas. Born at Bagdad in 947, A. D., he succeeded to the throne in 991, and died in 1032. At his court he received and protected Firdousee, the celebrated Persian poet, who fled from the anger of Mahmoud Ghazni.

AL KORAN—"The reading," "the book," derived from the Arabic "karaa," "to read." The Mohammedan Scriptures, which contain the professed revelations to the Prophet. The name Al Koran has also been written or transliterated, "Alcoran," "Al Kuran," and "Al Quran." The Turks use the word without the "al," or "el," which are different ways of transliterating the definite article.

AL MALAIKAH—"The angels," the plural form of the Arabic "melek," or "al melek."

ALMAS—An Arabic word meaning "diamond."

AL MENAH—The name of the valley near Mount Arafat, in the province of Hejaz, Arabia, about three miles from Mecca. In this valley the pilgrims slay their sacrifices. The victims should be camels, kine, sheep, or goats. The camels and kine should be females, and the sheep and goats, males. In age, the camels should be five years; the cows and goats in their second year; and the sheep not younger than six months. All should be without blemish, neither blind nor lame; their ears should not have been cut, nor their horns have been broken. The males should be complete and all be well fed. The camels are sacrificed while standing, the fore legs being tied together, and the hind legs, also. A single blow is delivered where the head joins the neck, the name of God being uttered the while, in the formula, "Bismillahir-rahman-er-rahim," "In the name of Allah, the Merciful, the Compassionate." The victim, when a camel, must face Mecca, and the pilgrim must stand on its right. If the pilgrim be too tender-hearted to deal the blow, he may hire a butcher, but he should catch hold of the butcher's wrist, so as to take part in the act of sacrifice. All other victims, kine, sheep and goats, are made to lie on their sides, facing Mecca, all four legs being securely fastened, when their throats are cut with a sharp knife, without, however, severing the head from the body. In this, the Valley of Menah, each pilgrim collects forty-nine stones for the "lapidation," or stoning of the devil, on the 10th, 11th and 12th days of Zulhijjah, in commemoration of the tradition that Abraham was there tempted three times, of the devil, not to sacrifice Isaac when commanded by God to do so.

ALOHA—The name of the ancient Egyptian Christian kingdom which was situated on the west bank of the Blue Nile. The old town is in ruins, and contains the foundation of a basilican church. The ruins were discovered by the German Egyptologist, Dumichen, in 1869. Graves of a Christian cemetery have also been found. The village which has been built on the ruins of the ancient Aloha is known as "Soba."

AL AZHAR—Arabic for "the flowers" (of learning and religion). Al Azhar was originally a mosque in Cairo, but it has been converted into the principal university of the Mohammedan world, being attended by from ten to twelve thousand students from all parts of the East. The chief text-book is the Mohammedan Bible, or the Koran. No tuition is charged, and daily rations of bread and other provisions are distributed to almost all students from proceeds of funds which are frequently left to the institution by wealthy Mohammedans. Many of its graduates go to other parts of Africa as missionaries, to teach the Moslem doctrines.

AL SHIAH—"The follower," derived from the Arabic word "shaa," meaning "to follow." A follower of the sect of Ali, the fourth caliph after Mohammed; "shiah" signifies a multitude following one another in pursuit of the same object. All Persians belong to the Shiite sect. They reject the first three caliphs, Abou-Bekr, Omar and Osman, and consider Ali (pronounced "Alee"), the first and only rightful successor of the Prophet; they do not acknowledge the Sunna, or body of traditions respecting Mohammed, as any part of the law. For these reasons the Shiites are treated as heretics by the Sunnites, or leading orthodox Moslems.

ANEZEH—The name of an oasis, and one of the two principal towns in Nejd, Arabia, located about four hundred miles northeast of Mecca. It is one of the commercial centers in Arabia. Anezeh is also the name of one of the well known Arabian tribes.

ANSAR—The name of a Syrian district. The plural form of "nasar," and meaning "helpers."

ANTIOCH—A town in the province of Aleppo, Turkey, fifty-seven miles west of the city of Aleppo. It is located on the left bank of the river Orontes, which in Turkish and Arabic is called "Nahr-el-Asy," and literally translated, means "river the rebellious," because the river appears to flow in opposite directions. Antioch is well known for its trade in silk and other products of the district. It was there that the followers of Christ were first called Christians.

At that time, and for several centuries thereafter, Antioch was famed for its wealth, magnificence and learning. About 300 B. C., Seleucius Nicator beautified it. Its ancient population was estimated at 400,000, when in its most flourishing state. In the days of John Chrysostom, native of Antioch and Bishop of Constantinople, in the fourth century, it harbored 200,000 souls, of whom one-half were Christians. Up to 658 A. D., when it was captured by the Saracens, it had maintained its original importance and magnificence. It is today an unimportant Turkish town. Shattered remains of the city walls, a ruined aqueduct, two old bridges and a portion of pavement are the only vestiges of the city's ancient glory and greatness.

ARABIA—"Desert," derived from a root meaning "to inhabit the desert."

ARARAT—A famous volcanic mountain of Armenia, at the junction of the Russian, Turkish and Persian empires. Noah's ark, according to the Scriptures, rested on the top of Mount Ararat. In the Bible, "Ararat," or the "Land of Ararat" refers to the country subsequently known as Armenia.

BAGDAD—A city of Asiatic Turkey, and capital of the province of Bagdad. It is built on both sides of the Tigris River, and the two parts of the city are connected by a bridge of boats. Bagdad is one of the most important cities in Turkey and a great commercial center. It was built in 763 A. D., by Caliph Al-Mansur, out of the ruins of the two ancient cities, Ctesiphon and Seleucia, and was named "Medinet-es-Salam," "the city of peace." Until 1258, it was under the rule of caliphs, among whom Haroun-er-Rashid is the most illustrious. Bagdad has been held by the Turks since 1638. The summer heat is excessive but not humid, and during the heated term the inhabitants dwell chiefly in "serdabs" or semi-subterranean rooms. It is an Arabic-speaking city, having a population of 150,000, mostly Mohammedans, about one-eighth being Jews.

BALLUT ABYAD—"White oak," "oak the white," being the literal translation from the Arabic.

BEDOUIN—"They who dwell in the desert." The name given to the nomadic Arabs who live in tents and who are scattered over Arabia, Syria, and northern Africa, especially in the deserts.

BEKTASH—Hajji Bektash, entitled "Vely" or "Saint," was a Turkish Moslem who founded an order of dervishes which bears his name. When called upon by Murad I., Sultan of Turkey, to bless the standard of his new militia, Bektash gave them the name of "Yeni Chery," or "new soldiers," which in English has been corrupted into janissary or janizary. Bektash's name is transliterated as "Bektasch" in German, and "Bektach" in French. A striking illustration of the various transliterations of the same name is seen in "Seljookides," the name of the progenitors of the Turks. which was taken from "Seljook," one of their chieftains, of the eleventh century. The French write the word, "Seldjoukides," the Germans, "Seldschukiden," and the Latins, "Selgiukides," each European nation having its own method of transliterating Oriental names.

BEN HUR—Arabic for "son of the freedman," the name given to the hero of General Lew Wallace's well known historical novel of that name.

BENI KEDEM—"Tribe of Kedem," the name of an Arabian tribe. "Beni," "son of," "tribe of." "Beni Israel," "Sons of Israel," "Israelites."

BOUMI—Arabic for "owl."

CALAM—Arabic for "word." "Calam-i-Kadim," "the ancient word," "the eternally existing word of Allah," which, according to the Moslem belief, is the Koran.

CAIRO—"El Kahirah," meaning "the victorious." Cairo is the Italian corruption of "Kahirah," the Arabic official name of the capital of Egypt. It is also known as "Maer," the Arabic for Egypt, and "Maer" corresponds to the Hebrew "Mizraim," of the Bible. The city of Cairo is divided into several distinct quarters, formerly separated by gates, and inhabited by Copts, Jews, and Europeans; the Copts being descendants of the ancient Egyptians; the Jews, of Jacob; and the Europeans, modern nations, known throughout the East as "Franks." Arabic is the official language of Cairo. The notable edifices in the city all date from the time of the ancient caliphs and sultans of Egypt, and are among the finest specimens of purely Arabian architecture. "El Azhar," the most famous Mohammedan university in the world, is in Cairo.

CRESCENT—"Increasing," (moon being understood). "Crescendo," the Italian musical term has same origin. The crescent was the symbol of the Roman goddess Diana, daughter of Jupiter and Latona, identified with the Greek virgin goddess, Artemis, who was said to preside over hunting, chastity and marriage. The crescent was also used by the Greeks as the symbol of their ancient Byzantium, but after the taking of its stronghold, Constantinople, by Mohammed II., in 1453, the emblem of Byzantium was adopted by the Turks as that of the (then) newly-formed Turkish Empire.

CYPRUS—An island in the Mediterranean which was renowned for the worship of Venus, the goddess of beauty and love. Cyprus was colonized by the Phoenicians, about 2000 B. C. Subsequently it fell under the domination of various powers—Egypt, Assyria, Persia, Greece—and became a Roman province in 58 B. C. In 1191 A. D., Richard I conquered the island, and gave it to Guy de Lusignan, in whose family it remained till 1473, when it passed to the Venetians. In 1573 it was conquered by the Turks, but since 1878 it has been in the possession of Great Britain, as a naval base. About twenty-three per cent of the island's inhabitants are Moslems, and the remainder are principally Christians of the Greek church, whose archbishop is independent of any other ecclesiastical authority.

DAMASCUS—An Arabic word, derived from the Hebrew, and meaning "activity." Arabic being the language of the city, the Arabs call it "Dumushk," and "Berr-esh-Sham," or "the land of Sham," or "Sham." Beirout, Aleppo, Bagdad, Jerusalem, and Damascus are the most important Arabic-speaking cities in the Ottoman Empire. Damascus is also one of the two oldest cities in the world, the other being Joppa. According to Josephus, Damascus was founded by Uz, son of Aram, and grandson of Shem. It is mentioned in the Scriptures as the residence of Eliezer, steward of Abraham. Damascus has numerous mosques, surmounted by golden crescents, and tall, graceful minarets, which show to advantage against the deep green foliage. The most conspicuous object in Damascus is the Great Mosque, a magnificent edifice of Christian origin, which has a dome a hundred and twenty feet in height and three minarets, one of them being two hundred and fifty feet high. Other notable structures are the "Great Khan," or "inn," the Greek cathedral and churches, and an Armenian convent. The street called "Straight," mentioned in the Book of Acts, is one mile in length, and runs through the city from east to west. The inhabitants of Damascus number 210,000, about 180,000 of whom are Mohammedans, and the remainder, Christians and Jews. Cotton, wool and silk weaving by hand, metal work, and inlaid work in mother-of-pearl, are the chief industries of Damascus.

EL HASA—The low-lying coast strip of Arabia, on the Persian Gulf, north of Oman, belonging to Turkey. Its chief towns are El Katif and El Hofuf in the south, and Koweit in the north. It has an area of about 31,000 square miles, and its estimated population is about 150,000.

EL JEBEL—"The mountain." Jebel Nur, "the Mountain of Light," in Hejaz, Arabia, near Mecca, where, according to the Moslem belief, the angel Gabriel delivered to the Prophet the first portion of the Koran.

ELF KHURAFEH—Arabic for "one thousand fairy tales," "elf" meaning one thousand, and "khurafeh," meaning legend, mythological story or fairy tale.

EL KAHIR—Arabic for "the victorious." "Al-Kahir-Billah," "victorious by the grace of Allah." He was a caliph of the house of Abbas, who ascended the throne in 929, A. D. and was dethroned after a reign of something more than a year.

EL KALAH—In Arabic, "the fortress." The name of an ancient fortress, which though located on a high hill, near the Nile, was invisible from the river.

EL KARUBAH—Arabic for "the ruins." The village of Elkherba represents the ancient city of Abydos, Egypt, and is also the site of the ancient tombs and temples built by the kings of the twelfth and thirteenth dynasties. The site was excavated by Professor Petrie in 1902, for the Egyptian Exploration Fund.

EL KATIF—A maritime town in Arabia, province of El Hasa, on the northwest side of the Gulf of Bahrein. It is noted for its pearl fisheries. The name is also applied to the district of which the town is a part. The population is about 18,000.

EL KORAH—A Bible character, son of Izhar, son of Kohath, son of Levi. He was the leader of the famous rebellion against his cousins, Moses and Aaron, in the Wilderness of Sin, for which, according to the Scriptural account, he paid the penalty of perishing, with his followers, by earthquake and fire. The grievance which rankled in the mind of Korah and his companions was that they were excluded from the office of priesthood, and relegated to inferior service in the tabernacle.

EL MAIDA—An Arabic word, meaning "the ford," or "the ferry." Properly, "El Maadiya," the name of a station on the railroad line between Alexandria and Rosetta, Egypt.

EL MINAH—The same as "Almenah," previously described.

EL RIAD—An Arabic name, properly spelled, "Er-Riad." Capital of the province or Nejd, Central Arabia, and chief town of the kingdom of the Wahabites. Er-Riad is about four hundred and fifty miles northeast of Mecca and is surrounded by fortifications of thick walls, flanked by high towers, constructed by the Egyptians. The population is 35,000.

EL ZAGAL—From the Arabic, meaning "to be cheerful;" properly spelled, in Arabic, "ez zagal."

EL ZARIBAH—An Arabic word, meaning "milk of several camels in the same bucket." Properly, "ez zaribah."

GIZEH—A village on the left bank of the Nile, nearly opposite Cairo. A few miles to its west are the great pyramids, the largest of which is named the Pyramid of Gizeh, and attributed to Cheops, one of the Pharaohs. It is seven hundred and forty-six feet square at its foundation, 450 feet high, and covers more than twelve acres. In this district is the colossal Sphinx, and to the south of the town of Gizeh are the ruins of Memphis. The population of Gizeh is estimated at about 11,000.

HADI—Arabic for "leader," or "camel-driver."

HAMASA—A commercial and manufacturing town in Syria, anciently known as "Emesa." It is situated on the "rebellious" river Asy, of which the ancient name was Orontes, and is about ninety miles northeast of Damascus, and fifty-six miles east of Tripoli, Turkey. The city of Hamasa manufactures cotton and woolen stuffs, and is also the center of an agricultural and pastoral district, famed for its horses.

HELLA—In Arabic, means "the beginning of a moon." All Arabic holidays begin with the first appearance of the moon, signaled by the firing of a gun.

HILLAH—A town in Asiatic Turkey, located on the right bank of the Euphrates, sixty-three miles south of Bagdad, and nearly opposite the ruins of Babylon. Hillah is enclosed by earth ramparts and a ditch; is entered by four gates, and has a citadel. It is famed for its manufactures of silks and its tanneries. The population is estimated at 30,000, all but about five hundred being Sunnite, or orthodox Moslems.

INDIA—A country of teeming millions of human souls; land of mysticism, occultism and castes; the cradle of civilization and of all types of Oriental thought; the home of Vishnu, Kali and Juggernaut; centre of Brahmanism and Sanscrit learning; the seat of government of the Grand Moguls; the homeland of the incomparable "Taj Mahal," Arabic for "place of crown," the exquisitely beautiful mausoleum in white marble and red sandstone, which was erected by Shah Jehan, the Indian Moslem emperor, in memory of his wife, and is the finest existing specimen of Mohammedan architecture—not purely Arabian, however—a poem in stone, a heavenly dream substantialized. Its delicate ornamentation in marble has been compared to Venetian lace. The monument is said to be the most beautiful ever raised to the memory of a woman.

IREM—A Scriptural name, identical with "Iram," the name of an Edomite, or Arabian, "duke," or "emir," or tribal prince mentioned in Genesis, 36:43, whose name is identical with that of the King of Edom who paid tribute to Sennacherib, King of Assyria.

ISIS—According to Egyptian mythology, Isis was the mother of Horus, and the sister and wife of Osiris. The Egyptians adored her as the goddess of fecundity, and as the great benefactress of their country who instructed their ancestors in the art of agriculture.

ISLAM—An Arabic word which includes the idea of "obedience and submission to the will of Allah." Islam is synonymous with Mohammedanism, its creed, or distinctive formula of faith being, "There is no deity but Allah, and Mohammed is His Prophet."

ISMAILIA—The name of an Egyptian town situated on the west side of the Suez Canal, forty-six miles south of Port Said. It was named for Ismail Pasha, Khedive of Egypt, who lived, 1830-1895. His khediviate covered the period from 1863 to 1879. The title of khedive was first granted to him, as the ruler of Egypt, in 1867, by the Sultan of Turkey.

JAFFA—In Turkish, "Yafa," and in English, "Joppa." It is an Arabic-speaking town of Syria in Palestine, belonging to the Ottoman Empire, and located on the Mediterranean, thirty-three miles northwest of Jerusalem, with which city it is connected by a railway starting from the north of the town, close to the seashore, and proceeding past Lydda, Ramleh, Wadi Surar, the Latin Convent of Deir Aban, and Bittir, covering fifty-four and one-half miles before reaching Jerusalem. Joppa is one of the oldest towns in the world. Around it are fields of watermelons and extensive orange orchards, abounding with wells of good water. The principal exports are oranges, olive oil, and "sesame" oil, a seed extract, used for food and lighting purposes. The fortifications of Joppa were destroyed by Saladin in 1188, A. D. During the Crusades, Richard of England was confined here by sickness. Under the Turks, it was sacked by the Arabs in 1722, by the Egyptian Mamelukes in 1775, and by Napoleon Bonaparte in 1799, following which the "Massacre of Jaffa" was perpetrated.

JERUSALEM—A Hebrew word which means "foundation of peace." Jerusalem is an Arabic-speaking city in Palestine, and the capital of the Holy Land. The Arabs call it "El Kuds," "Kuds," "Kuds-i-Sherif," "the holy," "the most holy," or the "City of David." It is the pride and glory of the Israelite, and the most sacred place of pilgrimage for both Jew and Christian. The city is divided into four separate quarters, in which reside Moslems, Christians in general, Armenian Christians, and Jews. Jerusalem contains the Haram Area, which in Arabic is known as "el-haram-esh-sherif," the "sacred enclosure," which is located on the summit of ancient Mount Moriah, where stood the temple of Solomon and the temple of Herod. Within this area is the so-called "Mosque of Omar," built, not by Omar, but by Caliph Abd-el-Malik, toward the close of the seventh century, A. D. The enclosure in which this celebrated mosque stands is considered by the Mohammedans as second in sanctity to Mecca and Medina only, and it is therefore jealously guarded. The edifice is more properly called the "Dome of the Rock," or, in Arabic, "Kubbet-es-Sakhra." Jerusalem has been a Turkish town since 1187, A. D.

KAABA—Arabic for "cube." The Kaaba is located in Mecca, Arabia, and contains the famous "Black Stone," said to have been brought from heaven. Before the time of the Prophet, the Kaaba was an idolatrous temple, but it has since been the chief sanctuary and object of pilgrimage of the Mohammedan world.

KALIF—Arabic for "successor" or "vicar." Also spelled "caliph," and "calif." It is a title by which the successors of Mohammed are known and confers both temporal and spiritual authority. The title of caliph now assumed by the Sultan of Turkey is held both by him and the Sultan of Morocco, and formerly was held by the sultans of Bagdad, Cairo, and Cordova, at different times.

KALURAH—A corrupted spelling of Keturah. The name of a Bible character, a concubine of Abraham, whose sons (by Abraham) were Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbak and Shuah. They all became heads of tribes bearing their respective names, and crossed the desert to the Persian Gulf, occupying the whole intermediate country, in which traces of all their names may be noted, except that of the Midianites, who are located further south, in the peninsula of Arabia proper.

KARNAK—A village in Upper Egypt, five hundred yards from the right or east bank of the Nile, on a portion of the site of Ancient Thebes. It contains the finest group of the ruins of that historic metropolis.

KEM—An ancient Egyptian word meaning "black land," and commonly applied to all of Egypt by the Egyptians.

KEDIVE—Properly, "khedive." A Persian word meaning "a prince." A title, granted in 1867 by the Sultan of Turkey to the ruler of Egypt, as previously mentioned under "Ismailia."

KERAK—The name of a town in Palestine, referred to in the Old Testament as "Kir." It is situated west of the ancient Heshbon, formerly the capital of Moab. Kerak has a ruined citadel, founded in 1131, and was a great stronghold in the Middle Ages, during the invasion of the Crusaders, by whom the town was captured and made a bishopric. Its population is 8,000, of whom more than 6,000 are Moslems, 1,800 Christians, and the remainder Jews.

KERBELA—This name is of uncertain origin.

KHARTUM—The name of a town in Eastern Soudan, on the left bank of the Blue Nile, "Bahr-el-Azrek." Khartoum (or Khartum) was founded by Mohammed Ali, in 1821. It is fortified with walls and detached forts, and is a center of considerable commerce, having a population of more than fifty thousand.

KISMET—Arabic for "destiny," or "fate." The doctrine which it represents is known as fatalism, the teaching of which is that all things are subject to fate, or that they take place by inevitable necessity. Italians call it, "Che sara, sara," "What will be, will be."

KORA—Thought to be an ancient Arabic word. Kora is the name of an island in the Niger, the third longest river in Africa.

KOREIN—A town in Asiatic Turkey, on the south side of a bay opening westward, at the head of the Persian Gulf, eighty miles south of the well known Arabic-speaking city of Basra.

KOSAIR—A different spelling of "Kusiva," a town in Egypt, which was the ancient "Cusae," or "Chusae;" in Coptic, "Koskoo." According to Greek mythology, Aphrodite Urania was the deity of the place. The people of Cusae also worshiped a sacred cow, the deity of which was Hathor. To the Egyptians the town was anciently known as "Kesi."

LU LU—An Arabic word signifying "pearl," "jewel."

LUXOR—A corrupted form of Arabic "El-Aksar," meaning "the palaces." A village in Upper Egypt, on the east bank of the Nile, two miles south of Karnak, on a portion of the site of ancient Thebes, and having one of the most magnificent ancient temples.

MECCA—Capital of the province of Hejaz, Arabia, one of the two holy cities of the Mohammedans; the birthplace of Mohammed, and the cradle of the Moslem creed. It contains the Kaaba. Every Mohammedan is expected to make a pilgrimage to Mecca at least once in his lifetime. At the time of the annual pilgrimage, Mecca presents the appearance of an immense fair. There are assembled Malays, Tartars, Persians, Arabs, Turks, Africans, Hindoos, and others, who also repair to the holy Mount Arafat, three miles distant from Mecca, on which Mohammed prayed. At that place, to make the pilgrimage complete, they must offer a sacrifice to Allah.

MEDEA—Identical with the ancient Lamida, Medea is a town in Algeria, southwest of Algiers, on the route between Algiers and Laghwat. It was taken by the French in 1830, and has since remained one of the French possessions in Africa. It is surrounded by extensive vineyards.

MEDINA—An Arabic word signifying "city." It is also called "Medinet-el-Nabi," which means "City of the Prophet." Medina is one of the holy cities of the Mohammedan world, and is situated in the province of Hejaz, Arabia, two hundred and fifty-five miles north of Mecca, and two hundred and forty miles northeast of the port of Jidda, on the Red Sea. Medina is partly walled, has a fort, and is the chief stronghold of the province of Hejaz. It is surrounded on three sides by mountains. Mohammed, when driven from Mecca, fled to Medina, in 622, A. D.; and from this epoch-making event, called the Hegira—abbreviated into A. H., (Anno Hegira)—the Mohammedans reckon their dates. It was in Medina that Mohammed died in the year 632. The great mosque known as "El Haram," or "the sacred place," which was built on the spot where Mohammed is reputed to have died, is smaller than the Holy Mosque of Mecca.

MELHA—An Arabic word referring to the most delicious part of a camel's flesh, meaning its hump.

MIDIAN—Hebrew, name of a Bible character, son of Abraham by Keturah. Also the name of the tract of land now occupied by the descendants of Midian, or the Muzeiny Arabs. It is on the west side of the Gulf of Akabah. From an early period the Midianites have carried on considerable commerce between Egypt and the regions as far north as Gilead, in Palestine.

MIRZA—A Persian word meaning "prince," or signifying a mere honorary title. It is corrupted from two Arabic words, "emir," or "amir," ruler, and "zadeh," a son. From the combination of the two words—"emirzadeh"—the Persians have made a new word, "mirzadeh" and that has been abbreviated to "mirza." If the word is used before the proper name, it denotes a mere honorary title; if used after the name, it signifies "prince," and is given to the male members of the blood royal; for instance, Mirza Melkoum Khan, not of blood royal, was an ambassador of Persia at the court of St. James, whereas Nasr-ed-din, one of the shahs of Persia, was "Nasr-ed-din Mirza" before his accession to the throne.

Fire Patrol of 1915

MIZPAH—The name borne by several places in ancient Palestine, of which the following is the most noted, and from which the temple without doubt derived its name: A place in the mountainous region of Gilead, on the east side of Jordan, which owed its name to a circumstance in the history of Laban and Jacob, recorded in Genesis XXXI: 48, 49. On Mount Gilead, Jacob took a stone and set it up for a pillar, and there they gathered heaps of stones for a memorial, and they sat and feasted together. "And Laban said, This heap is a witness between me and thee this day. Therefore was the name of it called Galeed," which means "heap of witness," and "Mizpah," which means "watch-tower."

MOCHA—The corrupted or anglicized form of Mecca.

MOHAMMED—The founder of the Mohammedan religion who was born in Mecca, Arabia, in 570, A. D. He was a member of the Koreish tribe, at that time the most influential of all the Arabian tribes. His father, Abdallah, "the servant of Allah," was regarded as the handsomest youth of his time. His mother, Aminah, the "faithful woman," belonged to the noble family of Zohrah. Mohammed, the future Prophet, was an only child. Aminah possessed a peculiarly nervous temperament, and used to fancy, between sleeping and waking, that she was visited by spirits. It is probable that Mohammed inherited from his mother his constitutional tendency to epilepsy, as well as his most remarkable mental peculiarities. When twenty-five years of age, Khadijah, a rich forty-year-old widow, of Mecca, being well pleased with Mohammed's business sagacity, offered him her hand, and it was accepted. To the groom it was a most advantageous marriage, and raised him to an equal position with the wealthiest inhabitants of Mecca. Until his fortieth year he was a devout worshiper of the gods or idols of his fathers. About this time he began to entertain serious scruples respecting the worship of idols. His followers ascribe the change to a divine revelation. Others claimed that his inspiration was due to the information he acquired from his wife's cousin, Waraka, who was a Jew, but became a Christian. Four years later, Mohammed announced his revelations. A propos of Mohammed's, or anybody's revelations, the following remarks by a modern writer are interesting: "When a doctor makes a guess about a disease he calls it 'a diagnosis.' When a lawyer makes a guess about the law, he calls it 'an opinion.' When a stock-gambler makes a guess about stock, he calls it 'a speculation.' When a preacher makes a guess about the next world he calls it 'faith,' or a 'revelation.'" Mohammed formally separated himself from the polytheists and publicly condemned their religion. His renunciation of the religion of his fathers put his life and those of his disciples in extreme danger. He had bitter enemies in the tribe of Koreish, to which he belonged. In all his trials he found a great support in his faithful wife, Khadijah, who was the first of all his disciples. He owed his life, in those perilous times, to the influence of the powerful family of Hashem, and especially to the magnanimity, courage, and indomitable firmness of his uncle, Aboo-Talib, who, although he refused to accept the new faith, resolved, at whatever cost, to protect his kinsman. In spite of all opposition, the new doctrine continued to spread. About the year 619 A. D., Mohammed's faithful wife died. As long as she lived, he was a monogamist. After her death he married several wives. According to his teachings only four lawful wives were allowed to his followers, but he himself had eleven wives, besides several concubines. A price having been set upon his head, Mohammed left his native city and fled into Medina, in 622. This event begins the Mohammedan Calendar and the era of the "Hejrah," or "Hegira." However, it is calculated, not from the very day of Mohammed's flight, but from the beginning of the lunar year in which it occurred, namely, July 16, 622 A. D. Mohammed died in the eleventh year following his flight to Medina. When he ceased to breathe, his followers refused to believe that he was dead. The authority of Abou Bekr was required to quell the tumult. "Is it Mohammed, or the God of Mohammed, whom you worship? God liveth for ever and ever; but Mohammed, though His prophet and apostle, was mortal like ourselves, and, in dying, has but fulfilled his own prediction." Mohammed was of middle stature, with broad shoulders and chest, square-built and strong, with large hands and feet. The unusual size of his head was partly concealed by long and slightly curling locks of hair. His forehead was broad and fair for an Arab, and his fine eye brows were separated by a vein which swelled up and became very conspicuous when he was angry. His eyelashes were long, and his eyes dark and glowing. His nose was large, prominent and slightly hooked; his mouth was wide, but adorned with a fine set of teeth. He stooped, and was slightly round-shouldered. With all its drawbacks, the religious system he established made him and his followers better, and not worse.

MOILA—The name of a valley between Cairo and Medinet-el-Fayyum, Egypt, in which are a ruined Christian convent or monastery, and a spring of salt water. It is a curious group of ruins, among which are the remnants of a stone and brick church, surrounded by a wall. Here have been found several Coptic and a few Arabic inscriptions, also figures of the apostles and saints.

MOOLAH—In Arabic, "maula." One of the higher order of Mohammedan judges. A title of respect applied to a religious and learned man.

MOROCCO—A corruption of the Arabic "El Maghreb," "the west," or "Maghreb-el-Aksa," the "furthest west." A sultanate or empire in Northern Africa, which until recently was the last of the independent Barbary States, while at the same time the most primitive kingdom "within a stone's throw" of Europe. Morocco is bounded on the Mediterranean side by Algeria, which is French territory, and its population is computed to be less than four millions, consisting of Arabs, commonly known as Moors; Berbers, who are the aborigines or Moroccan mountaineers, Jews, negroes, and slaves or descendants of slaves brought by the Timbuctoo caravans from the Soudan. The ruler of the land is invested with the title of "sultan," and is known as the "Emir-el-Muminin," or the "Prince of the Believers," and as such, he, and not the Sultan of Turkey, is recognized as the true caliph, or successor of Mohammed. Within the limits of the sultanate are several semi-independent tribes, the heads of which are known as "sherifs," or "holy ones," one of whom, the Sherif of Wazan, claims priority to the sultan of the country, and exercises hereditary authority in his district, being a direct descendant of Mohammed. In recent years, a sherifa of Wazan, the wife of the sherif, was an Englishwoman, and one of her sons is the present Sherif of Wazan.

MOSLAH—An Arabic word meaning "good," "pious," "reformed."

MOSLEM—A corruption of the Arabic "Muslim," "one who is resigned," (to the will of Allah being understood). The same as Mussulman and Mohammedan.

MOUNT SINAI—A mountain peak in Arabia Petræa, famous in Scripture, and generally identified with "Jebel Mousa," or the "Mount of Moses," the altitude of which is 8,535 feet; one of a cluster of mountains of which Mount Horeb forms a part of the north end, these being two peaks of a mountain now known as Mount Catherine. On the northeast side of Mount Catherine, believed to be the true Mount Sinai of Scripture, is the fortified monastery of St. Catherine, founded by the Emperor Justinian, in 527 A. D.

MURAT—Derived from an Arabic root meaning "to be good," "to be beneficial," "to be manly," "to be brave," "to be humane."

NAJA—An Arabic word which means "salvation," "everlasting happiness."

NEMESIS—From a Greek word, meaning "to distribute." According to Greek mythology, the name of the goddess of retribution and vengeance, who keeps watch in the universe, and lets no offense go unchastised.

NILE—From the Semitic word "nahal," meaning "river." The most famous river of the Old World. Known to the Arabic-speaking Egyptians of today as "Nil-i-Mubarek," "Nile the Blessed," as the history, civilization and prosperity of Egypt are due to the Nile. The total length of the river is 3,670 miles, of which 3,100 miles are navigable.

OASIS—Of Coptic origin. A fertile or green spot in a sandy desert.

OLEIKA—The name of an important valley in Soudanese territory. It is under British suzerainty and has gold mines which are being worked by British companies. Rameses II bored a well there, and reopened the gold mines after they had been closed for some time.

OMAR—The name of the second caliph or successor of the Prophet. His full name is "Omar Abu-Hafsan-Ibnul-Khattab." After having attempted to kill Mohammed, Omar was converted to Islam, about 615 A. D., and succeeded Abou Bekr, the first caliph, in the year 634. His army took Damascus in 635, and Jerusalem in 636. About this time he also conquered Syria and Persia. He subdued Egypt in 641, and consumed by fire the great library at Alexandria. He said to his soldiers, "If the books in the library accord with the Koran, they are unnecessary; and if they are contrary to the Koran, they are pernicious, and should be destroyed." He was assassinated by a Persian slave, Firooz, in his capital, Medina, in the year 644, at the age of sixty-three, and was succeeded by Othman, or "Osman."

ORAK—An abbreviation and adaptation of the Latin word "oracle" or "oraculum," which in addition to the usual meaning, "an utterance given by a priest or priest of God," also contains the meaning of the place where such oracular utterances were given, "the sanctuary," or "most holy place" in the temple of Solomon, in which was deposited the ark of the covenant; 1 Kings, VI:19, and which was also sometimes used for the temple itself.

ORIENTAL—Belonging to the Orient. The part of the horizon where the sun first appears in the morning is known as the orient. The word is derived from the Latin word "oriri," "to rise."

OSIRIS—One of the principal divinities of Egypt, the brother and husband of Isis. He was figured as a mummy, wearing the royal cap of Egypt, and was symbolized by the sacred bull, called "apis."

OSMAN—The third of the caliphs who succeeded Mohammed. He was a distant relative and a devoted follower of the Prophet. His full name was Othman-Ibn-Affan. He was invested with the caliphate in 644, A. D. He was married successively to two daughters of the Prophet, and made extensive conquests in Persia, Africa and the Island of Cyprus, but rendered himself unpopular by the favors which he lavished upon his relatives and friends. He was assassinated in 656.

PALESTINE—The popular title of the Holy Land, of which Jerusalem is the capital and metropolis.

PHILÆ—The name of an island in the Nile, six miles above its first cataracts. It is covered with remains of temples, obelisks, and other ancient structures. Owing to the building of the Assouan Dam, for the saving of the waters of the Nile for irrigation purposes, the island of Philæ has been partly submerged.

PYRAMID—A pyramid is defined as a solid body, standing on a triangular, square, or polygonal base, which terminates in a point at the top. Structures of this description originated in, and are characteristic of, Egypt.

RAJAH—Derived from the Sanskrit word "rajan," meaning "to rule." It is akin to the Latin words "rex" and "regis." A Hindoo prince or king; also, a landholder or person of importance in the agricultural

FACSIMILES OF FOUR TURKISH PASSPORTS AND THE TURKISH OFFICIAL EXCLAMATION

Passport No. 1 was issued to a naturalized American citizen who at the time was desirous of visiting in Turkey. The passport was granted him on condition that he was never to return to Turkey, which, as an Armenian, was his native land. It was issued in the city of Harpoot, (Mamouret-il-Aziz), in 1896, in the bloodiest days of the most oppressive reign of Abdul Hamid II, Sultan of Turkey, and bears a facsimile of the imperial seal of that monarch, now deposed and virtually incarcerated. The reverse of the document bears, in Osmanli Turkish and French, a description of the bearer's wife and daughter, and records the fact that the passport had been viséd, notably by the United States Consular Agent at Samsoon, Turkey. It also bears the imprint of the seal of the governor of the province.

Passport No. 2 was issued ten years subsequent to the issuance of Passport No. 1. The holder of Passport No. 2, also an Armenian, publicly renounces his allegiance to the Turkish government, and receives his passport on condition that he is never to return to Turkey. This passport, also, was issued in the city of Adana during the Hamidian reign, and on its reverse is recorded his renunciation of allegiance to the Turkish government.

Passport No. 3, an "Internal Passport," is issued for the benefit of travelers within the Turkish domain, and the one here presented was given in the city of Mersine, the seaport of the province of Adana, in 1908, shortly before the dethronement of Abdul Hamid II. Besides containing a description of the bearer, the document enjoins upon officials in Turkey to give the holder aid and protection in his travels. The reverse of Passport No. 3 records the fact that the bearer has no companions under his care. No French is used in this document, because not required, as the bearer is to travel only within Turkish territory.

Passport No. 4, also an "Internal Passport," was issued to an Armenian lady in the city of Adana, the seat of government of the province of Adana. It was granted her soon after Abdul Hamid's deposition; hence, its superscription is a facsimile of the official seal of his successor, Mehmed Reshad V, the present Sultan of Turkey. On the reverse of Passport No. 4 is a description of the bearer's minor son, who was to accompany her throughout her travels in Turkey.

In the passports herein referred to, the facsimiles of the Imperial seals occupy a conspicuous place, and it will be noted that while the seals of Abdul Hamid II and Mehmed V appear quite alike, yet on closer inspection they will be found very different. The originals in each case were made by an expert Turkish penman, and each seal embodies the names in full of the sovereign whom it represents. That of Abdul Hamid reads: "Abdul Mejid Shahzade, Abdul Hamid Khan." In addition to its whorls and curls, there is a detached section on the right, which reads, "El Ghazy," meaning, "The Victorious." Ever since Mohammed II conquered Constantinople in 1453, the Turkish Sultans have attached the title of "El-Ghazy" to their seals. It is a curious fact, however, that the addition to the seal of Mehmed V, is not "El-Ghazy," but "Reshad," his "second" name, by which he is also known. The officials, in sealing the passports, make a rough imprint of their respective seals on each document, but each passport contains a facsimile representation of the royal seal, which, in the Turkish language, is known as "toughra," while the seal of an ordinary individual is called "khatem," or "muhr."

The inscription in the center of the group of passports is a Turkish motto: "Padishahum Choke Yasha!" which being interpreted, is "Live long, O my King!" it being the regulation military, naval and civilian exclamation, used on all occasions of public meetings, addresses, martial processions, and civic parades. It is also the exclamation of soldiers when assembled before the Imperial palace in Constantinople, or before the government houses in the Turkish provinces.

The first word of the exclamation, "Padishah," is for "King," the ending "um" being the possessive suffix "my." The word "Padishah" is the most popular title of the Sultan of Turkey, as "Shah" is of the Persian sovereign, though the latter also adds "Padishah" to his many titles. "Khan" is another of the numerous titles assumed by the Turkish sovereigns, and it is also a part of the "toughra" or Imperial seal. The title "Kahn" was adopted from that of the rulers of Turkestan whom they pretend to represent. In the same way the rulers of Turkey have appropriated the title of "Caliph."

The passports issued for safe-conduct within Turkish territory are written in Osmanli Turkish, the official and most widely spoken language in Turkey. It is the modernized form of the original Turkish spoken in Turkestan from time immemorial. The Osmanli Turkish is really the old Turkish, modified, refined, and enriched, based upon the rough Turkish spoken by the Mohammedan hordes, who, in the tenth century, A. D., immigrated into Asia Minor from Turkestan, and who, under Othman, founded the Osmanli Empire. "Othman" is an Arabic word, and as in the Turkish language there is no "th" sound, the Turks have substituted therefor the sound of "s," making it "Osman," while the English and most of the European languages have further corrupted "Osman" into "Ottoman." The Osmanli Turkish contains thousands of Arabic and Persian words, just as the English language has incorporated and absorbed thousands of Latin words. Neither the Turkestan Turks nor the Turks of Turkey (Osmanli Turks) have scripts or an alphabet of their own, but have adopted the Arabic characters.

In the passports issued for safe-conduct during foreign travel, French as well as Osmanli Turkish is used in descriptions and directions. The former being the language of diplomacy throughout the civilized world, is used in all international treaties and passports.

The word "Padishah" is the most popular title of the Sultan of Turkey, as "Shah" is of the Persian sovereign, though the latter also adds "Padishah" to his many titles. "Khan" is another of the numerous titles assumed by the Turkish sovereigns, and it is also a part of the "tougbra" or Imperial seal. The title "Khan" was adopted from that of the rulers of Turkestan whom they pretend to represent. In the same way the rulers of Turkey have appropriated the title of "Caliph."

The passports issued for safe-conduct within Turkish territory are written in Osmanli Turkish, the official and most widely spoken language in Turkey. It is the modernized form of the original Turkish spoken in Turkestan from time immemorial. The Osmanli Turkish is really the old Turkish, modified, refined, and enriched, based upon the rough Turkish spoken by the Mohammedan hordes, who, in the tenth century, A. D., immigrated into Asia Minor from Turkestan, and who, under Othman, founded the Osmanli Empire. "Othman" is an Arabic word, and as in the Turkish language there is no "th" sound, the Turks have substituted therefor the sound of "s," making it "Osman," while the English and most of the European languages have further corrupted "Osman" into "Ottoman." The Osmanli Turkish contains thousands of Arabic and Persian words, just as the English language has incorporated and absorbed thousands of Latin words. Neither the Turkestan Turks nor the Turks of Turkey (Osmanli Turks) have scripts or an alphabet of their own, but have adopted the Arabic characters.

In the passports issued for safe-conduct during foreign travel, French as well as Osmanli Turkish is used in descriptions and directions. The former being the language of diplomacy throughout the civilized world, is used in all international treaties and passports.

RAMESES—Derived from an Egyptian word meaning "rising sun." The name of thirteen Egyptian monarchs. Rameses I—The first king of the nineteenth dynasty, who lived in the fifteenth century, B. C. Rameses II—His grandson, who was the greatest of the Egyptian kings. He conquered Ethiopia, defeated the Hittites, captured Jerusalem, and reigned sixty-six years at Thebes, where his mummy was discovered in 1881. Rameses III—The second king of the twentieth dynasty, was also a ruler of great magnificence and a far-conquering soldier. Rameses XIII—The last of the line; he died about 1000 B. C. The other kings of this name were comparatively unimportant.

RIZPAH—The name of a concubine of King Saul, the first king of Israel. She was the mother of his two sons, Armoni and Mephibosheth. Like many other prominent female characters of the Old Testament, such as Ruth, Rahab, and Jezebel, Rizpah was a non-Israelite.

SAHARA—An Arabic word signifying "desert." The largest desert of the earth. The Arabs call it "The Garden of Allah." In spite of the very scanty rainfall, there being no rain whatever in the central parts, the underground water supply is considerable, and the desert is studded by many fertile oases. The only perennial river which forces its way through the desert is the Nile. The names of Sahara's well known oases are: Sivah, Aujila, Fezzan, Ghadames, Ghat, Tirat, Tafilet, Kufra, Kawar, Bilma and Asben. The Sahara is very sparsely peopled by various Semitic and Hamitic tribes. Its area is 3,500,000 square miles.

SALADIN—The common English form of the Arabic "Salah-ed-Din," the "integrity of the faith," its full form being "Malek-Nasir-Yousouf Salah-ed-Din." He was a famous sultan of Egypt, born at the castle of Tekrit, on the river Tigris, in 1137 A. D., the son of Ayoob, a Koordish chief. In 1173 he became master of Southern Syria, and in 1187, conquered Jerusalem. His victorious progress, however, was checked by the armies of the Third Crusade, led by Richard I of England and Philip Augustus of France. In September, 1192, Saladin and Richard Coeur de Lion suspended hostilities by a truce of three years. Saladin died at Damascus, in March, 1193, leaving three sons, among whom his vast dominions were divided. He was a chivalrous and magnanimous prince. When Emperor William of Germany visited Turkey as guest of Sultan Abdul Hamid, he went to Damascus and placed a wreath upon Saladin's tomb.

SALAAM—Arabic for "peace." A salutation or compliment of ceremony in the East, by word or act; an obeisance, performed by bowing very low and placing the right palm on the forehead and the left on the heart.

SESOSTRIS—The Greek form of the name of Rameses II, the most powerful, warlike and illustrious of the Egyptian monarchs. He made canals in Egypt, built a great wall from Pelusium to Heliopolis, and erected several obelisks and many temples. (See under "Rameses," above.)

SPHINX—Derived from a Greek word, meaning "to bind tight together," as if in the act of throttling. Sphinxes are peculiar to both Egyptian and Grecian art. In the former, the sphinx is represented by an image of porphyry, having a human head, or the head of a ram or hawk, upon the wingless body of a lion; in Grecian art, it is represented by a monster having the winged body of a lion and the face and breast of a young woman. The Grecian Sphinx is said to have proposed a riddle to the people who came to see her, killing those who were unable to guess it.

SYRIA—The region lying between the east end of the Mediterranean Sea and the Arabian Desert. The words Syria and Assyria are related, the former being a contracted form of the latter. The ancient Greeks so contracted it, believing Syria to be a province of Assyria. The ancient Semitic name given to this region was Aram, "Aramœa," meaning "High Country." To the Arabs it is known as "Berr-esh-Sham," the "Country of the Left Hand," in contradistinction to "Yemen," the "Country of the Right Hand." The population is estimated at 2,185,000, of whom the majority speak no other language but Arabic.

SYRIAN—A person belonging to, or a native of, Syria.

TANGIER—Locally known as "Tanja," a seaport town in Morocco, at west entrance to the Strait of Gibraltar, thirty-five miles southwest of Gibraltar. Tangier was taken by the Portuguese in 1471 A. D.; it was ceded to the English as a part of the dowry of the Queen of Charles II, in 1662, but was only retained until February, 1684. Outside of the town are the ruins of a Roman bridge.

TRIPOLI—A Greek word, meaning "three cities," in allusion to the three sections of the African town so designated, on the Mediterranean, which is the capital of the province of that name. Tripoli was the last of the Turkish-African possessions to pass from under the dominion of the Ottoman Empire. It was recently captured by Italy. Tripoli is a picturesque town, well known as the starting-point of the shortest and best caravan route to Central Soudan. The Arabs call it "Taraboulous-ul-Gharb," or "Western Tripoli," to distinguish it from the Arabic-speaking Syrian city, which is known merely as "Taraboulous," "Taraboulous-ush-Shark," or "Eastern Tripoli."

WAHABI—A follower of the Mohammedan reformer, Abdel Wahab, of Nejd, Arabia, 1691-1787. His followers are called "Wahabites," (English form of plural) or "Wahabees," (Arabic form of plural). His doctrines prevail particularly among the Bedouin Arabs, and his sect, although somewhat arrested in its influence, extends to most parts of Arabia, and into India.

WA-WA—Derived from the Arabic word "wahwah," meaning "lively," or "mettled."

YAARAB—The name of the son of Joctan, or "Kahtan," as the Arabs call him. Kahtan was the founder of the Arabian Kingdom. Yaarab, who was King Jareb of the Bible, was Kahtan's son and successor, and it was he (Yaarab), who first formed the Arabic language from the original Syriac, according to the Arab philologists. The Arabic language bears his name.

YELDUZ—A Turkish word meaning "a star."

ZAGAZIG—A town in Egypt, forty miles northeast of Cairo.

ZAMORA—A town in Spain, capital of the province of Zamora, on the right bank of the river Douro, fifty-seven miles south of Valladolid.

ZEM ZEM—Ancient Arabic. Frequent allusion is made to the spring of Zem Zem in Arabian and Persian literature. With the Mohammedan, its water ranks second only to that of Kusar, a stream that is said to flow in the Garden of Paradise, keeping the grass ever green and the flowers ever blooming. Ruby wine is compared by the Arabian poets to the water of Zem Zem. (See "The Holy Well of Zem Zem," facing page 122.)

ZENOBIA—The famous ambitious queen of the city of Palmyra, now in ruins, which was the "Tadmor" of the classic writers. It was situated in the Syrian desert, a hundred and twenty miles northeast of Damascus. Palmyra flourished between the year 105 A. D. and the fifteenth century, and still has some magnificent ruins. Zenobia was a daughter of Amrou, an Arabian chief. She was renowned for her beauty and learning, and for her martial and political ability. She was mistress of the Greek, Latin, Syriac and Egyptian languages. At the death of her husband, Odenathus, 266 A. D., she assumed his crown, with the title, "Queen of the East," and performed the active duties of sovereign, continuing the conquests which her husband had begun. Her dominion extended from the Euphrates to the Mediterranean, and over a large part of Asia Minor. The eminent Greek critic and writer, Longinus, served her as secretary and counsellor. Soon after the accession of the emperor Aurelian, in 270 A. D., she asserted her independence, and refused allegiance to the Roman Empire. Aurelian went to war against her in person, and defeated her in two battles, carrying her to Rome fettered with golden chains. She was paraded as a captive before his chariot in the imperial procession, but in other respects the emperor treated her with clemency and gave her a villa, where she passed the remainder of her life.

ZIYARA—Arabic for "pilgrimage."

ZORA } —Two different spellings of the Arabic name of the planet
ZUHRAH } Venus, of which the latter form is more in keeping with the Arabic. It is also the name of the noble family of Mohammed's mother, Aminah.

THE SHERIF OF MECCA

THE Sherif, or the Holy Man, of Mecca, is the chief ecclesiastical dignitary of the Holy City, taking precedence of all its high officials, secular and ecclesiastical, not even excluding the Mayor of the city, who is the direct representative of the Sultan of Turkey. Being a descendant of Mohammed, and thus invested with hereditary power and authority, his word is law in all Mohammedan ecclesiastical matters. It must be said that the Mohammedans of Turkey recognize the Sheik-ul-Islam, an appointee of the Sultan, resident in Constantinople, as the highest ecclesiastical authority, but the Arabian, Egyptian, and Indian or Hindu Moslems, with all others belonging to the rest of the Islamic world, give their allegiance to the Sherif of Mecca.

But although exalted outside the walls of the Haram area in Mecca, within that sacred area he is on a footing with any other Moslem, even with his own slaves. Within that locality he has no power or authority over his fellows. He must be as courteous to his servants or his slaves as he would be to the Sultan of Turkey, were he present. When the Sherif travels he carries more tents with him and has more style, pomp and ceremony in his attendance than the richest pilgrim or Oriental grandee. His Holiness has an audience-chamber tent, with a green flag, indicating his descent from the Prophet, flying from its center-pole. The distinctive colors of his rank are green and gold, and crimson red, the first two representing the religious side of his exalted office, and the second, the princely or secular element in his personality. The crimson red is the state color, the use of which indicates that he has not abdicated the functions of his office, but is in active service. On his travels some of the Sherif's tents serve as dining-rooms, some as drawing-rooms, some as bathrooms; others as sentinel houses, stables, kitchens, and servants' apartments.

When His Holiness goes on a pilgrimage to the Mount of Arafat, for instance, he rides in the procession by himself on a white mule, being clad in the "ihram," or pilgrim habit, consisting of two thin, spotlessly white woolen wrappers, without seam or hem, and a pair of sandals. The instep and heel are left uncovered. As a pilgrim, with sacred habit on, the Sherif must not hunt for fowls or beasts, although he is allowed to fish—a doubtful privilege in a dry land—and he is also permitted to kill injurious creatures, specified as kites, ravens, scorpions, mice and biting dogs. He must keep a constant watch over his words and actions. Not a single abusive or indecent word must he utter, nor must he see a woman's face, save that of his wife, sister, cousin-german, or a sister's or brother's daughter.

Although the Sherif is the highest ecclesiastical dignitary of the Islamic world, yet he never allows his followers and tribesmen to cringe in his august presence. He holds his race too dear to exact an obsequious homage, and he does not consider his position to be threatened because his tribesmen do not prostrate themselves before him. Indeed, his face never wears a frown; his voice is never raised in anger; and yet, for all who come near him the consciousness of his power lies not in themselves, but in the man himself: in a word, it lies in his complete self-forgetfulness and his freedom from all arrogance and pretence. This self-forgetfulness is seen particularly when he is within the sacred area known as the Haram. Even if he were an arrogant person, pompous, vain glorious and haughty, his religion would not allow him to exalt himself above his followers.

Into that sacred locality, everyone has come to worship his Creator, the Supreme Ruler over kingdoms and empires, and so all distinctions of rank are laid aside. The Prophet, wise in his generation beyond all men, was the first to protect the helpless against despotism by ruling the conduct of human affairs through principles of religious equality. But for his laws the lower classes of the East would have been at the mercy of their co-religionists of the higher castes. The spirit of Mohammed's teaching and laws made for unity, fraternity and equality; and the consequence was that in the early days of Mohammedanism his followers were inspired by the noblest aspirations of the mind and heart. The case is otherwise with the majority of Mohammedans of to-day. Of their country and countrymen they take too little thought, each one of them beseeching God to shower His favors on himself alone.

This brief sketch might properly be closed with a few words about the elevated office of the Sherif of Mecca. The word "sherif" is derived from the Arabic word "sharafa," which means "to be eminent in glory, rank and dignity"; "to tower over"; "to be eminent"; "to be distinguished." "Sherif," therefore, signifies "one who is eminent," glorious, dignified, distinguished. In the English language, the words "excellent" and "noble" are its nearest equivalents. In a particular sense, the word was applied to the descendants of Mohammed, through his daughter Fatima, wife of Ali. There are many sherifs in Arabia, but the most distinguished of them all is the Primate of Mecca, the birthplace of the founder of Islam.

HOLY GROUND OF ISLAM

HOLY GROUND OF ISLAM

THE TENT CITY.

The "tent city," so-called, is the encampment of the pilgrims on the plain in the neighborhood of the Hill of Arafat, or the Hill of Mercy. The pilgrims go from Mecca to the Sacred Hill, which is about a day's journey from Mecca, and pitch their tents on the slopes and plains of Arafat. The day following their start from the Holy City a sermon is preached on the mount. No pilgrim is qualified to call himself a "Hajji" unless he is present on that occasion. The preacher sits on a camel, and the pilgrims gather round about him; those who can find no room on the slopes take up their positions on the plain. Not ten pilgrims in a hundred can hear a word, and so the majority while away the time either in praying, weeping, or chatting. Unless they fall asleep, losing consciousness while the sermon is being delivered, they are counted as present and entitled to be known as "hajjis." They must arrive at the Hill of Arafat before noon and must remain until after sunset. If they leave before the appointed time they must pay forfeit either by sacrificing a camel, or else by keeping fast for eighteen consecutive days.

Before reaching the plain of Arafat, the pilgrims must perform their religious ablutions, and, arriving on the hill itself, they must recite the following prayer: "O God, I purpose, in obedience to Thy commands, to abide here until the setting of the sun. I praise Thee, I glorify Thee, O Lord; there is no god but Thee. I have burdened my conscience with wrongdoing, and now acknowledge my sins. O forgive me my trespasses, O Lord, for, verily, Thou art the Best Forgiver." The pilgrims, having declared their own sins, must pray for their friends, relatives, neighbors and slaves. The number of persons thus honored should not be less than forty, and, for this act of grace, the suppliant will be rewarded a hundred thousand fold. At the setting of the sun the pilgrims pray again. In this prayer the formula, "I repent," is repeated thrice. Then they proceed to Mina, through which valley they pass on to the Mount of Arafat. The stoning of the devil takes place there, and the slaying of the sacrifices. This closes the pilgrimage to Arafat. The whole expanse of the northern face of the plain in the vicinity of Arafat is occupied by the aristocratic class of the pilgrims, the most distinguished camping-places being in the northeastern angle, where the Sherif's tents are pitched. All the grandees pitch their tents as near those of the Sherif as possible, as this seems to be the ambition of all pilgrims who have any claim to regard themselves as gentlefolk.

The southern part of the plain is covered with the tents of the poorer classes and by those who have no tents at all. Midway between the tents of the privileged classes and those of the poorer pilgrims are the booths and stalls of the open-air bazars. These are also scattered here and there in every section of the vast encampment. In past years bloody disputes among the pilgrims, in the choice of localities, were not rare occurrences, but there are no such serious troubles now-a-days. The rule of "first come, first served," holds good in every quarter of the plain, within the limits of the broadly defined distinctions of class which make it expedient, if not compulsory, for the paupers and less reputable pilgrims to keep to the south, leaving the northern regions to their brethren of higher rank. In theory, the Moslems are all equal; but socially, they are as exclusive as the Christians, and infinitely more exacting, whenever etiquette and ceremony are concerned.

THE HOLY GROUND OF ISLAM.

The holiest city on earth for every devout Moslem is Mecca, the birthplace of Mohammed, and the holiest locality in that city is the Haram, corresponding to the Haram or Temple Area in Jerusalem. The word "haram" is used to designate the courtyard of every mosque, and means "a sacred place." The Haram of Mecca is an imperfect rhomboid in shape, with opposite sides not quite equal. It extends lengthwise from east to west, while its breadth is from north to south. The northern side is one hundred and seventy-eight yards long, the southern side one hundred and eighty yards, and the eastern side measures one hundred and seventeen yards. The Haram is surrounded by colonnades, surmounted by crescented domes, and there are twenty entrances to its sacred precincts, eight being on the northern side, four on the eastern, seven on the southern, and three on the western. The most sacred of these gates are "Bab-es-Salam," "the Gate of Peace," and "Bab-es-Safa," "the Gate of Purity." The pilgrims must always enter through the former and must pass out through the latter gate. A flight of steps from every gateway leads into the Haram, which is twelve feet below the street level. On the inner walls of these entrances are inscribed the names of four caliphs, "Abou Bekr," "Omar" (Amru), "Othman" (Osman), and "Ali" (Alee). Abou Bekr was the first of Mohammed's successors, or caliphs. He was born in 571 A. D., of the celebrated tribe of Koreish, and was one of the first converts to Islam. Abou Bekr succeeded Mohammed in 632 A. D., and died after a reign of two years and three months. He was an excellent prince, pious, zealous, humble, mild and generous. He was not called Abou Bekr until after the Prophet had married his virgin daughter Ayeshah.

Omar 1, "Amru," in Arabic, was the second Mohammedan caliph. His full name is "Abou-Hafsah-Ibn-ool-Khattab." He succeeded Abou Bekr in 634, and captured Damascus in 635, and Jerusalem in 638. (Damascus is one of the two oldest cities now inhabited, the other and older one being Joppa.) Omar instituted the Mohammedan custom of dating from Mohammed's flight from Mecca to Medina, which dating is known as "Hijra" in Arabic, and as "Anno Hegira" in Latin. Omar's conversion to Islam was in 615, previous to which time he had attempted to kill the Prophet. He was wise, just, zealous, and famed for his tolerance of other religions. It is said that he contributed more to the progress of Islam than did the Prophet himself. Firooz, a Persian slave, assassinated Omar in his capital, Medina, in 644, at the age of sixty-three.

The third of the caliphs was Othman-Ibn-Affan, who succeeded Omar in 644 A. D. Persia, Africa and Cyprus were conquered by him during his reign of twelve years. He was married, successively, to two daughters of the Prophet, and perished by the hand of Mohammed, son of the first caliph, who was instigated to do his foul deed through the intrigues of Ayeshah, widow of the Prophet, and a number of disaffected nobles.

Alee, another of the caliphs, was born in Mecca about 600 A. D. He married Fatimah, a daughter of Mohammed. Upon the death of the Prophet, both Alee and Abou Bekr were rival candidates for the caliphate, which the latter obtained. Their partisans formed the two well known schisms in Islam, the Sunnites and the Shiites. Alee became the caliph of the latter sect. He was assassinated in 660 A. D.

Concerning the caliphate it may be stated that the historians of the Middle Ages designated the Arabian Empire founded by the successors of Mohammed by this name. This empire for two or three centuries exceeded even the Roman Empire in extent. At the beginning of the ninth century it had suffered much from corruption and internal disorganization, and in 970 there were three caliphs, one at Bagdad, one at Cairo, and one at Cordova, Spain. In the eleventh century, the caliphs of Bagdad were still acknowledged as the spiritual chiefs of Islam, but their temporal power scarcely extended beyond the walls of Bagdad. When that city was taken by the Tartars, and the caliphate destroyed (1258 A. D.), the Mohammedan prince appointed, each in his own dominions, a special officer to discharge the spiritual function of the caliph. The name of this officer in Turkey is "mufti," expounder of the religious law, there being one mufti for every town and city, the head caliphate, or the supreme ecclesiastical authority being vested in the Sultan of Turkey. When the Moors were driven out of Spain the Caliphate of Cordova came to an end, and when Egypt was captured by the Turkish army, the Caliphate of Cairo was usurped by the Sultan of Turkey.

There are five hundred and seventy-five pillars in the colonnade that extends around the four sides of the Haram. But the Mohammedans in general have a superstitious prejudice against counting them, and the Meccans declare them to be "innumerable." There are graceful minarets along the northern length, one at each corner of the opposite side, a sixth along the eastern breadth, and a seventh at the end of the cloister attached to the northern side of the Haram.

The architectural features of the mosque are nearly all borrowed from the Greek or Byzantine style. The Turks had easy access to the Greek Christian churches in Asia Minor, before their conquest of Constantinople, and copied most of the architectural lines and peculiarities for their smaller and larger sanctuaries, the former being called "mesjid," or place of worship, the latter "jami" or "meeting-house." Of these borrowed architectural features the most conspicuous is the dome, which is seen in all the jamis and in most of the mesjids. (In English, the word "mosque," a corruption of "mesjid," has been applied to both mesjids and jamis. Few of the mesjids have minarets, but every jami must one have at least. Some have as many as six minarets. The only Mohammedan sanctuary in the world that has seven minarets is in the Holy City of Mecca. It may be mentioned in this connection, that the only architectural contribution from the Turks is the minaret, which means a "lighthouse," and from whose projecting balconies (some minarets have more than one balcony) the muezzin calls the faithful to prayer. The Arabs in general, and the Moors in particular, have made some valuable contributions to architecture, notable among them being the Arabesque or Mooresque style, illustrated in the horseshoe arch and ornamentations characteristic of the Alhambra.

Pigeons strut about the floor of the Haram, or wing their flight above the sacred area. They are, like the pigeons of St. Mark's Square in Venice, Italy, so tame that they will come and perch on the pilgrims' shoulders and feed out of their hands. In color they are of a bluish brown, with deeper spots of the same color on their breasts and backs. They have gray rings around their necks, and their wings are streaked with blue. The Moslems believe that to feed one of these birds is to insure one's self a sumptuous palace in heaven; whereas to kill one of them would be as much of a crime as to kill a human being, and would meet with as severe a punishment hereafter. Near the birds are crowds of women who sell grain to the pilgrims for the Haram pigeons at an exorbitant price, twenty grains of wheat costing one piastre, which is the equivalent of five cents. These pretty birds are supposed to be the guardian angels of the sacred locality, as they are said never to alight on the domes and minarets, but to hover above them instead.

When the pilgrim reaches the "Bab-es-Salam," he prostrates himself twice on the threshold, kissing its sacred dust. Then he rises, and, with closed eyes and outstretched hands, offers the following prayers as he enters, and descends the double flight of steps into the sacred enclosure, bent on reaching the Black Stone: "O God, this city is Thy city and this temple is Thy temple. I am come hither in search of Thy compassion, and in perfect obedience to Thy commands. O Lord, I am submissive to Thy power. I am in passive contentment with Thy chastisements, I seek the fulfillment of all my desires from Thee and from none but Thee. Oblige me with Thy divine compassion, O God, and fling open to me the gates of Paradise." "O Lord, this Haram is Thy Haram and the Haram of Thy apostle. Therefore, since I am here in response to Thy command, preserve my flesh and blood from the fire of Hell and deliver me from Thy punishments on the Day of Judgment." "O God, grant me Thy protection from the temptations of the Devil—may he be accursed!" (A Moslem never repeats the name of the Evil One without this execration.) "I praise Thy prophet, O Lord, and also his disciples; O forgive me my sins and open to me the gates of Thy mercy." "In the name of the great Lord who is alone. There is no god like unto him. O God, I visit this Thy temple, praising Thee, and glorifying Thy name. Nothing can be done save through Thee, for Thine is the power, and Thine the will alone."

On a holy day within the Sacred Mosque at Mecca there is always a motley, multitudinous, multi-lingual and multi-colored crowd, some standing erect, hands folded on their breasts, others kneeling on their prayer-rugs, and still others lying prostrate. They come from all points of the compass: India, China, Egypt, Northern Africa, Arabia, Persia, Turkey, Turkestan, Afghanistan, Beloochistan, Borneo, Madagascar, the Philippine Islands, Zanzibar, Algeria, Tunisia, Tripoli—from every part of the world where Mohammed has followers. Priests and peasants, merchants and princes from far and near are there to render unto Allah their hearts and minds, in accordance with the law of the Arabian Prophet. And from time to time they shout their ardent prayers to the burning sky overhead: "La ilaha ill-Allaha, Mohammed rasoul-uliah." "There is no deity but God, and Mohammed is His messenger (Prophet)." The words ring out like a trumpet call, filling the heart with an emotion never felt before. The combined fervent supplications to the vaulted heavens drown the rambling eloquence of the "imam," or priest, standing behind the "mambar," or pulpit near by. According to an ancient legend, the Haram area is called "holy," because, after the expulsion of Adam from the Garden of Eden, he first worshiped the Creator on the very spot where the Kaaba now stands, a hanging tent being sent from heaven for the purpose. The following is a prayer at the Kaaba, which must be offered in Arabic, no matter what the pilgrim's nationality:

"Labbaik, Allahumna, Labbaik!
Labbaik, la sherika lak, Labbaik!
Labbaik, enal-hamda-va ahmeda lak!
Labbaik, la sherika lak, Labbaik!"

(Translation.)

"Verily, here am I! O Allah, here am I!
Verily, here am I! O Allah, Thou hast no mate!
Verily, here am I! All praise and glory to Thee!
Verily, here am I! Thou hast no mate!"

MOSLEM WORSHIP AND RELIGIOUS TENETS.

The five pillars of Islam are:

First: The profession of the true faith. ("There is no deity but Allah, and Mohammed is His prophet.")

Second: The repetition of the daily prayers.

Third: The payment of the charitable tax.

Fourth: The thirty-day fast during the sacred month of Ramazan, the ninth month of the Mohammedan year.

Fifth: The pilgrimage to Mecca.

The hours of prayer, "salat," are proclaimed five times a day by the muezzins from the minarets of the mosques as follows:

The first prayer, Maghrib, a little after sunset.

The second prayer, Ishah, an hour and a half after sunset.

The third prayer, Subh, at daybreak.

The fourth prayer, Duhr ("Zuhr"), at midday.

The fifth prayer, Asr, three hours after midday.

On Fridays the midday recital of prayer takes place three-quarters of an hour earlier than usual and is followed by a sermon. Friday, however, is not regarded as a day of rest in the Christian sense.

Before saying, or chanting, his prayers, the Moslem must make his ablutions, washing his hands, feet, face, head, ears, and mouth. In crossing the desert, and in case water is scarce, he is allowed to substitute sand for water, Allah taking the will for the deed. Having finished his ablutions, he begins his prayers by holding his hands to the lobes of his ears, then a little below his girdle. Then he interrupts his recitations from the Koran with certain prostrations in a prescribed order. The most usual prayer repeated is known as "el-fathah." It is used in the same way as we repeat the Lord's prayer. Following is the translation of "el-fathah": "In the name of Allah, the merciful and gracious! Praise be to Allah, the Lord of the worlds, the merciful and gracious, the Prince of the Day of Judgment. Thee we serve and to Thee we pray for help; lead us in the right way of those to whom Thou hast shown mercy, upon whom no wrath resteth, and who go not astray. Amen." After praying, the Moslem looks over his right shoulder, then over his left, in greeting to the two recording angels, who write down both his good and evil deeds.

The charitable tax, above-mentioned, is known as "zekiat." It is a religious tax on property to be applied to charity and holy war, "jihad."

Religious fast, "sawm," is observed during the whole month of Ramadan, "Ramazan," from sunrise to sunset.

The Mohammedan creed has only two articles:

(1) There is no deity but Allah.
(2) Mohammed is His prophet.

VERSE OF THE THRONE.

The famous Verse of the Throne, written in ancient Cufic, as one finds it suspended in mosques and private dwellings, to bring blessings upon the reader, is supposed to be equal to one-third of the Koran in value. It reads as follows:

"God! There is no God but He; the living, the Eternal.
Slumber doth not overtake Him, neither sleep.
To Him belongeth whatsoever is in heaven and on the earth.
Who shall intercede with him except by His permission?
He knows what is between their hands and behind them;
And they cannot encompass aught of His knowledge except as He please.
His throne is as wide as the heavens and the earth.
The preservation of both is no weariness unto Him.
He is the High, the Mighty."

Honor the guest, though he be an infidel.

Oh, ye brothers of misfortune! Be not with grief oppressed. Many are the secret mercies which with the All-Bounteous rest.

Keep to truth, though it scorch thee with the fire of threatening, and seek to please God.

The wise man understands the fool, for he was once a fool himself, but the fool does not understand the wise man, because he was never wise.

A hint sufficeth for the wise, but a thousand speeches profit not the heedless.

Green branches thou may'st render straight; the attempt to straighten dry wood comes too late.

Right is most worthy to be followed, and truth is most fitting to be listened to.

Mercy is far the best of jewels that grace the wise, and sweetest fruit culled by man is ready forgiveness.

Fortune and wealth are not to merit given,
None can obtain them but by aid from heaven;
In this world oft a marvel meets our eyes,
The undiscerning honored, scorned the wise;
The alchemist expires with grief, and vain
And fools a treasure 'neath a shed obtain.

THE GREAT COMFORTER

The nargileh, also written "narghileh," is an apparatus used by Arabs, Persians, Turks and Orientals in general, for smoking strong tobacco, known as "tenbeky." It has a long, flexible, snakelike tube, and the smoke is drawn through water by means of a pipelike contrivance of brass. The name is derived from a Persian word meaning cocoanut, as in place of the glass bottle seen in the illustration a cocoanut was originally used. The hookah is a simpler form of the nargileh, and is extensively used by Arabs and Hindoos. It is frequently made of a cocoanut shell. In many American coffee-houses, Syrians, Armenians and Greeks may be seen smoking the nargileh, or "hubble-bubble," as it is popularly called in English.

In Turkey, the nargileh is smoked both by men and women, with this difference, that while men smoke it anywhere they please, women do so only in the privacy of their homes or among their relatives and friends.

THE TEACHABLE CAMEL

A man who had had his life insured for twenty years in a mutual benefit company which promised all sorts of things, at the end of the time received less than he would if he had invested his money elsewhere, and complained of such treatment. A wise Arab, who was sitting near, said it reminded him of a camel belonging to a friend of his. It was a most intelligent brute, and the owner was convinced that if he found a good teacher it could be made to talk. Presently another Arab, a hajji, appeared, who said he was of the same opinion, and could teach the camel, but it would take a long time, probably thirty years. The owner was delighted, and agreed to pay the hajji a fixed sum per annum, and a big bonus when the animal talked, the teacher promising to pay a heavy fine if it did not. A friend afterward went to the hajji, and said: "What on earth induced you to make that agreement? You know that you can never teach that camel to talk." "Oh," answered the hajji, "I know that, but during the thirty years, either I shall die, or the owner, or the camel will. Anyhow, I am all right, as I have my fixed income."

THE BAND OF ALEPPO TEMPLE
A. A. O., N. M. S.

The Band of Aleppo Temple had its origin in a quartette of brass instruments, aided by a cabinet organ. As the Temple increased in numbers, necessitating larger halls, the requirements became greater, and this combination merged into an orchestra of some twelve or fifteen members, which was later superseded by the body of musicians, almost indispensable in the work of Aleppo Under the excellent leadership of Noble Thomas M. Carter, who was one of the original quartette, the Band has grown to be a well trained and honored body of musicians, almost indispensable in the work of Aleppo Temple. The personnel of the Band includes many well known artists, who manifest great interest in the work of Aleppo, as is shown by their faithful and earnest service in the department of harmony. Among them are Mace Gay, leader of Martland's Band of Brockton; Samuel S. Lurvey, leader of the Lynn Cadet Band; John M. Flockton, for many years leader of the Waltham Watch Factory Band; Robert Bonney, M. D., a distinguished Boston physician; Charles H. Bugbee, about to become a Texas rancher; Samuel Harris of Sousa's Band; Walter H. Lewis, a well known composer of light opera; Frederick S. Foss, leader of the Lawrence Band; Fred W. Clement, leader of the Worcester Band; Harry C. Daggett, leader of Daggett's Orchestra; Eben H. Bailey, organist and composer of wide reputation, together with other prominent members of the musical fraternity, all of whom unite cheerfully in seeing who best can work and best agree, in consequence of which, the Band can always be counted on for good service, and Noble Carter may feel happy in the support which is accorded him by this excellent body of skilled musicians.

The following named Nobles have been included in the Band for the last few years; and while, because of business reasons, all are not present at every meeting, the greater portion will be found in attendance and will respond promptly to the tap of the conductor's baton: Flutes, Ira H. Odell, David C. Farr; E-flat Clarinets, Joseph B. Proctor, Robert Bonney, M. D.; B-flat Clarinets, Charles H. Bugbee, Samuel Harris, Angelo Truda, Ralph Hazel, W. D. Herrick, Henry C. Stoehr, Thomas S. Bonney; Bassoon, Walter H. Lewis; Cornets, Mace Gay, Samuel S. Lurvey, John M. Flockton, George F. Brigden, Frederick S. Foss, Linus H. Allendorff, George M. Weston, Albert Horton, Arnold L. Chick, Frederick W. Clement; Horns, Harry C. Daggett, Oscar E. Wasgatt, D. D. S., Eben H. Bailey; Trombones, Frank A. Newman, D. D. S., Joseph A. Jackson, Frederick A. Howard, E. W. Woodhead; Baritones, John F. Park, Clement G. Miller, F. W. Pope; Basses, Richard N. Davis, Eben F. Richardson, Ely H. Aitken, W. B. Cook; Percussion, Frank E. Dodge, Harry L. Howard, John R. Bartlett. Five of the original number, including Noble Howard M. Dow, the faithful organist, have passed from our sight.

"As the strings must have their tuning,
So must life try for accord,
Till the grand finale echoes
From the Source of All, Our God."

Their work has been taken up by other good men and true; and there does not exist a more faithful and loyal corps of musicians than the Band of Aleppo Temple.

For the past twenty years, Noble Wyman has been a market gardener in that town. He was born there, on April 12, 1875, and was educated in the local schools. He married Miss Mabel E. Kimball, who passed away in February, 1913, leaving a son, Franklin S., born October 3, 1905. Noble Wyman's residence is in Arlington, at No. 121 Lake Street.

GEORGE WILLIAM HUNT.

Noble Hunt takes an active interest in the Masonic bodies of his residence town of Concord, and his wife is identified with him in promoting the work of Hawthorne Chapter No. 48, of the Order of the Eastern Star of Concord, in which she has served as Warden and Chaplain. In Masonry, Noble Hunt is affiliated with Corinthian Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Walden Chapter, R. A. M., both of Concord, and with Trinity Commandery No. 32, K. T. of Hudson. He made the pilgrimage to the Shrine, as a novice of the class of November, 1911, in Aleppo Temple, wherein he was then enrolled as No. 9186. For the past thirty years, Noble Hunt has represented the Boston and Maine Railroad as their agent in Concord. He is vice president and treasurer of the Railroad Agents Association of New England, and a member of the Boston and Maine Agents Association, and of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers. For six years, he has served as a Selectman of Concord. Noble Hunt was born in Chelmsford, on June 26, 1858, and was educated in the schools of Concord. There, also, on June 29, 1878, his marriage to Miss Alice R. Watts, was solemnized. They have nine children: Frederick William, Mrs. Bessie Alice Wilson, Anna Maud, Herbert, Grace Lillian, John Parkhurst, Mary Louise, Helen Celia, and Mrs. Edna Willard of Concord. Noble Hunt's home is at 64 Thoreau Street, Concord.

CLEAVELAND ANGIER CHANDLER.

Noble Chandler was born in the city of Chicago, on September 28, 1867. Coming East, he obtained his education in the Boston Schools, and at St. Paul's of Concord, N. H. After completing his education, he became interested in newspaper work, and served in the Editorial Departments of the Boston Advertiser, Herald, and Globe. On the last-named paper, he rose to the position of assistant to the managing editor. For more than fourteen years, he has been engaged in the advertising business in Boston, and has his office at 35 Congress Street. On October 12, 1897, he married Miss Louise Prescott Allen of East Bridgewater. They have four children, Elizabeth Allen, Whitman Mitchell, Louise Cushing, and Parker Cleaveland. Noble Chandler resides in East Bridgewater, Masonically, he is affiliated with Eleusis Lodge, A. F. & A. M., St. Andrew's Chapter, R. A. M., Boston Council, R. & S. M., and St. Bernard Commandery No. 12, K. T., all located in Boston. Thus prepared for admission to the Nobility of the Ancient Arabic Order, he was ennobled in Aleppo Temple as a member of the class of August 23, 1913, when he was enrolled as No. 10079. Noble Chandler is also a member of Jamaica Plain Council No. 835, of the Royal Arcanum. Besides his Masonic affiliations, he is a prominent member of local organizations in his home town, East Bridgewater, and is a member of the leading clubs and associations of Boston. Politically, he is a Progressive, and in 1913 and 1914, served as a Representative from the Eighth Plymouth District to the Massachusetts General Court.

ALLEN PHILIP HILL.

Inducted into the mysteries of Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., on June 4, 1914, and on that memorable date received into the Nobility, with enrollment No. 10272, Noble Hill has Masonic connections with Soley Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Somerville Chapter, R. A. M., both of Somerville, and with De Molay Commandery No. 7, K. T. of Boston. Aside from Masonic and Shrine affiliations, he has other fraternal ties, in Somerville Lodge No. 917, of the B. P. O. E.; Omar Grotto No. 38, of M. O. V. P. E. R., and in the Boston City Club. Noble Hill was born in Somerville, on December 16, 1881, and was educated in its public schools. Upon his graduation, in 1900, he at once entered the employ of Hill & Hill, of 90 Federal Street, Boston, manufacturers of harness and leather goods, and dealers in automobile supplies, continuing in same until July, 1911, when he succeeded to the management of that concern. Noble Hill's residence is at No. 155 Sycamore Street, Somerville.

MARCUS C. PETTINGELL.

Noble Pettingell is a prominent citizen of Danvers, and one of the leading Democrats, not only of Essex County but of the State. For the past forty-six years, he has been an expressman between Danvers and Boston, and with his partner, A. H. Dwelly, handles more coal and wood than any other similar concern. In addition to their express business, they also do forwarding, moving and jobbing in general. Noble Pettingell's prominence in the express business is perhaps best shown by the fact that he not only has been president of the Expressman's League of New England but has many times been a delegate from the League before Legislative Committees at the National Capital. He has always been a consistent Democrat, and his interest in political affairs has been recognized in so far that for many years he was Chairman of the Democratic Town Committee, while also representing his district on the Democratic State Committee. Noble Pettingell was born in Exfrid, Ont., on March 12, 1854, where his father was engaged in railroad building. He traces his descent from early colonial stock; on one side Richard Ingersoll of Salem, 1629, on the other, Richard Pettingell of Salem, 1636. When speaking of his ancestry, a common expression of his is, "I came from the two Dicks." Richard Pettingell went to Newbury in 1646, taking the farm of John Spencer, who, at that time, was in controversy with Gov. Endicott regarding the British flag, and later returned to England. From this farm, all the numerous Pettingells of the country date their descent. Noble Pettingell was educated in the schools of Newburyport, and on December 15, 1880, he married Miss Ella E. Jewett of Georgetown. He has two daughters, Mrs. Mary R. Holden of Northampton, and Miss Ruth H., who resides with her father. Noble Pettingell has taken full degrees in the York Rite of Masonry, having affiliations with Amity Lodge, A. F. & A. M., in which he has been a Trustee for seventeen years; Holton Chapter, R. A. M., Salem Council, R. & S. M., and St. George Commandery No. 44, K. T., in which he had the rank of Standard Bearer for several years. Through his Masonic connections, he attained the Nobility of Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., in 1898, and was enrolled in that illustrious body as No. 3544. Aside from Masonry and the Shrine, Noble Pettingell has fraternal affiliations with Quascacunquen Lodge No. 39, I. O. O. F. of Newburyport; the United Workmen of Danvers, and with Council No. 249, of the Royal Arcanum. In clubdom, he is prominent in the Essex County Episcopal Club, of which he has been President, and he is now the President of the Hawthorne Club of Danvers. Noble Pettingell's business address is No. 11 Maple Street, Danvers, and his residence is at No. 41 Poplar Street, in the same town.

NICHOLAS WM. PHILLIPS.

Noble Phillips has had an extremely picturesque and romantic life. Born in St. Petersburg, Russia, on December 1, 1859, and educated in that city and in England, he has been, for thirty-two years, in the United States Navy, and is now mate of the battleship North Carolina. He is a veteran of the Spanish War, and during the Battle of Manila was at the guns of the flagship Olympia, under the eyes of Admiral Dewey, U. S. N. He thus witnessed the surrender of Admiral Mountjoy and the Spanish fleet to Admiral Dewey. Out of his experiences at Manila Bay and his knowledge of the details of the War in the Philippines, he prepared a lecture which has been given many times and in many places. Noble Phillips served in the Far East during the Chinese and Japanese Wars, and was at the scene of the rebellion in Panama in 1885. His travels have been extensive, taking him around the world six times, and he has acquired facility in the use of as many languages. Among the places where his lecture has been delivered are the Brookline Public Library, Jamaica Plain Institute, Eliot Lodge of Jamaica Plain, and St. John's Church. The Masonic membership of Noble Phillips is with the following bodies: Henry Price Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Signet Chapter, R. A. M., and Cœur de Lion Commandery No. 34, K. T., all of Charlestown; also with St. Bernard Commandery of Boston. His ennoblement in Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., took place with the class of March 25, 1910, when there was awarded to him the certificate of enrollment numbered 8699. He is also a member of the United Spanish War Veterans' Association of Winthrop; Lodge No. 917, B. P. O. E., of Somerville, and was formerly a member of the Imperial Order of Red Men. In Washington, D. C., on April 22, 1905, Noble Phillips married Miss Elizabeth E. Cummings, of Sunny Brae, Pictou County, Nova Scotia. His residence is at No. 96 St. Botolph Street, Boston.

CHARLES CASPER HENRY.

Noble Henry entered the Unseen Temple on April 11, 1915. Few men have rendered greater service than he in Masonic circles. He took his degrees in Masonry in 1877; served as Secretary of Meridian Lodge for over thirty years, and was honored with election to the rank of Worshipful Master in which capacity he served for two years. He was also District Deputy Grand Master of the Twenty-First Masonic District; in Parker Chapter Most Eminent High Priest in 1891; Deputy Grand High Priest in the Ninth Capitular District; Past Grand Scribe and Permanent Member of the Grand Royal Arch Chapter; Eminent Commander in Natick Commandery, K. T., and a Permanent Member of the Grand Commandery of Massachusetts and Rhode Island. He was likewise affiliated with the Scottish Rite bodies of Boston, his Consistorial degrees having been taken in Massachusetts Consistory. For two years, from 1906 to 1908, the late lamented Illustrious Noble Henry was Potentate of Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., and during his incumbency the organization enjoyed great prosperity. His ennoblement in that exalted body took place on May 17, 1888 with enrollment No. 1195. In all the fraternal bodies with which he was identified he was ever active. Noble Henry was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., on November 1, 1852, and was educated in the public schools of Brooklyn, and at the Columbia Institute of Washington, D. C. At the age of eighteen he removed to Natick, where for many years he was engaged in the meat and provision business. In 1881, he entered the employ of the Boston and Albany Railroad as baggage-master, at Natick, and three years later was appointed station agent at Wellesley Hills, a position which he retained until his appointment a few years ago as Probation Officer of the Superior Court for Plymouth and Norfolk Counties, from which office he retired but a few months prior to his demise. He held the position of Auditor of the Town of Wellesley for several years. Noble Henry was married in 1872 to Hattie Louisa Hall, who passed away six months later. His second wife was Miss Adeline S. Babcock, who entered the Great Beyond in 1900, and by whom he had two children, Dr. Edward E. Henry of Kingston, N. Y., and Grace G. Henry of Montclair, N. J. Noble Henry's later marriage was to Miss Carrie W. Batchelder of Wellesley Hills, who survives him, and resides at their Wellesley Hills home.

BERTRAM THOMAS MARTIN.

Noble Martin, who is treasurer of the T. Martin and Brother Manufacturing Company, located on Webster Avenue, Chelsea, established his present business connection more than twenty years ago. He was born in Chelsea, on December 20, 1872, and as a youth, pursued his studies there. He is a member of the Boston Athletic Association, the Boston City Club, the Boston Yacht Club, the Review Club of Chelsea, the Winchester Boat Club, the Calumet Club of Winchester, and of the Arkwright Club of New York City. F. of Arlington; and a member of Ramona Lodge of Rebekahs of West Somerville; the Boston City Club; the Arlington Boat Club; Boston Chamber of Commerce; New England Hardware Association, and of the Arlington Business Men's Club. For over thirty years, Noble Jones has been a manufacturer of steel balls for all sorts of ball-bearing machines, with business location in Arlington Heights, and which is the oldest concern engaged in that industry in the United States. He was born in Bedford, Que., on July 1, 1865, and was educated in his native town. In Somerville, on June 23, 1886, Noble Jones was married to Miss Etta Shaw of Somerville. They have a daughter, Mildred E., born January 9, 1892, and they reside at No. 3 Florence Avenue, Arlington Heights. Noble Jones is a direct descendant of Richard Warren who came over in the Mayflower. His grandfather, Jonas Galusha Jones, went as a "middy" on the United States expedition led by Decatur to rid the Mediterranean of pirates. Noble Jones is also a direct descendant of Sir Colin MacDonald, who was a younger brother of the MacDonald "Lord of the Isles." Noble Jones' family has the very sword which Sir Colin used when leading the Highlanders over the walls of Quebec under the command of General Wolfe. He is, too, a lineal descendant of the Rev. Samuel Parris of witchcraft fame, in whose family the witchcraft affair started over a social bowl of toddy participated in by Rev. Cotton Mather of Boston, Rev. Samuel Parris of Salem, and several ship captains who were engaged in the West Indian trade. It was then, as now, a difficult matter to get household help, and one of these ship captains kindly volunteered to bring on his next trip to America a couple of negro wenches. This he did, and the young negro women whom he brought took with them their superstitious beliefs in Voodooism from darkest Africa. Thus were the two young daughters of the Parris family inoculated with the superstitions, which they in turn circulated among the people of Salem, and from which grew and spread like wild fire the belief in witches—Salem Witchcraft.

HARRISON O. THOMAS.

A well known citizen of Brockton, Noble Thomas, takes a justifiable pride in his war record. Born in Wareham, on June 28, 1840, and educated in the schools of that place, he enlisted in the New Bedford City Guards, Company L, Third Regiment, M. V. M., on April 16, 1861, in response to the first call of President Lincoln. Upon the expiration of his three months' service with "The Minute Men of 1861," he re-enlisted in Company D, Eighteenth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers, for three years. Noble Thomas was in the Peninsular and Chickahominy Campaigns, as well as in many other battles; and at Fredericksburg he was wounded, losing the use of his right arm. Permanently disabled for military service, he returned to the front, marched and camped with his old comrades, serving in the field hospitals, in the time of battle, to the end of the war. Thus he earned the name by which he is commonly called, "Citizen Thomas." He served without pay, or desire for compensation, until the close of the war. He is the first member who was initiated into the Fletcher Webster Post No. 13, G. A. R. of Brockton, on July 16, 1867; is a member of the Association of "Minute Men of 1861," and Past President of the Eighteenth Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteers' Association. His Masonic Degrees were conferred in Paul Revere Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Satucket Chapter, R. A. M., Brockton Council, R. & S. M., and Bay State Commandery No. 38, K. T. He was ennobled in Aleppo Temple, on November 19, 1891, and was therein enrolled as No. 2638. Noble Thomas is also a member of Electric Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Banner Lodge, N. E. O. P., and of the American Benefit Society, all of Brockton. In 1890 and 1891, he served as Representative in the State Legislature. After having been, for twenty-five years, a merchant, he became, twenty years ago, custodian for the Plymouth County Trust Company, at 183 Main Street, Brockton. His marriage to Miss Harriet G. Morton took place in East Rochester in 1868. His residence is at 35 Clinton Avenue, Brockton.

Olivet Chapter of Rose Croix, and Massachusetts Consistory, 32°, S.·.P.·.R.·.S.·. He was received in Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., on November 10, 1914, with enrollment No. 10406. Noble de Proppèr is also President of the Magyars of Massachusetts, and a member of the Boston City Club. He was born in Tolcsva, Hungary, March 20, 1876, and was educated in private schools in Hungary, Austria, Belgium, and England. He speaks all the cosmopolitan languages and is well versed in Hebrew and Latin. For the past eighteen years, he has been an attorney-at-law and court reporter. His business address is Barristers Hall, Boston, and he resides at No. 7 Myrtle Street, in that city. Noble de Proppèr has been more or less of a writer, and as such he succeeded in breaking up the "justice-shop system" of Chicago in 1907, which was long known as a judicial means of corruption; afterwards, the "city court" system was established, as he advocated. In 1908 a little book of his sketches, entitled "Tears and Smiles," was published. On July 12, 1912, while ill, at Tybe Island, Georgia, seeing two people drowning in the offing, Noble de Proppèr jumped in, in spite of the wind and gale, and rescued Mrs. Byron Emmerling of Nashville, Tennessee, and Samuel B. Eddison of Atlanta, Georgia, notwithstanding the fact that he had never swum before. The Carnegie hero-fund people made an investigation of the matter with the view of rewarding him. Noble de Proppèr wrote them that he did not want their money, and he would rather have the written acknowledgments sent them by the eye-witnesses than their medal. These, however, he never received. On March 20, 1915, his thirty-ninth birthday, the Magyars of Massachusetts awarded Noble de Proppèr a gold medal for his charities to many Hungarians, and for being the first who succeeded in bringing them into a general body, covering Massachusetts. He is now engaged in finishing the "Palimpsest," dealing with many bits of corruption committed by certain classes of judges, attorneys and politicians in America. His father's people call themselves direct descendants of the priestly line of Aaron—brother of Moses. Their "crest" is a much-prized heritage of that branch of the family. Noble de Proppèr's people have intermarried among many nationalities, and at the present time he has more than a hundred relatives in the different opposing armies.

Having obtained Masonic membership in Mystic Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Pittsfield, Pittsfield Chapter, R. A. M., Haverhill Council, R. & S. M., and Berkshire Commandery, No. 22, K. T., of Pittsfield, Noble Jordan was admitted to the Nobility of the Mystic Shrine in Aleppo Temple, in February, 1915, with enrollment No. 10507. He is also affiliated with the Elks. Noble Jordan was born in Auburn, Maine, on February 14, 1879, and was graduated from the public schools of that city in 1894. He is unmarried. For about seven years, he has been proprietor of the People's House Furnishing Company, at Nos. 6-14 Merrimack Street, Haverhill.

ELWIN CLINTON WHEELER.

A prominent Mason and business man of Hubbardston, Noble Wheeler has served as District Grand Master of the Old Twelfth Masonic District, and he has the rank of Past Master in Hope Lodge, A. F. & A. M. of Gardner. His Masonic career has also given him affiliations with Gardner Chapter, R. A. M., Hiram Council, R. & S. M., of Worcester, Ivanhoe Commandery, No. 42, of Gardner; and Worcester Lodge of Perfection, Goddard Council of Princes of Jerusalem, Lawrence Chapter of Rose Croix, and Massachusetts Consistory, 32°, S.·.P.·.R.·.S.·. Among the other bodies with which he is connected are the following: Alethea Grotto, M. O. V. P. E. R. of Worcester, Hubbardston Lodge No. 142, A. O. U. W., the Hubbardston Grange, and of the Hubbardston Nest of Owls, of which he is an Honorary Member. The ennoblement date of Noble Wheeler in Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., is June 5, 1912, and his enrollment number in that body of Shriners is 9673. He has been a dealer in groceries and provisions for almost forty years, as a member of the firm of Wheeler Brothers. He was born in Barre, on July 28, 1851, and was educated in the public schools of Petersham. Noble Wheeler was married on March 8, 1893, in West Acton, to Miss Carrie H. Grimes, and has a daughter, Dorothy. His residence is in Hubbardston.

WILLIAM HERVEY WHEELER

As one of the band of pilgrims of the caravan which reached the Aleppo Temple Oasis on June 5, 1912, praying for admission to its Tabernacle and coveted membership, Noble Wheeler was one of those fortunates whose earnest prayer was granted, and on whom the Order was exemplified in full form and he was given the number 9672. He obtained his Masonic qualifications for his Shrine ennoblement in Hope Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Gardner Chapter, R. A. M., and Ivanhoe Commandery No. 46 K. T., all of Gardner. Noble Wheeler is also a member of Hubbardston Lodge, No. 142, A. O. U. W.; of Hubbardston Grange, No. 126; of the Patrons of Husbandry; of Hubbardston Nest of Owls, No. 1116, and of Aletheia Grotto, M. O. V. P. E. R., of Worcester. He is a Republican in politics, and has served as Town Clerk and Treasurer of his home town from 1895 to the present time; as Library Trustee from 1888; as School Commissioner in 1880; as Assessor in 1884-85; as Overseer of the Poor in 1886-87-88; as Selectman in 1886-87-88-89-90; as Representative to the Massachusetts General Court in 1894-1911, and as Senator in 1912-1913. Noble Wheeler has been in the grocery business in Habbardston for thirty-nine years, under the firm name of Wheeler Brothers. He was born in Lexington, on September 4, 1848, and attended school in Petersham. In the latter place, on October 4, 1874, he was married to Miss Eliza S. Morrison. They have three daughters, Katherine A., Bessie and Mildred; also a son, Silas M., who, like his worthy sire, is an Aleppo Temple Noble. Noble Wheeler has his residence in Hubbardston.

CALEB SAUNDERS.

Illustrious Noble Saunders was received into Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., on September 15, 1887, being given the enrollment number 2330. In 1894 and 1895 he held the high office of Illustrious Potentate in that exalted body. His Masonic affiliations are with Phœnician Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Mt. Sinai Chapter, R. A. M., and Bethany Commandery No. 17, K. T., all of Lawrence; and with Lowell Lodge of Perfection, Lowell Council of Princes of Jerusalem, Mt. Calvary Chapter of Rose Croix, and Massachusetts Consistory, 32°, S.·.P.·.R.·.S.·. He is also a member of the Home Club of Lawrence. For about half a century Illustrious Noble Saunders has been engaged in the practice of law. He was born in North Andover, on September 4, 1838, and attended the Lawrence High School and Bowdoin College, graduating in 1859. In Lawrence, he married Caroline C. Fairfield, who passed away, leaving a daughter, Annie, and a son, George F. His second wife, whom he married in Boston, has also entered the Great Beyond. Illustrious Noble Saunders was Mayor of Lawrence in 1877, and served for several years upon the Common Council and Board of Aldermen of that city, and was a member of the Lawrence School Board for about twenty years. His home is at No. 219 South Broadway, Lawrence.

DAVID COBB.

Noble Cobb obtained the Symbolic Degrees in Masonry in Aberdour Lodge, A. F. & A. M. of Boston; then, pursuing his Masonic career in the Scottish Rite bodies, he became affiliated with Boston Lafayette Lodge of Perfection, Giles Fonda Yates Council of Princes of Jerusalem, Mt. Olivet Chapter of Rose Croix, and Massachusetts Consistory, 32°, S.·.P.·.R.·.S.·. Thus qualified for Shrine ennoblement, he was exalted to the Nobility of the Mystic Shrine, in Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., on May 29, 1911, and was enrolled in that distinguished body as No. 9060. Noble Cobb is a Past Grand in King Solomon Lodge No. 236, I. O. O. F. of Boston, and is a member of the New England Dry Goods Association. He was born in Russian Poland, on August 16, 1863, and was educated in the schools of his native country. In Russian Poland, also, he was married to Miss Ida Weinstein, and they have four children: Charles Edward, Mary, Sadie, and Rose Hildegarde. For fifteen years, he has been in business at No. 13 Otis Street, Boston, where he is sole proprietor of the Continental Waist Company. Noble Cobb's residence is at No. 16 Middleton Street, Dorchester.

HERBERT WARREN BONNEY.

Having acquired the preparatory Masonic Degrees in Orient Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Hebron Chapter, R. A. M., and Cyprus Commandery No. 39, K. T. of Hyde Park, Noble Bonney was received into the Nobility of the Ancient Arabic Order, in Aleppo Temple, as a novice of the class of March 25, 1910, and is registered therein as No. 8653. He is a member, also, with the rank of Past Grand, of Samuel Dexter Lodge No. 232, I. O. O. F. of Dedham, and of Bethany Commandery No. 189, of the Knights of Malta of Hyde Park. Noble Bonney was born in Pembroke, on May 16, 1861, and attended school in Dedham. For twenty-five years, he has been superintendent of the foundry and machine shops of J. E. Plimpton and Company of Norwood. In 1914, he was elected Selectman of the town of Westwood. On December 13, 1889, at West Dedham, Noble Bonney was married to Miss Emma B. Patzold. They have a daughter, Gertrude A., and reside at Westwood.

WILLIAM B. WILBER.

Born in Little Compton, R. I., on August 10, 1828, and educated in a private school there and at Richmond Academy, Noble Wilber is one of the oldest members of Aleppo Temple. His marriage to Miss Hannah B. Wilber of Little Compton, R. I., was solemnized in Boston, on January 6, 1852; they had five children, two of whom, Fanny B. and William C., have passed away. The others are: Ella Louise, George W., and Florence B. Noble Wilber retired from the merchant tailor business in 1878, and now resides at the Hotel Eaton, South Boston. In 1864, he was raised in St. Paul's Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of which he is the oldest living member. In 1865, he was made a Charter Member of Adelphi Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of which he is a Life Member, as well as an Honorary Member, having once served as its Senior Deacon. Noble Wilber is also a Life Member of St. Matthew's Chapter, R. A. M., and the only living member of those who helped to organize St. Omer Commandery No. 21, K. T. of South Boston, now Dorchester. For nine years, he held the rank of Sword Bearer in his Commandery. His ennoblement in Aleppo Temple, A. A. O., N. M. S., took place on the day it was organized, and has enrollment number at that time was in two figures, but since the alphabetical arrangement of names, his number is 2751. Noble Wilber became a member of the Sir Knights of Constantine and Alabama on May 29, 1870, and while the Eastern Massachusetts Masonic Relief Association existed he was one of its members. It is interesting to note that Noble Wilber is President of the New England Association of California Pioneers of '49, that originally numbered 156, and of which membership there are only six known to be living. He was one of those who went around Cape Horn in the Bark Mallory, in 183 days. Only two members attended the last meeting of this society, held at its headquarters in the Revere House.

SAMUEL DAVID BASCH.

The Order of Nobility of the Mystic Shrine was exemplified on Noble Basch, in Aleppo Temple, on June 5, 1912, and on that eventful day, he was enrolled therein as No. 9545. He received his preparatory Masonic Degrees essential for Shrine ennoblement in Germania Lodge, A. F. & A. M., in which he was made a Master Mason, and continuing his career in the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Masonry, he secured affiliations in Boston Lafayette Lodge of Perfection, Giles Fonda Yates Council of Princes of Jerusalem, Mt. Olivet Chapter of Rose Croix, and Massachusetts Consistory, 32°, S.·.P.·.R.·.S.·. Aside from his Masonic and Shrine connections, he is a member of the Order of United Workmen. Noble Basch was born in Boston, on September 10, 1878, and obtained his education in the Dwight Grammar School and the English High Schcool of that city. He was married in Boston, to Miss Pearl Lena Finklestone, and they have a son, Bernard J., born June 16, 1904. Noble Basch is a manufacturer of cloth caps, with business location at No. 28 Chauncy Street, Boston, and his residence is in Beachmont.

CLARENCE H. KNOWLTON.

Ranked as Marshal of Aleppo Temple, Noble Knowlton was, for three years, from 1908 to 1911, Captain of the Arab Patrol, and did much to bring it to its present high state of efficiency. It goes without saying that he is one of the most popular members of Aleppo Temple, his membership in which dates from May 3, 1898. He was first made a Mason in Baalbec Lodge; was exalted in St. Paul's Royal Arch Chapter; was made a Royal and Select Master in Boston Council, and was knighted in William Parkman Commandery No. 28, Knights Templar. Noble Knowlton has been a member of the Odd Fellows since 1880; is a member of Marathon Lodge No. 52, K. P. of Dorchester; is affiliated with Eastern Star Lodge, and a Charter Member of Ridgely Encampment, both of East Boston. He has been Drum Major of the 5th Massachusetts Infantry since 1901. Noble Knowlton was born in East Boston, on March 21, 1859, the son of Joseph S. and Mary Morgan Knowlton. After graduating from the Chapman Grammar School in 1875, and spending one year in the English High School, he was, for eleven years, shipper for Noyes, French and Ficket, and from 1889 to 1898, he was connected with the Police Department. Since 1889, he has been a constable and auctioneer. His office is at 10 Tremont Street, Boston, and his residence is at No. 446 Massachusetts Avenue.

ALBION FRANKLIN WELCH, 33°.

A FEW ARABIC WORDS USED IN ENGLISH LITERATURE

"Hajji," pronounced "ha-jee," is a title given to a Mohammedan who has performed the pilgrimage to Mecca and Mount Arafat. He is not entitled to be called a "hajji" until he has gone round the Kaaba seven times, kissing it each time. It is also indispensable that he should have visited Mount Arafat, six hours distant, on which Abraham is believed by the Mohammedans to have offered his son, Isaac. A Mohammedan, in case he cannot make the pilgrimage, can send another Mohammedan in his place, if he pays the other's traveling expenses. Thus, the virtue accruing from his substitute's pilgrimage is accredited to him as well as to the actual pilgrim. It is known as "pilgrimage by proxy."

The title of "hajji" is also applied to Mohammedan women making the pilgrimage. All Christians, of whatsoever nationality, living in Turkey and making a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, are also given the title "hajji" by their fellow-Christians, but not by the Mohammedans.

The title is derived from the word "hajj," pronounced "hodge," which means pilgrimage, "hajji" meaning "a pilgrim." Transliterated in the French language, it is "hadji," in German, "hadschi," and in English, "hajji." As a rule, the Arab pilgrim is known as "el hajji," which in Egypt is spelled "el-hagg," and pronounced "el-hogg." The Egyptian Arabs always pronounce the regular Arabic "j" like the English "g" in "go." "El" is the definite article in Arabic.

The words "Mohammedan," "Muslim," and "Moslem" are synonymous in meaning, a "follower of Mohammed." Mohammedan is the anglicized form of the original "Moohammedee," and Moslem is a corruption of the original "Muslim," which means "one who is resigned" to his fate. (Allah's providence being understood).

It must be added in this connection that the Arabic language has no "o" sound, as we have it in "note." Consequently, and strictly speaking, Omar and Mohammed are misspelled and mispronounced words, and are to be tolerated only as the anglicized forms of "Amr" and "Moohammed," which are the absolutely correct English transliterations of those names. The Anglo-Indian transliteration of Mohammed is "Muhammed," which sounds nearly the same as "Moohammed." In Arabic, "a" is pronounced as in "far," "e" as in "met" and "i" as in "sit."

"Effendi" corresponds to "Mister," and "Signor," and is applied to all Turkish subjects above the rank of common day-laborers, Mohammedan and non-Mohammedan alike. All the members of the literati and nobility, and even of royalty, bear it. Unlike the European titles, it is used after the proper name, and, if the bearer is also entitled to be known as "Bey" or "Pasha," "Effendi" follows these titles, although they are frequently used without the addition of "Effendi." Ordinarily, even the Sultan of Turkey is spoken of, or known as "Effendimiz," which means "Our Effendi." Among the Turkish-speaking Armenians, "Effendimiz" also means "Our Lord" (Jesus Christ). The Egyptians call their ruler or Sultan (until recently Khedive), "Effendina," which is the Arabic for "Effendimiz."

"Sultan," literally, "ruler," means "monarch," "sovereign," "king."

"Padishah," a title of the Sultan of Turkey and of the Shah of Persia, meaning "sovereign."

"Emir," or "Ameer," literally "commander," the title of the chief ecclesiastical dignitary of Mecca, also that of some secular rulers, like the Emir of Afghanistan.

"Bey," a "nobleman," also the title of the head of a province, like the Bey of Tunis.

"Pasha" (English), "Pacha" (French), "Pascha" (German), a title of high rank, bestowed upon governors, military commanders, and personages in high favor with the Sultan.

"Mosque," literally, a "place of worship," corrupted from "mesjid." The Hindoo Mohammedans call it "musjid," as in "Jumma Musjid," which is the largest Mohammedan place of worship in India. Among the Mohammedans in Turkey, a Christian chapel is called "mesjid," it being smaller than a "jami," which corresponds to the regular Christian church, or cathedral, like the "Aya Sophia Jamisi," "the Church of St. Sophia," in Constantinople.

"Muezzin" or "Mueddin," the man who calls the faithful to prayer from a minaret. The prayer to which he calls is known as "ezan." The proper pronunciation of the "z" or "d" in these words is like "th" in this. In some districts and by all purists, it is so pronounced.

"Sejjadeh," literally, "a thing to pray upon," means a prayer-rug, which must be spread upon the ground before the faithful performs his "namaz" or devotion.

"Minaret," literally, a "place of light," or a "lighthouse." It is derived from "noor," "light." "Minar" is the word used by the Mohammedan Hindoos, as in "Kutb Minar," the most famous ancient minaret, a relic of a historic ruined city in India.

"Mollah," transliterated "moolah," or "mowlah"; in Arabic, "maula," a "learned man," a "holy man," derived from "welee," also meaning a "holy man."

"Sherif" or "Shareef," literally, "honored" or "exalted" man, a title given to certain of the descendants of Mohammed. The civil governor of Mecca is a sharif, as is the head of the government of Wazan, Arabia—the Sharif of Wazan. His first lawful wife is known as the Sharifa of Wazan. In recent years, a Sharifa of Wazan was an Englishwoman, nominally Mohammedanized. The children born of her were brought up as Moslems. Upon her husband's death, her eldest son became Sharif.

"Caliph," properly "Khalif," literally, "a successor" (of Mohammed). Caliphs first had their seat in Bagdad. The title is now vested in the Sultans of Turkey, by whom both the title and office have been usurped.

"Hegira," properly, "hijra," means "emigration," not "flight," as it is usually translated. The Arabic word for "emigrant" or "immigrant" is "moohajir," from which "Hegira" is derived. Mohammed's emigration from Mecca, his birthplace, to Medina, his place of bcrial, occurred September 13, A. D. 622. The first day of the Arabic era corresponds to July 16, A. D. 622, which was shortly previous to the "Hegira."

"Nabi," "prophet," like "Naby Moosa," "the Prophet Moses."

"Fakih," the title of one versed in Mohammedan jurisprudence.

"Mufti," one who renders "fetwa," a "decree" (according to Mohammedan law).

"Sheriat," literally, "law," corresponds to Mohammedan ecclesiastical law.

"Nizam" and "kanoon" are words applied to civil law.

"Cadi," an "interpreter" (of both the ecclesiastical and civil laws).

"Vali," "Governor," the head of a Turkish villayet, or state.

"Insan," "a human being," literally, a "social being," derived from "uns" and "unsiyet," "sociability."

"Resool," "apostle," literally, "one sent from," or "one sent forth," which corresponds, in its root-idea, to the Greek "apostolos." "Muhammed resool-Allah," "Mohammed is the prophet of God."

"Koods," "Kuds," "holiness," the Mohammedan's popular title for Jerusalem, the holy city.

"Medresseh," "a schoolhouse," literally, a place for "ders," or "lesson."

"Koran," properly, "Kuran," literally, "a reader" (of the Mohammedan holy book).

"Sura," literally, "a step," is the name applied to every one of the one hundred and fourteen chapters or sections of the Koran.

"Wady" or "wadi," the "channel of a river" (or valley, usually dry).

"Jabal" or "jebel," "mountain," like "Jabal Moosa," "the Mountain of Moses," Mt. Sinai, and "Jabal Tarik," the corrupted form of which is "Gibraltar," the mountain having been named for Tarik, the Arabian chief and navigator.

"Nahr," "a river."

"Bahr," "sea," as "Bahr Loot," the "Sea of Lot," the "Dead Sea," and "Bahr Jaleel," the "Sea of Galilee."

EXPLANATION OF ARABIC TITLES OF SHRINE OFFICERS

RABBAN—A title of honor originally given by the Jews to the patriarchs or presidents of the Sanhedrin. It was first applied to Gamaliel, who was patriarch in Palestine, about A. D. 30-50.

SCHERIF UL ULEMA—An Arabic title, meaning "the holy one of the sages." The word "scherif" is the German spelling or transliteration of "sherif"; "ul" is the definite article, and "ulema," "the sages," is the plural form of "alim."

KHAYZAN—Properly, "khazzan," "collector," from the Arabic root, "khazana," "to store," "to hoard." "Khazin" means "treasurer," "cashier."

KATIB—Properly, "kiatib," "recorder," from "kataba," "to record."

EMIR UL UMRA—Properly, "emir ul umera." Arabic words meaning "the lord of lords," "the ruler of rulers," or "the commander of commanders." "Emir" means "commander," of which the plural is "umera."

SULTAN SCHERIF—Properly "sultan-i-sherif," meaning "sovereign the holy."

NEKIB EL ASCHARIF—"Asharif," an Arabic title meaning "the superior of the nobles." "Nekib" is derived from "nikaba," "to be superior." "Asharif" is the plural form of "ashraf," which means "noble." Like "sherif," it is derived from "sharafa," "to be eminent in glory."

SCHERIF EL HARAM—Properly, "Sherif el Haram," meaning "the holy one," or the superior of the sacred area in Mecca.

SCHERIF EL KAABA—Properly, "Sherif el Kaaba," meaning "the superior of the Kaaba."

JALLAD—An Arabic word meaning "executioner." Strictly, it means "skinner," and is derived from "jild," "skin."

ABDALLAH—"The slave of Allah."

KHAWWAN—"Traitors," plural of "khain," a "traitor," derived from "khiyana," "to be treacherous."

MUKHABBIR—Correctly, "mukhabir," meaning "messenger." The word is derived from "khibra," "to learn."

AZRA—"Master of the wardrobe." An Arabic word derived from "izra," which means manner of wearing the veil, or "izar."

SABIYAH—"Sword-bearer," derived from an Arabic word meaning to turn the sword and put it into the scabbard.

EMIR EL HAJJI—Properly, "emir el hajj," meaning "the superior" or "commander of the pilgrimage."

SCHERIF EL ZEM ZEM—"The superior of the well of Zem Zem."

SCHERIF EL MUEZZIN—"The superior of the meuzzins."

SCHERIF AD DIYAFAT—"The superior of the banquet."

A FEW COMMON ENGLISH WORDS DERIVED FROM THE ARABIC

ASSASSIN—Corrupted from the Arabic, "Hashshashin," which is the plural form of "Hashshash." Literally, eaters or smokers of "hashish," or Indian hemp. An ancient, bloodthirsty sect, the members of which, after being selected to do murder, were intoxicated with hashish. The sect was first founded in Persia, about the year 1090 A. D., and subdued about 1272. In the time of the Crusades they mustered to the number of 50,000, and presented a formidable obstacle to the arms of the Christians. To this very day, any murderous rascal in Turkey is known as a "hashshash." Root-word, "hshsh." Triliteral, because "sh" represents one letter in Arabic. The Arabic root, in the majority of cases, is triliteral, that is, consisting of three letters, chiefly consonants. About ninety per cent of Arabic words have triliteral roots, some quadriliteral or four-lettered, others quinqueliteral, or five-lettered.

CARAFE—From the Arabic "ghiraf," a vessel. A glass water-bottle or decanter. Root "ghrf," quadriliteral.

CARAT—From the Arabic "qirat," the twenty-fourth part of an ounce. Root, "qrt."

CARBINE—From the Arabic "quarabina." In the sixteenth century, a firearm; in modern times, a short rifle. Root, "qrbn."

ALGEBRA—From the Arabic "al-jebr," "al," "the," and "jabara," "to consolidate." Root, "jbr."

CARAVAN—A word derived from the Arabic "kerwan." The same in Persian, Hindoo and Turkish. A company of travelers, pilgrims, or merchants, in many parts of Asia and Africa, who associate together that they may travel in greater security, especially through deserts, or regions infested by robbers. Nearly all commerce in these countries was formerly carried on by means of caravans, using camels chiefly for transportation.

CAMEL—"Jamal," or "jemel," in Arabic. Hebrew, "gamal"; Coptic, "gamul." The French, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, German, Danish, Swedish, Bulgarian, Servian, Hungarian, Latin and Greek words for camel are also derived from the Arabic "jamal." There are two distinct species of camels: The Arabian camel has one hump, and is a native of Arabia; the Bactrian camel has two humps, and is a native of Bactria, an ancient country in Central Asia. Root, "jml."

SHERBET—From the Arabic "sharaba," "to drink." A favorite cooling drink of the East, made of fruit juices diluted with water, and variously sweetened and flavored. It is cooled with snow when this can be procured. Root, "shrb."

SYRUP—From the same Arabic root as "sherbet." In anglicizing it, "sh" has become "s," and "b" has become "p."

DIVAN—An Arabic word which has been incorporated into the Turkish, Persian and several European languages. It signifies "a council of state"; specially, in Turkey, the chief or privy council of the Sublime Porte, presided over by the Grand Vizier, or Prime Minister, and made up of the ministers and heads of departments. The word also means a council-chamber and a cushioned seat, or a sofa standing against the wall of a room. Root, "dvn."

SHEIK—From the Arabic "shahka," "to grow old." In Arabia and other Mohammedan countries, "an old man," "an elder," "the head of a tribe or village," "a chief." Root, "shyk."

SHEKEL—From the Hebrew "shekel," and Arabic "thakal," meaning "to weigh." The chief silver coin of the Jews, first coined in 141 B. C., by Simon Maccabæus. In English slang, the word is used in its plural form, and means "coin" or "money." Arabic root "thkl." Hebrew root, "shkl." The Hebrew and Arabic languages are closely allied in their roots and grammatical construction.

MOROCCO—Derived from the name of the city of Marrakush, in the kingdom of Morocco, which latter, in Arabic, is "Maghrab," or "Occident." A Moor is a Maghrabee. The manufacture of morocco leather originated in that city; hence the name. Root, "ghrb," (triliteral, "gh" being one letter in Arabic).

DAMASK—A rich fabric, of coarse silk threads, woven in figures of many colors, so called from the city of Damascus, or "Dumushk," where the fabric was originally made. "Damascene blade," "damascene lace," and "damascene work," all owe their origin to the word Dumushk, the Arabic name of Damascus. Root, "dmshk."

CANDLE—From the Arabic "qandil." Root, "qndl."

CUT—From the Arabic "qata." Root, "qta."

TALISMAN—From the Arabic "tilsam," its plural form being "tilsaman." Synonymous with amulet, a charm consisting of a magical figure, cut or engraved on a piece of metal, or inscribed on a scrap of paper. It is supposed to exercise extraordinary influence over the bearer, especially in averting evil or sudden death. Root, "tlsm."

TARIFF—From the Arabic "tarif," derived from "arafa," to know. It literally means information, and is a list or table of duties or customs to be paid on goods imported or exported. Root, "arf."

ATTAR—Used in the phrase, "attar of roses." Derived from "atara," "to smell sweet." A volatile and highly fragrant oil, obtained from the petals of roses. Also written "otto," and "ottar." Root, "atr."

GAZELLE—From "ghazal," "wild goat." Root, "ghzl."

CALIPH—From "khalafa," "to succeed." "A successor," "a vicar." Root, "khlf," (triliteral).

SULTANA—From "saltana," "to rule." The ruler, or sovereign, of a Mohammedan state; especially, the ruler of the Turks; the Padishah, or Grand Seignor. Root, "slt."

MOSLEM—Strictly, Muslim. From "salama," "to submit to God," to resign one's self to the divine will. A true believer in the Mohammedan faith. Root, "slm."

MUSSULMAN—Derived from the same root as Moslem.

ALCOHOL—From "al-kuhl." "Al," "the," and "kuhl," the name of the powder of antimony used for painting the eyebrows. Root "khl." The name was afterwards applied, on account of the fineness of this powder, to highly rectified spirits, a signification unknown in Arabia. It is a European innovation and adaptation of the Arabic word.

ALCORAN—From "al," "the," and "coran," which is derived from "qaraa," "to read." The Mohammedan Scriptures.

AZIMUTH—An astronomical term derived from "as-sumut," which is the plural of "as-samt," "the direction." It signifies a point of the horizon, and a circle extending to it from the zenith.

GHOUL—From "ghul." Among Oriental nations, an imaginary evil being, supposed to feed upon human bodies. Root, "ghwl."

MINARET—From "manarat," "light-house." A slender, lofty tower attached to a mosque, and surrounded by one or more projecting balconies, from which the summons to prayer is cried by the muezzin. Root, "nar."

MOSQUE—From "masjid," "the place of worship." A Mohammedan chapel. "Masjid" is derived from "sajada," "to worship," "to adore."

CIPHER—From "safira," "to be empty." A character which, standing by itself, expresses nothing, but when placed at the right hand of a number, increases its value tenfold. Root, "sfr."

NABOB—From "nawab," plural of "naïb," a vicegerent. "A dignitary," "man of great wealth." Root, "nwb."

JAR—From "jarrah," "ewer." A deep, broad-mouthed vessel of earthenware or glass.

TAMARIND—From "tamar hindi," the Indian date. A leguminous tree, cultivated in tropical countries, for the sake of its shade and its acid fruit.

SUGAR—From "sukkar." Compare "sukkar" with "saccharine" and the connection between the English and Arabic words becomes more pronounced. The French, Italians, and Spaniards also derive their words for sugar from the Arabic "sukkar," or "assukkar," to which latter the definite article "as" ("al") is attached. The letter "l," in the definite article "el," or "al," sounds like t, th, d, r, z, s and sh, when it precedes words beginning with those consonants.

THE END

Truth is one;
And, in all lands beneath the sun,
Whoso hath eyes to see may see
The tokens of its unity.

John G. Whittier.
